The Latest Caprice of this Fashionable Flirt.

Gladys Deacon, Who Has Broken More Hearts Than Any Woman in Europe, Now Jilts the Baron de Charette.

THE most fascinating, bewildering, capricious beauty in the whole realm of fashionable society is certainly Miss Gladys Deacon.

Now she has added one more performance to the list of her social triumphs and escapades. No season ever passes without Miss Deacon amazing society at least once. Everybody remembers how she captivated the Crown Prince of Germany, brought the most eligible noblemen in England prostrate to her feet, worried the Duchess of Marlborough and nearly lost her own life in an extraordinary attempt to modify the shape of her lovely nose.

This time it is the Baron Antoine de Charette, of Paris, who assists Miss Gladys Deacon to surprise society. The Baron was intensely devoted to Miss Gladys, and everybody supposed that at last the happy man had been found. The Baron thought so, too, for he has announced his engagement with all due formality in Paris.

But now Miss Deacon declares that there has been a mistake.

"We were very good friends," she says, "but that is all, you know"

The view that society takes of the incident is that Miss Deacon has jilted the picturesque Baron.

The Baron de Charette is regarded as the most perfect ornament of the French aristocracy He comes from a remarkably picturesque and romantic family. They have occupied the same chateau in Brittany for 800 years. They are closely related to royalty For generation after generation they have always done something picturesque

The Baron's father, the General Baron de Charette, fought with remarkable bravery in the Franco-Prussian war, his efforts prolonging the contest after the Germans had captured the bulk of the French army

The great-grandfather of the young Baron Antoine de Charette was an even more picturesque character than his father He was the famous Francois Athanase de Charette, leader of the Vendean rebels in the French revolution.

To maintain the fighting reputation of his family the young Baron de Charette fought for the Boers during the recent South African war. Strange to say, his mother, an American, was the daughter of Bishop Polk, of Tennessee, who was killed in battle during the American Civil War. His ancestry simply bristles with blood and war.

Baron Antoine de Charette is handsome, stalwart and soldierly, an entirely different kind of French nobleman from Boni de Castellane and the Prince de Sagan, about whom we have heard so much lately. But in spite of the Baron's undeniable attractions, which would seem sufficient to win the most romantic girl, it appears that he has not won Miss Gladys Deacon.

No one who recalls the other interesting episodes in Miss Deacon's social career will be surprised to hear that she has jilted the Baron. Perhaps the first famous episode was that in which the Crown Prince of Germany was involved. The young Prince went to England, and there visited the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough, for whom the Emperor had a high regard. The Duchess, who was a devoted friend of Miss Deacon, invited her as one of a very select house party to meet the Prince.

The susceptible Prince fell desperately in love with the American beauty. He proposed to her, but explained that all the German law would permit him to offer was morganatic marriage She rejected this proposal contemptuously Then the Prince offered to give up his imperial rank and succession to the throne in order to become a commoner and marry her He gave her a ring that had been in his family for centuries as an earnest of his intentions

At this point the German Emperor heard what was going on and became terribly alarmed. He sent his Ambassador to London and all the great personages he knew in English society to implore Miss Deacon to give up his son. She took off the ring and threw it at the Ambassador, remarking:

"Take your old ring"

Then the Duke of Norfolk, the premier duke of England, whose ancestry goes back to the Crusades,

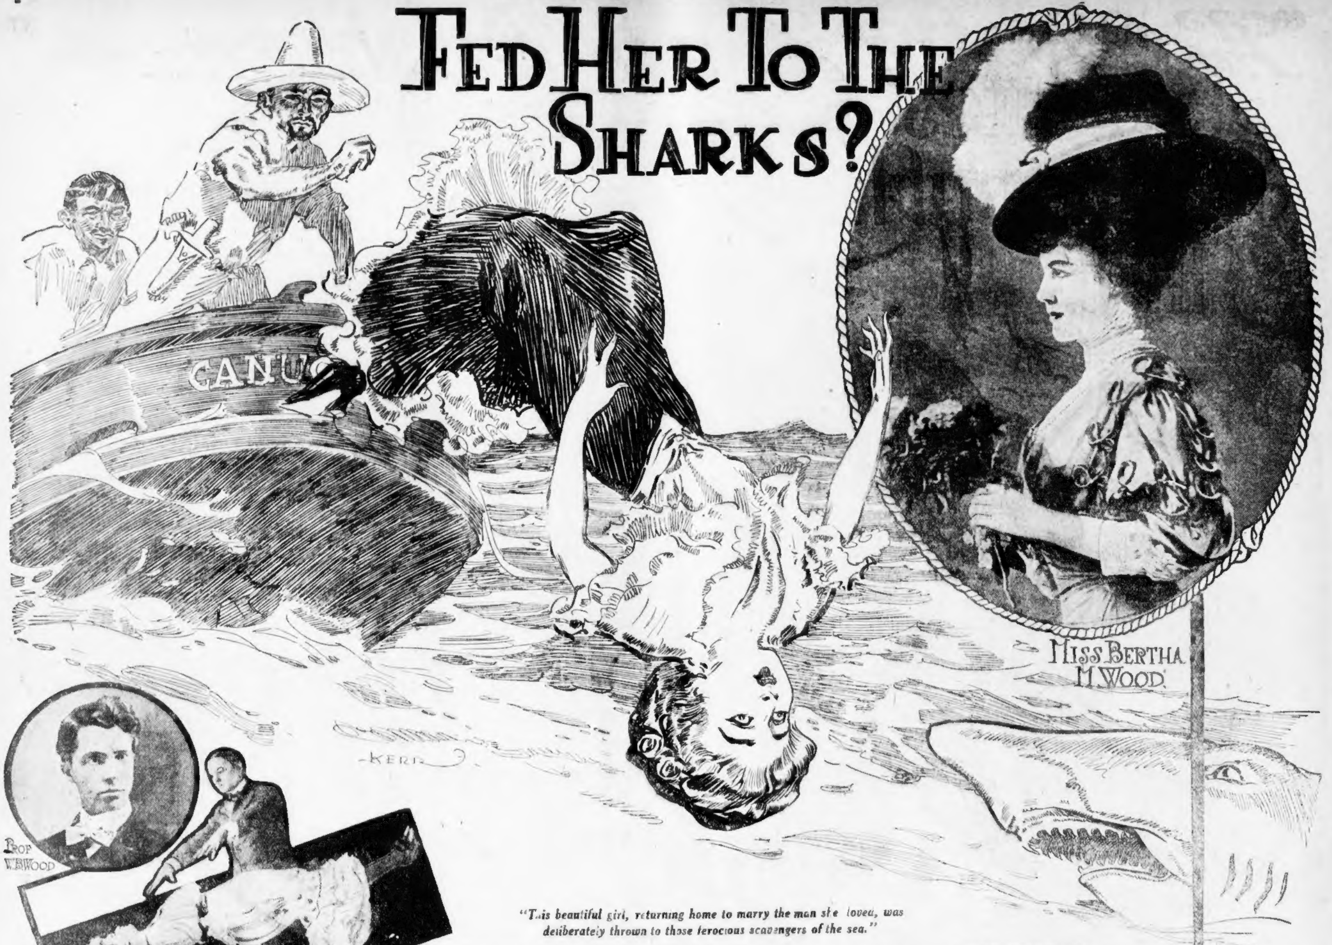
FED HER TO THE SHARKS?



MISS BERTHA M. WOOD

PROF W. B. WOOD

"This beautiful girl, returning home to marry the man she loved, was deliberately thrown to those ferocious scavengers of the sea."

PROF. WOOD'S "LEVITATION" ACT, IN WHICH MISS MERCEDES DELIGHTED PRESIDENT CASTRO, OF VENEZUELA.

Shocking Mystery of the Death of Bertha Mercedes Wood and Prof. Wood at the Hands of Mexican Robbers.

WHEN you see an expert magician on the stage appearing to defy and overcome all the forces of nature, he seems to you abundantly able to take care of himself in any part of the world, in any circumstances. He presents the illusion of being quite superior to most mortals.

Professor W. B. Wood, a magician who has puzzled and delighted audiences all over this country, Central and South America and the West Indies, created this impression. Yet there are reasons to believe that both Professor Wood and his beautiful daughter, Bertha Mercedes—who assisted him in his public feats of magic—have met the most shocking fate imaginable.

They are believed to have been abandoned to man-eating sharks in the Gulf of Mexico, after being robbed on shipboard of the cash proceeds of a profitable tour in South America, and of all their jewels and valuable baggage.

The tragedy has its romantic side, too, for Miss Mercedes was engaged to be married, and it is her heart-broken lover who is appealing to the United States Government to bring to justice the human fiends responsible for her shocking death, and probably that of her father also.

The intended husband of Miss Mercedes is Conrad Graeber, a millionaire banker of Shamokin, Pa., who was in the West Indies when he learned of the tragedy. He expected to meet the Professor and his daughter there and bring her home a bride.

For more than a year Professor Wood and his daughter, carrying their complicated stage equipment and helpers, had toured the larger cities of the West Indies, the Guianas, Venezuela and Bolivia.

They gave a good show, including the latest big illusion effects, in which Miss Mercedes was a charming figure as the lady whom the magician with his wand wafts through the air without visible means of support.

These up-to-date magician shows require many special stage fixtures and apparatus which have to be carried from one town to another. Professor Wood's baggage was worth at least $30,000.

The people of the West Indian and South American cities are very fond of display. Therefore, everything was first class. Miss Mercedes wore many charming costumes and much valuable jewelry.

While the show was in Venezuela Professor Wood was invited to give a performance in the palace of President Castro. It was really a "command," for the methods of Castro more resemble those of a monarch, or dictator, than the president of a Republic.

The tour thus far had been a great financial success. Now Professor Wood and his daughter put forth all their efforts to please the powerful Castro.

In a charming page's costume Miss Mercedes acted as her father's assistant. While he performed his minor feats of juggling she handed him the various articles he required, and then, with dexterity almost equal to his own, she joined in the features demanding two pairs of hands.

Her beauty and grace delighted President Castro and his guests. But there was better to come. Professor Wood had adapted to his own use, with interesting and skillful variations, the ceremonious suspension of a woman in midair while hypnotized.

In front of dark draperies drawn across the stage from left to right a plank was placed upon the backs of two chairs, forming a bridge about six feet long. Professor Wood led in his daughter, beautifully gowned, carrying a large bouquet. At his bidding she reclined upon her back on the plank bridge and placed the bouquet on her corsage.

With a few passes of his hands Professor Wood appeared to put his daughter into a hypnotic sleep. The audience was charmed. The professor walked all around the plank in front of the draperies, and passed his wand all about beneath it. Plainly, nothing but the chairs supported the plank and its fair burden.

Then, after more passes with his wand, Professor Wood drew one chair from under the plank. The audience saw the plank and the woman supported only at the head. Then the professor withdrew the other chair. A woman lying on a plank in midair unsupported!

More wonderful yet, at a wave of the professor's wand the woman on the plank soared upward or downward, or tilted this way and that.

The South American audience had not seen the trick exposed. They did not divine the presence of man and machinery back of the draperies working the iron bar out to grip the plank and support and manipulate it, for the big bouquet hid all signs of it from their view.

At the close of the performance President Castro presented to Miss Mercedes a rope of magnificent pearls. After this the tour was more profitable than ever.

From Venezuela Professor Wood took his show to Mexico. In February they were to return to the West Indies, sailing from Progreso. Hastings Clawson, of New York, general manager of the Wood tour, was in Progreso to meet the professor and his daughter on their arrival from Frontera, Mexico. They were announced to sail from Frontera on the schooner Nicholas. Manager Clawson tells of the first reports of disaster which reached him at Progreso.

"One morning I was awakened by the hotel proprietor.

"'Have you heard the news?' he cried. 'The Professor and his daughter are drowned.'

"I could hardly believe it. Through R. A. Williams, vice-consul at Progreso, I wired Robert S. Boyd, the American consular agent at Laguna. He answered:

"'Woods bodies not saved or washed ashore. Three of crew also drowned.'

"In a few days I heard that none of the crew had been drowned, but that nothing had been saved from the tug, Canuto Bulkes, which was towing her. There must be something wrong if all the crew escaped with ease and the two passengers alone drowned.

"When I took passage for New York a dispatch boat brought a message saying that the schooner, Nicholas, which the tug was towing, had turned up after the storm, and that all of Wood's baggage was on board.

"There is certainly much to be investigated about this tragedy, and we will not rest until the Government takes some action. I estimate the baggage which was on the schooner to be worth $30,000, but as yet we have been able to get no definite trace of it."

It was known to many in Frontera that Professor Wood distrusted the banks and carried more than $14,000 in English bank notes in his pockets. He also had $5,000 worth of diamonds, while Miss Mercedes had costly jewels, besides the pearls given to her by President Castro.

Little by little sinister features of the calamity began to appear. For some reason or other Professor Wood and his daughter had been transferred from the schooner, where their baggage was, to the old tug which was towing it.

They had upon their persons all their jewels and money, and the crew knew it. Right here two separate theories emerge from the vague reports received. The most blood-curdling one is that the crew of the tug had robbed their victims and then threw them overboard, after which they scuttled the tug to make it appear a case of foundering, and returned by small boats to the schooner.

That part of the Gulf of Mexico is infested with man-eating sharks. If this theory is the true one, then this beautiful girl, returning home to marry the man she loved, was deliberately thrown, alive or dead, to those ferocious scavengers of the sea—and probably her father met the same fate.

The other theory makes the victims' fate hardly less horrible. Manager Clawson inclines to this theory:

"When the storm came up, the crew persuaded the captain to abandon the tug, certain that it would founder, and leave the bodies of their victims to the sharks which infest those waters.

"I am sure Professor Wood never would have let the crew leave without his daughter. Miss Wood, a notoriously poor sailor, probably was sick in her berth. It is possible Wood rushed to save her when he saw the crew preparing to lower the lifeboat. I know that had he been on deck, and not put out of action, he would have shot down every man of the crew before letting them abandon his daughter.

"Will Wood was the best known man in South America. Miss Wood, a beautiful girl, had been helping her father for two years. When last they returned to their home in Shamokin, Pa., they brought back with them $60,000 in profits."

Mrs. W. B. Wood, the widow, is ill at her father's home at Newcastle, Pa., and is firmly convinced that her husband and daughter met foul play. She has given Manager Clawson sweeping power of attorney to act for her at Washington and in Mexico. The matter has also been taken up with the State Department by Eugene Wood, a brother of the magician, who resides in Shamokin, Pa.

In the meantime Banker Conrad Graeber, fiance of Miss Wood, is preparing to go to Mexico, whether the Government acts or not, to personally investigate the case and try and bring the murderers to justice.

The chief difficulty seems to be the present lack of proof that the tug did not founder in the storm, instead of being abandoned to destroy evidence of theft and murder. The captain and crew have yet to be questioned by such authority as can be expected to develop the truth.

became an humble suitor for Miss Gladys. The Duke is an admirable man, immensely rich, pious and philanthropic, but he is old and not at all ornamental. Miss Gladys disillusioned him as kindly as possible.

The Hon. Claude Lowther, known as the handsomest man in England, then became conspicuous as a suitor, but his hopes were brief. After him came Lord Francis Hope, who had just obtained his divorce from Miss May Yohe, but he received little consideration. The others are too numerous to mention.

Among the many causes of complaint which the lovely and unhappy Duchess of Marlborough had against her despicable husband was that he neglected and affronted her and sought the society of her friend Gladys Deacon. It was obvious to guests staying at Blenheim Palace that the Duke admired Miss Deacon, while he detested his charming wife. Certainly the fault was entirely that of the miserable Duke, but it adds much to the tragedy of the Duchess's married life that the friend for whom she had done so much should be associated in any way with her unhappiness.

The most bizarre incident in which Miss Deacon was concerned related to her nose. She is about 5 feet 8 inches tall and perfectly formed. Her hair is golden and waves naturally, while her eyebrows are dark. She has a pale but exquisite complexion, and her features are beautifully regular. It was said that the only point in which Miss Gladys failed to attain the absolute perfection of Greek beauty was her nose. There was just a trifle too much of a depression between her forehead and the bridge of her nose.

Miss Gladys pondered earnestly over this matter and then she heard of a Parisian surgeon who grows rich by making beautiful women's faces more beautiful. He agreed to fill out the depression by inserting a very little white paraffin wax under the skin. Somehow the operation went wrong. Miss Gladys's beautiful face and eyes became violently inflamed and for some time she lingered in a precarious condition, having to be kept in a dark room.

With great care she recovered, and now she is as beautiful as ever and perhaps more capable than ever of stealing the hearts of men.

When Your Best Girl's Papa Says 'No'—Wait.

THE young man whose hopes have been blighted by a stern parent's refusal to accept him as a son-in-law is apt to say things uncomplimentary about fathers in general. He declares that it is absurd for a father to have control of his daughter once she is grown up.

There he is wrong. If it were not for fathers having control of their daughters many rash young people would rush into marriage and misery. The stern father, the enemy of the young lover, is one of the pillars upholding the temple of happiness. But for him hundreds of foolish young people would be unhappily coupled for life.

When papa says "No," the young man should swallow his disappointment, and let time prove the strength of his love. Papa has control for so many years only. When she is of age, a girl can marry without the consent of her parents if she so wishes, although it is neither wise nor desirable to do so.

Some fathers are unreasonable. They wish a son-in-law to be a pattern of all the virtues. Sometimes they want him rich. They have their whims, have fathers. They are easily put out and readily take dislikes to young men—sometimes because the young men have parents they object to; sometimes because a man is not their ideal. They are as fanciful as girls themselves.

Then the young man, with his head full of crazy notions, his heart full of love for his adorable one, and her father's angry words ringing in his ears, makes up his mind to run off and get married. He easily persuades his fiancee, and they do it partly to please themselves and partly to outwit the stern parent, which generally means repentance.

The sensible thing to do is to wait. If the lady is eighteen, let the man wait till she is twenty-one. Then, if both consider that the parents' reasons for objecting to the engagement are absurd, they may marry on their own responsibility.

When two persons can wait three years for each other, there is reason to believe that the union will not be an unhappy one.

"The Meanest People In America"

—And how I Found them Out

By Dr. John W. Sill, the Philanthropist, Who Distributed All His Property to Friends and Is Now in a Poor House

"'Cousin Martha, I believe that you have an unselfish nature and a sympathetic heart. Therefore I now place in your hands the deed for my suburban house, which I give to you absolutely, my dear.'

"Cousin Martha could only weep over the venerable invalid's hand, He turned to the man.

"'Cousin William, you have always seemed to me a just and upright man, so the thought will comfort me as I go down to the grave that I gave you to the last of my earthly possessions—my apartment house.'"

"'Well, here I am, dear Cousin Martha. It was a mistake—my malady was not to kill me so soon. So I have come to accept your kind invitation.'

"'You should have given me notice,' said Cousin Martha, severely. 'I have guests. It is quite impossible for me to take you in.'

"When the old man came out of his daze of astonishment he was looking at the closed door of 'dear Cousin Martha's' house."

DR. JOHN W. SILL AND THE STATE PAUPER ASYLUM AT TEWKSBURY, MASS.

ONE year ago I was a comparatively rich man; now I am a pauper, and a State poor house is my only home.

But at the age of eighty-two years I have learned something which nothing but this downfall could teach me. I have discovered the true character of the persons to whom, when I believed I had only a few months to live, I gave freely all of my worldly goods—save only enough money to cover my expenses down to the grave.

I had always tried to be charitable, according to my means, and it pleased me while I yet lived to give my remaining property for charitable use, and to those nearest to me in whose humane instincts I had faith.

They accepted my gifts, overwhelming me with protestations of gratitude and assurances that they regarded them as a sacred trust while I lived.

When I found that I was mistaken in my diagnosis, and that instead of dying within six months I must continue to live indefinitely as a helpless old man, I turned confidently for a home to those whom I had so lately benefited.

It was then that I found them out. Their protestations and promises had been idle words. They had my property—they and no use for a pauper. I went direct to the only home open to me, the State pauper asylum.

No word from those whom I benefited come to me in the poorhouse. I feel I have not long to live, and if it is possible for them to enjoy life while I pass my last days in this place, I am willing that they should do so.

YOU'VE heard of such cases, perhaps known of them. They are not unfamiliar, for ingratitude is quite a common vice. King Lear, and countless other fathers, have lived to learn that "benefits forgot" should be the warning motto of the benevolent aged, who would put their trust in that false quantity, the gratitude of selfish youth.

You've known of such cases—but never, until now, of ingratitude so unspeakably mean and despicable as that which condemned to the poorhouse at eighty-two years old the philanthropist, Dr. John Wellesley Sill.

Less than a year ago venerable Dr. Sill was still a practising physician in Worcester, Mass., a celebrated specialist, a man of property, who had outlived wife and children, and whose charities made him beloved by everybody.

Born and educated a British subject, Dr. Sill had only slender ties of blood in this country—distant cousins, that is all, Cousin William and Cousin Martha, both on the sunny side of middle age, both recipients of his material benefits.

So when Dr. Sill sent word to his two cousins saying he was ill and wished to see them, they hurried to his home. The old man, looking feeble and broken, greeted them affectionately, from his invalid chair.

"Cousin Martha, this is kind of you," said the old man. "Cousin William, I am grateful for the trouble you have taken. You know that my race is nearly run and you two are all that are left to me that I can call kin."

Cousin Martha and Cousin William were sure that dear Cousin John would live many years yet to be a blessing to those in misfortune.

"Nay, you are wrong," said the old man, "that is why I asked you to come to me. You heard of my accident. My injuries appeared slight, but they have brought forth grave consequences. I have diagnosed my own case and cannot be deceived. I am now so old that it matters very little, and you must not feel shocked or unduly grieved when I inform you that I have barely six months longer to live, at the outside."

Of course, the cousins were both shocked and grieved. Cousin William could not credit the sad news. Cousin Martha hung about the old man's chair and shed tears. He was very grateful for their loving sympathy.

"My time being short," he said, "I must now inform you of my plans. You know that I have tried to be charitable during my long life. I have been blessed in being able to give aid and comfort to my fellow beings. But out of the accumulations of my long life of labor I still have a considerable amount of property and some money.

"I should say that I had this until recently, for on assuring myself that I had only a bare half year left to me on this earth, I at once deeded over the bulk of what I owned to various worthy institutions, remembering also certain individuals whose needs I was personally acquainted with.

"Out of what remains I have set aside enough to carry me comfortably through the remaining months of my life, and to provide for a suitable burial"——

Here the old man had to pause and comfort Cousin Martha, whose feelings had quite overcome her. Then, when she was calmer, he continued:

"Of more than I have set aside I shall never have any need—that my knowledge and skill in my profession assure me. Why, then, should my last days be disturbed in the making of a will to dispose of the two modest pieces of property which remain? No, I shall give them away. On the day of my death my earthly accounts shall balance. Beyond the grave I wish to be only an agreeable memory."

Even Cousin William found it difficult to control his emotion. Taking Cousin Martha's hand the old man went on:

"Now, Cousin Martha, I believe you to be a young woman of character and worth, who will use wisely and well whatever is placed in your hands. I believe that you have an unselfish nature and a sympathetic heart. Therefore I now place in your hands the deed for my little suburban house, which I give to you absolutely, my dear."

Cousin Martha could only weep over the venerable invalid's hand. He turned to the man.

"Cousin William, you have always seemed to me a just and upright man, so the thought will comfort me as I go down to the grave that I gave you the last of my earthly possessions—my apartment house."

Cousin William took the old man's other hand and said, in a voice choked with emotion:

"Cousin John, I believe, and pray, that the Lord will spare you to us for many years yet. Since you wish it I will accept your generous gift—but I will look upon it only as a sacred trust"——

"Oh, Cousin John," broke in Cousin Martha, "you are not going to die—not for many happy years to come. You will get well, and then you will come straight to me for a home and all the loving care a daughter could give."

"Yes," said Cousin William, "two homes will always be open to you. My place shall be that of a grateful and loving son."

It was a very affecting scene—and a most affecting parting when Cousin Martha and Cousin William went away carrying with them the deeds to all that remained of the old doctor's fortune, save only the cost of his living for the half year left to him on earth.

As the weeks passed by Cousin Martha and Cousin William called often and showered attentions upon their benefactor. Others whom he had befriended in a similar manner were solicitous for his comfort. But when five months of the allotted six had elapsed, and the old physician seemed a trifle heartier, if anything, these grateful persons began to look at each other significantly and lengthen the periods between their visits. All of them had made certain that Dr. Sill had retained only enough means to carry him through the half year.

The last week of the six months he spent in solitude, except for the single servant who waited upon him.

At length he had nothing but the amount laid by for his burial expenses. This small sum he would have died of starvation rather than touch. He was growing suspicious of the durability of men's gratitude.

Now a terrible fear worried him. Had his diagnosis of his own case proved inaccurate? Presently he was forced to this conclusion. His malady was not really mortal. He might live for many years yet. He was not to die now, but while he lived he would be a helpless invalid.

"After all," he reflected, "there are my dear cousins, William and Martha. Are they now eager to receive me into their homes and care for me with filial tenderness? Something has interfered with their customary visits. Patience for a few days longer."

But dear Cousins William and Martha didn't come. Neither did any other of the old man's beneficiaries. And he had no longer a bed to call his own, not a roof over his head, nor a crust of bread. With the aid of a stout stick he could walk a little—slowly and painfully. So he set out for the home of Cousin Martha, thanking heaven for his remembrance of her tearful promises to be a daughter to him.

It was a long and painful journey for the aged invalid. At last, bent with age and pale from his illness, he stood in Cousin Martha's doorstep. Finally he knocked. She came to the door. Her expression was not encouraging, but he spoke up cheerily:

"Well, here I am, dear Cousin Martha. It was a mistake—my malady was not to kill me so soon. So I have come to accept your kind invitation."

"You should have given me notice," said Cousin Martha, severely. "I have guests. It is quite impossible for me to take you in."

When the old man came out of his daze of astonishment he was looking at the closed door of "dear Cousin Martha's" house. For a moment he suffered anguish, then he reflected.

"Why, of course, I should have given her notice. She has guests. These matters mean so much to women. Well, well; I must march on to dear Cousin William's. Serves me quite right!"

Almost fainting with fatigue and pain, he reached the home of "Cousin William." Having knocked on the door he thought:

"Dear Cousin William! How gladly he will welcome me! How well I remember his emotion as he said that what I gave him would be regarded as a sacred trust while I lived."

After a while he knocked again. This time a maid, a very pert one, came to the door, which she opened an inch or so, and said:

"Everybody's away—out of town for a month."

Then she slammed the door in the old man's face.

Quite suddenly now his last illusion left him. There was no such thing as gratitude. "Cousin Martha" and "Cousin William" were like all the others whom he had benefited—they had no use for a pauper. Yes, he was a pauper! He had subscribed generously to pauper asylums, and now a pauper asylum was his own last resort!

Well he knew the Worcester Overseers of the Poor, who had received his contributions so cordially in times past. It was not far to go, and he managed to crawl thither. But he saw no official personage. He was herded with other paupers, put through the regular pauper programme, and in due time found himself with 2,200 other paupers in the State almshouse at Tewksbury, Mass.

Thus far no one has taken the least interest in him. The friends of other days—many of them beneficiaries at his hand—have forgotten him entirely. He is as dead to the world as if death had actually claimed him. It is one of the most pathetic cases that the officials of Tewksbury State Hospital have ever had to deal with, and that expresses a great deal, for every State charge under their care has a history in which a tragedy, great or small, has been enacted.

Dr. Sill is given the ordinary lodging and fare that fall to the inmates of Tewksbury. No special attention is paid to his case. When he entered the institution he was subjected to the usual physical examination, and after being pronounced in splendid condition for his age was assigned to the old men's ward, where he will pass the rest of his days, unless the people whom he has befriended come to his aid.

But now he has lost all faith in people. He believes every man and every woman who has ever received aid from him worships at the altar of money. He dismisses the subject and when interviewed talked only of his career.

"When I first came to America I practised in Montreal, where I remained for several years. Then I went to Oswego, N. Y., and later to Worcester. It was in Worcester that I was injured, about seven years ago. A fall on a slippery sidewalk put me out of commission. When the war broke out I joined the Fifteenth Massachusetts, and after the war was over, resumed my practice in Boston. After ten years I went to Worcester, and it was there I gave away all I possessed when I believed myself dying from injuries sustained by a fall.

"Of this amount I gave some to the Worcester Asylum and some to the Old Soldiers' Home on Long Island. As to the individuals who benefitted by my generosity I have nothing to say, than that those who know them better than I do have called them the meanest people in America.

"I feel that I have not long to live, and if it is possible for them to enjoy life while I pass my last days in this place, I am willing that they should do so."

Although the rules of the State Hospital at Tewksbury do not permit any discrimination, the officials of the institution feel for the old man, and will do all in their power to make his burden lighter while he remains under their care.

MURDER MYSTERY OF BEAUTY ACID AND BULLETS

"Yes, I Killed Mrs. Noyes; but I Had to!" Says Mr. McComas, Whose Eyes Are Nearly Burned Out of His Head By Vitriol--

And His Lawyers Are Trying to Prove That He Did Not Deliberately Burn Himself with Acid to Avoid a Murder Charge.

MRS. CHARLOTTE L. NOYES.

MRS. CHARLOTTE L. NOYES, a beautiful woman, still young, had a passion for gambling at the race track. She had a "system" by which she was sure she could "break" the bookmakers. She also had a friend—W. P. McComas, a handsome, shrewd man of the world—who tried to win her away from a "system" that would ruin a Rockefeller.

Now Mrs. Noyes is dead. Mr. McComas is in a hospital, his face all seared and scarred by sulphuric acid. He admits that he shot Mrs. Noyes after a quarrel over her ruinous race track "system," which had an acid-throwing climax.

Mrs. Noyes had a divorced husband, Charles M. Noyes, of Boston, who said, when he heard of the tragedy:

"I am somewhat surprised to hear that my wife was killed, but from my knowledge of her disposition and my experience with her during the eight years of our married life, I rather expected something of the sort would happen sooner or later."

Yet there is deep mystery in the case. There are questions which the authorities would like to have answered:

"Was McComas trying to save Mrs. Noyes from ruin at the race track? Or was he trying to break off their relations because she had lost heavily and had no more money?

"Did McComas defend himself with his revolver when Mrs. Noyes threw acid in his face? Or did he shoot her to death and then manufacture defence 'evidence' by burning himself with the acid?

"Did Mrs. Noyes follow up her acid-throwing with a revolver attack? Or did all the shots fired in her apartment come from McComas's weapon?"

The scene of this tragic mystery is Los Angeles, Cal.—the luxurious apartments of Mrs. Noyes in one of the choicest residence sections of the city. The race track flavor that hangs over it is not of the cheap and sordid kind, but of big bets, charming costumes, 60-horse power automobiles and expensive road house luncheons.

Both the man and the woman were well known and popular in the high-living, pleasure-loving element of the city. Mrs. Noyes was known to be the owner of considerable real estate, both in the West and in the East. Mr. McComas was a mining [illegible]gineer with a comfortable ino[illegible] [illegible]ystic Shriner and a w[illegible] [illegible]own.

Friends of the man and the woman knew of an intimacy between them extending over a period of four or five years, and which had begun in a meeting at the race track. Some knew that of late there had been serious differences and quarrels. Friends of McComas understood that not only her own but his ruin was threatened by her passion for betting at the race track.

To all his arguments intended to restrain her she answered that the "system" she was playing could not fail to enrich her, if persisted in; to abandon it was to say good-by to money already lost.

This "system" was the familiar one of adding to each amount staked the sum of previous losses. It is simple arithmetic to prove that one winning by this system would mean a net profit over and above all losses.

Vainly, it was said, McComas tried to convince Mrs. Noyes that an ordinary run of bad luck by this system would "break" even a Rockefeller. So, say McComas's friends, arose their quarrels.

Presently there was a sensation that startled the whole city.

Late in the evening, while an Eastern Star ball was in progress at the Hotel Pepper, McComas staggered into the ball room, his face and hands blistered by vitriol or some corrosive acid, and shouted:

"I have killed Mrs. Noyes. I want to give myself up, and I want a doctor."

The guests were in an uproar. Deputy Sheriff V. C. Casey, who was among the guests, arrested McComas, and as soon as he could be somewhat relieved of the pain from his acid wounds, took him back to Mrs. Noyes's apartments.

The woman was found lying dead on the floor of her dining room. Two bullet wounds showed in her breast. One of the bullets had pierced her heart.

"Yes, I did it," said McComas. "She made an attack on me with sulphuric acid. In self-defence I struggled with her. To frighten her I drew my revolver and fired a shot. She ran toward me with the acid in a cup and I fired again, and she fell at my feet."

"Why did you do this? What was the trouble between you?" asked Detective Ritch, who had been summoned to the apartment, and McComas answered:

"I have known her for five years. She has been bothering me. I could not stand it longer, and so put an end to it."

Right here, on the authority of McComas himself, entered the race track feature of the mystery. During the last few weeks he and Mrs. Noyes had spent each afternoon at the track. For a while they had won, but during the last two weeks their losses had exceeded $5,000.

The first report by the police was damaging to McComas. Officer Fred F. Hiatt said:

"It appears that Mrs. Noyes could not have thrown the acid. She was shot through the heart and death must have occurred instantly. From the distance between where the body lay and where McComas said he was standing, it would have been impossible for Mrs. Noyes to throw acid on McComas, with any direct aim. Yet McComas shows up burned about the hands and face. It appears that after the shooting McComas deliberately poured acid over himself to lend color to his story. No vessel which had contained acid was found in the apartments. McComas says she had the poison in a cup."

After being taken to the police station, where he was charged with murder, McComas was placed under guard in the Receiving Hospital for treatment. It was at first believed he would lose his sight, and one eye may yet be sacrificed.

Soon other details of the mystery began to develop. McComas employed lawyers and detectives, whose independent inspection of Mrs. Noyes's apartment brought to light evidence, they say, that the woman not only used sulphuric acid in her attack upon McComas, but a revolver, too.

Mrs. Noyes's apartment contained evidences of a terrible life and death struggle between the man and the woman—evidences which make it appear remarkable that only one tenant of the building suspected that anything unusual was going on, and even then was not sure whether three distinct reports were revolver shots or the slamming of a door.

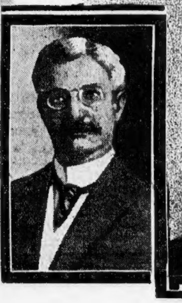
In three rooms of the apartment devastation was wrought. In the kitchen the upper part of a door was badly burned by acid. Great streaks on the woodwork showed where the chemical had struck the door between the kitchen and the bedroom. The door opening from the bedroom into the bathroom was also seared, shrivelling up the paint. Holes in a bathroom rug showed that acid had been spilled on the floor.

Lawyer Earl Rogers, counsel for McComas, believed from these indications that more than one cupful of acid had been used.

The police had declared that no acid had been found in Mrs. Noyes's apartment. McComas had stated that he threw the acid bottle away. But Lawyer Rogers tells how he found in the kitchen sink a cup with a quarter of an inch of sulphuric acid in it.

Bullet holes found in the woodwork indicated that the life and death struggle, while the deadly acid filled the air, brought the man and the woman from the kitchen out to the front stairway by way of bed room, bath room, dining room and parlor.

"Alma Mater,' the Columbia University Statue in New York, for Which Mrs. Noyes Posed.



W. P. McComas, the Acid-Burned Slayer.

Between the sheets of Mrs. Noyes's bed was found a fully loaded revolver of a calibre different from that used by McComas; also was found a box of cartridges of the same calibre. There were evidences that three shots had been fired, yet there were only two empty shells in McComas's weapon. But between these two empty shells were two loaded shells. Had McComas thoughtfully placed them there after the shooting, to make it appear that one shot had been fired by Mrs. Noyes from another weapon?

The bullet holes and the location of the dead body indicate that all the shots were fired in the hallway at the head of the stairs and at the point farthest from the kitchen.

There is no acid here, hence the theory most strongly adhered to by detectives is that Mrs. Noyes emptied the vessel containing acid in McComas's face and fled from this room, then through a bedroom, then across the parlor and finally into the hallway at the head of the stairs.

Here, the detectives reason from their failure to find acid stains either on the wall, floor or portieres between the parlor and hall, Mrs. Noyes turned around, at bay, and here McComas fired the first shot.

There is a bullet hole through the front door leading from the hall into an outside balcony. This bullet could have been fired from no room save the hall. There is the path of another bullet, the first sign being a groove on the window casing near the door referred to. It buried itself in the wall near by. This bullet also must have been fired from the hallway, and is supposed to be the one that struck Mrs. Noyes near the breast bone and deflected, merging from her left arm.

In further interpreting the physical evidence the developments indicated that Mrs. Noyes rushed upon McComas to wrest the weapon from him, probably after she was wounded, and was shot dead by him in the parlor.

While McComas professes not to know whether Mrs. Noyes shot at him, his attorneys have introduced this contention as a feature of the defence. The revolver belonging to the slain woman was found by the police and the cylinder was filled with unexploded cartridges.

The defence is obliged to explain the remarkable condition of McComas's revolver. This is not only the most peculiar but, perhaps, the pivotal point in the case.

McComas shot twice. His attorneys admit that. But the two exploded cartridges are not together; in fact, there are two unused cartridges between the two that were fired. In McComas's behalf this is explained upon the presumption that, like the gunfighting Westerner, he did not pull the trigger, but snapped the hammer of the revolver. Such manipulation, it is claimed, would have the effect of revolving the cylinder to produce the apparent contradiction noted.

McComas's attorneys will also attempt to show that one of the police detectives "fixed" Mrs. Noyes's revolver to make it appear she had not used it.

A detective to whom he went, and an intimate friend, tell how McComas, two or three weeks before the tragedy, determined to break with Mrs. Noyes. The break actually came on her refusal to stop her ruinous race track gambling—ruinous to them both.

Although he would no longer accompany her to the track, as formerly, he still called at her apartment. Finally, on the Friday morning preceding the shooting, he informed her over the telephone that he would call no more. What happened then McComas tells.

"She telephoned me about 6 o'clock last night, and begged me to come to see her. She said we ought not to break off like cheap people. We at least could have one last talk over everything and part good friends. I went to show her I could act right—like any other man would.

"I reached her apartments at about 11 in the evening. We sat in the dining room and talked for about an hour—going over our old differences. Mrs. Noyes became much excited. At length she jumped up to go to the kitchen for a glass of water, she said.

"Fearing that she might do herself an injury in her hysterical condition, I followed her. The moment I entered the kitchen she turned from the sink and dashed into my face acid from a cup. Then began the struggle which I have already described."

That the race track gambling craze of Mrs. Noyes led directly to the tragedy there is plenty of evidence to indicate. In her rooms were found account books showing credit and debit entries of all her bets for weeks back. The books showed that she was a loser to the extent of more than $3,000.

Investigation showed that while Mrs. Noyes seemed always supplied with spending money, furniture, rent and tradesmen's bills were unpaid. She had real estate, but could not obtain any considerable sums of cash.

The theory that McComas broke with Mrs. Noyes only when her money was exhausted, and for that reason, has some support from the testimony of a policeman who heard the pair quarrelling on the way home from the races one evening. Mrs. Noyes was demanding that McComas turn over to her money which she claimed and he was refusing to do it.

The professional standing and great popularity of McComas in Los Angeles incline to give him the benefit of doubt that his interest in Mrs. Noyes was sordid. His close friends argue that he, a handsome and popular man, was victim of her jealousy; that when she saw that their relations were at an end she threw the acid intending to so disfigure him that no other woman would be likely to succeed her in his affections.

Mrs. Noyes had lived in Los Angeles about eight years. Until recently she had enjoyed an enviable social position in the artistic and literary set. Wielders of the brush, especially, found her apartment an agreeable rendezvous.

As a girl in Newburyport, Mass., her beauty and her graceful figure caused her to be sought after as an artist's model. She was then Charlotte Lamprey, the daughter of a Newburyport carpenter. Her particular failing was uncontrollable temper—as her divorced husband has hinted.

Even after her marriage to Charles M. Noyes, she sometimes posed for painters and sculptors. She was the model for the female figure in B. C. French's statue, "Alma Mater of the Columbian University."

Does Your Hair Grow After Death?

To the Editor:

IN reference to an article published in your newspaper of February 16, "Does Hair Keep Growing After Death?" I would offer my observation during the Franco-Prussian War. I was at Sedan, then a pupil at a boarding school, in my teens, and not then given to the study of scientific problems, therefore unprejudiced and highly receptive for all the memorable events which crowded themselves upon my mind in those stirring days.

In the Spring following the great battle I had various applications from widows of fallen officers of my native city (Munich) beseeching me to be instrumental in securing permission from the authorities at Sedan for the exhumation and transportation to native soil of the bodies of their husbands who had fallen on Sedan's battlefield.

It was a task which involved considerable difficulty, a personal letter from Empress Augusta, of Prussia, and many steps not usually taken by so young a girl. The permit was finally obtained, seven months after the battle. Having learned to shrink from nothing after witnessing all the horrors of war and its aftermath, I consented to be present at the exhumation in order to be helpful in the identification of a certain captain, who, with three hundred others, was buried in a private park at Bazailles.

Trench after trench was opened that cold March morning, bringing to daylight their gruesome contents which had been committed to mother earth hastily and pell-mell, wrapped only in their cloaks, from ten to thirty in one ditch. I will not endeavor to describe the condition of the bodies, which the limy soil had wonderfully preserved, but will state that all present, the diggers, two body servants, a cure and myself, noticed and commented on a fuzzy, hair-like growth on faces and hands of those who in life had been blond. The hair, too, had grown longer, according to the statement of the two soldiers who had known them in life.

The matter was to be brought before Sedan's most eminent physician, but as my curiosity and love of adventure was followed by a long spell of nearly fatal illness, I never learned the result of such investigations.

"Yes, I am a 'Society Thief'"

Why I Robbed My Wealthy Hostess.

And the Secrets of Her Portfolio with the Concealed Panel.

THE "Society Thief" has been a favorite character for the novelist and the playwright, and from time to time the news reports in the papers reveal a missing necklace or brooch at a Fifth avenue function where none but the social elect were present. A few days ago the New York police captured a "society thief" in real life—Mrs. Jane Newman—who abused the hospitality of Mrs. Evelyn Bell and robbed her amiable hostess of at least $20,000 worth of jewels.

And the luckless Mrs. Bell is not the only one in the select social set in which both she and the polished and attractive Mrs. Newman have been accustomed to move who is still bemoaning the mysterious loss of a scarf pin at this function, a valuable ring at that, or a splendid brilliant at some other fashionable gathering.

"Mrs. Newman is so accustomed to good society," "Mrs. Newman has so much tact," "Mrs. Newman is so agreeable," "she is such an acquisition to any smart people," was the chorus that murmured round her in voices freighted soft with approbation.

But for a long time the police had been itching to get their hands on a certain intangible, elusive person they got to calling the "society thief." Where dinners were given the "society thief's" presence was ascertained by the absence of a sapphire ring, a ruby bracelet, or perchance a diamond cluster. Was there a house-party of the socially elect? Guests in undisguised distress often complained to their hostess that their jewels had disappeared mysteriously overnight. At teas or receptions, especially at "crushes," the trail of the "society thief" was perceptible in the loss of some valuable gem—the trail, but not the thief.

For three years these losses had continued. The police department was nonplussed. It was the definite complaint of Mrs. Evelyn Bell, the divorced wife of the famous millionaire, Louis V. Bell, which at last led to the detection of the will-o'-the-wisp culprit. Inspector McCafferty ordered Detectives Hyams and Hughes to leave no pebble unturned in their search for the offender. That is the reason that when convinced that Mrs. Bell's servants were guiltless they asked permission to search the apartment of her guest and "dear friend," Mrs. Newman. By a process of elimination it was found that whenever the thefts complained of happened there happened to have been somewhere about the sprightly Mrs. Newman also.

"Search Jeannette's apartment! How preposterous! Certainly not," her hostess answered. But Mrs. Newman laughingly and charmingly gave permission. She led them to the apartment herself and smilingly superintended the search. When Detective Hyams laid his hand upon the only article of furniture in the room that belonged to her she turned pale.

"There is nothing there but some letters," she deferentially protested. But Detective Hyam's eyes had fallen upon a panel at the side of the small leather portfolio. While he talked with Mrs. Bell's delightful guest his fingers passed back and forth over the panel. They pressed upon a yielding button at the end of the contrivance. The panel slipped back, when, lo and behold, there were disclosed a diamond horseshoe and pawn tickets for a jewelled chatelaine and other valuable things.

"We took her to Inspector McCafferty and she confessed to him that she had stolen the gems," said the detectives. "There were other articles she could not give a reasonable account of. She has been going with the 'toffs' for years. They know a lot about her. So do we now. She has two aliases—Janet Norton and Jane Newman."

The detectives in their rugged jargon characterize the woman as a "puling crook." When she was captured she began crying and telling of the son she was educating. But the police believe the son is a myth.

There is no doubt that the woman has good connections and has seen better days. She has quite an air about her. But the detectives claim that she is merely a polished hypocrite.

While she confessed only to the stealing of the articles casually found, Mrs. Bell has lost $20,000 worth of jewelry during the time she has known and entertained Mrs. Newman. "We have reason to think Mrs. Newman can account for it all," add the detectives.

"We have eight or nine letters from the owners of fine homes in New York saying that they have missed things while entertaining her, and asking us to put the third degree to our prisoner. One person complains of missing a $20,000 ring, which disappeared while he sat next to her at a dinner. The ring was an heirloom. He said it was rather loose for his finger and might have fallen from the napery upon a woman's lace gown. Mrs. Newman always wore lace gowns. They are good for her trade, because a jewel could stick to them, and she could explain that the lace had accidentally caught up the jewel.

The women has a very sanctimonious air. She assumes the manner of one who has been deeply injured by society and only took what was hers, anyway. She's a smooth person, but we have the 'society thief' at last."

MRS. JANE NEWMAN IN ONE OF HER FASHIONABLE COSTUMES.

MRS. LOUIS V. BELL, THE HOSTESS.

By Mrs. Jane Newman.

YES, I am a "Society Thief"—if you please to use that phrase, since I certainly am neither servant, dependant nor professional burglar. I was, it is true, on terms of social equality with my hostess. My indiscretions were, perhaps, a breach of hospitality and a violation of confidence.

But what of it?

I robbed my hostess, but what of it? Men of the highest social and financial standing steal from their friends in business. Every day we read of some combine or merger in which one Wall Street man has frozen out his dearest friend, or swallowed, that is assimilated, the interests of a relative, perhaps a brother.

The newspapers are full of the doings of "Society Thieves," who wreck banks and railroads in the daytime and preside at social functions in their Fifth avenue palaces at night.

While I am a confessed criminal and my photograph is in the Rogue's Gallery now, I am no worse than these greater and shrewder thieves who have thus far kept out of jail. "Do all you can, but keep out of jail," is their motto. Mine has been "Earn a living by taking from people what they do not need and may never miss." I have never robbed poor people of the necessities of life. I have merely taken the superfluities from the rich. In that I am no greater enemy of society than was Robin Hood.

Besides I am doing wrong that right may follow. I am using a bad means to bring about a good end. I have a son, who is sixteen years old, and whom I am educating in one of the best boys' schools in this country. He does not bear my name, and I shall not tell where he is nor how he is known. It is sufficient that he is the companion and dear friend of several millionaires' sons, and I would die rather than let him know that his mother is a thief.

Perhaps if the temptation had not been so strong and my need been so great I would never have fallen to this terrible depth. But women are careless of their jewels. They provoke servants and poor relations and friends who are "hard up," although they do not seem so, to theft by making the way so easy. They toss their gems about as they would scraps of paper. Women who are so careful of their money that they deserve to be called, as they are, below stairs, "tightwads," leave their rings lying on the dressers, toss their bracelets into open drawers and slip their diamond necklaces under their pillows.

My refinement and breeding have secured me entrance into the homes of a great many rich women. Women of that class are continuously bored. They grow tired of each other, and are constantly in search of new sensations. If a woman who is amiable and entertaining, and who knows their world, is introduced, however casually, these women make no attempt to learn who she is. It is sufficient that she is a novelty in their acquaintance and that she does not bore them.

Because I lived at fashionable boarding houses, dressed well and could talk about the topics that interested the smart set, beside adding a little piquancy of my own, I was taken up by the best people. I received cards to their dinners, telephone calls to their informal luncheons and became a favorite and practically lived by means of their house parties. They did not expect me to return these courtesies, because I had no town nor country house. They only wanted me to amuse them, and so I did.

Then came an end of my resources. At the same time came temptation. I tried to resist the tempter. I planned to slip away quietly, assume a new name and try to earn my living in a proper way. But the practical question, "How?" faced me. I had no training. I could not become a stenographer, for I had not the money to pay for a course of study, nor to support myself while I was taking that course. I could not support myself by sewing, for I was not strong enough to bear the confinement for long hours, and the nervous strain. I might have been a saleswoman, but I could barely live on my wages and there would be nothing left for my son. Turn whichever way I would I faced the fact that while I might earn a pittance sufficient for myself I could not support and educate my boy.

While I was nearly distracted by this thought the tempter whispered to me: "The diamond horseshoe your friend tossed into the drawer of her writing desk an hour ago. You remember it? She has gone to drive. The horseshoe is still there. She will never suspect you."

I hesitated. I went to the door of my hostess' morning room. I met her maid at the door, and turned back with some excuse. I returned to my room and waited until the maid had passed my door. Then I went back to the morning room. I drew out the drawer softly. The shining thing that lay between me and poverty glittered there invitingly.

I took it in my hand, and holding it up where the light might fall on it appraised it. It was worth $10,000. It would finish my boy's education.

My friend had $50,000 of jewels beside. She might cry about its loss for a day or two, then replace it and forget. It meant much to me; not much to her. I thrust the glittering thing into my bosom and sauntered out upon the grounds. When my hostess returned I met her at the curb and kissed her.

The next day, when she discovered her loss and wept, I comforted her. I myself suggested that she send for the police. She did so and I answered all their questions cheerfully. We agreed that the servants were above suspicion, but I pointed out the fact that it being Summer the windows were wide open. One might have entered or left the morning room from the veranda without being seen.

The detectives went away. My hostess cried a little more, waited a few days for a report from the detectives. There being none she took me with her to look at other diamond horseshoes. I helped her to select one larger and handsomer than the other.

A few weeks later the second temptation came. My hostess was giving a dinner. She had come in from the street and thrown off her street clothes. Her jewelled chatelaine she threw upon the divan. Almost mechanically I slipped a cushion over it, and as I watched her at her dressing, chatting about the dinner and the guests, I was thinking:

"The diamond horseshoe will pay for my boy's education, but what of me? I might try to earn my living respectably, but I am not strong."

I should grow pale and wretched looking as other women who sell their vitality for a livelihood do. I should grow pale and hollow-eyed, and fagged looking. I should not have enough vigor left to tell bright stories or make witty speeches. To earn your own living at an ordinary occupation is like being buried alive.

My argument was convincing to me. Pretending to adjust the silk ruffles of my petticoat, I slipped the chatelaine, aglitter with gems, beneath it, fastening the gold link handle by a safety pin.

That was the way it began. I deny that I have stolen from any one else. I deny that any one else is implicated. I have confessed my deed to the police, and have written a letter to my friend offering to restore the jewels and begging her to be merciful to me for my boy's sake.

She Was So Delightful at Society Teas.

Just Quietly Sequestering a Necklace.

Discovering the Secret Panel in Her Portfolio.

Don't Forget Little Acts of Affection.

MEN are proverbially undemonstrative, accepting friendship, gratitude, love as a matter of course and giving few outward signs of what they feel. But women—wives and mothers—also are careless in this same direction. They themselves do not realise it, but the fact remains that they are so engrossed with other matters that the days go by and no loving word or caress is bestowed on husband or children.

But it is a mistake not to make time for the loving word and smile, the gentle, thoughtful deed, the lingering touch and caress, the something that will show the love in our hearts. Never a day passes but each one of us is near someone who is starving—not for food, or wealth, or fame, but for love. Even the little children in our homes are hungering for the loving word and smile. If we can but take time to give these, they will be remembered long after our elaborate dinners, our stylish dresses, our spotless houses are forgotten.

Let us think the matter over carefully. Do we, because of overmuch sweeping and dusting in our homes, because of magnifying the importance of having each thing always in its proper place; and above all, of keeping the house nice for strangers to see—do we in any way lessen the joy for any of the dear ones in the home?

A SEVRES VASE DECORATED BY MORIN DATED 1768
KERR

"Queen Alexandra and the Dowager Czarina Were Especially Delighted With the Room Decorated With the Famous Series of Panels by Fragonard, for Which Mr. Morgan Paid $500,000. The August Visitors Bent Down and Examined Long and Intently These Masterpieces of Old French Art Which Represent Some Sentimental Incidents In the Life of Madame Du Barry. Again and Again the Queen and Empress Uttered Exclamations of Pleasure and Admiration."

J. PIERPONT MORGAN, American multi-millionaire, was able to spread before the eyes of the Queen of England and the Dowager Czarina of Russia, a wonderful fairyland of jewels and art treasures, which the wealth and power of King and Czar could not match. By special arrangement Her Majesty, of England, and Her Imperial Majesty, of Russia, paid a visit to Mr. Morgan's London residence last week to see such a priceless collection as no other individual on earth ever owned.

Of course Mr. Morgan was much flattered. With a new suit of clothes specially made for the great occasion Mr. Morgan modestly displayed his collection. Everything had been well dusted, polished and burnished and, indeed, a room had been especially constructed with carefully devised lights and colorings to display the exquisite Fragonard panels.

Mr. Morgan felt well repaid for his trouble; and the Dowager Emprêss of Russia in making her departure was amiable enough to remark: "This artistic treat has alone been enough to repay me for my long journey from Russia."

It was only the collection that Mr. Morgan keeps in his house in London that they saw. He has at least as large a collection and gallery in New York, and also a great number of pictures and objects of art in museums in various parts of the world and in storage, awaiting arrangements for installing them properly.

"The Queen and Empress undoubtedly saw the more costly part of the vast collection, on which he has spent more than $20,000,000. We are used to speaking glibly of vast sums in America, and perhaps it may need a little illustration to show what a remarkable amount that is to spend on art. When the British Government expends about $50,000 for an old master, as it did recently for a Venus by Velasquez, it makes a great fuss about the matter. Now the sum expended by Mr. Morgan would buy four hundred pictures of that value, and is actually larger than all the money spent by the British Government on pictures in a century.

So enormous have been Mr. Morgan's acquisitions that he has been assailed in several European parliaments, the members complaining that he was dennding their countries of art treasures.

When the Queen of Engand and her sister, the Dowager Empress of Russia, paid to visit Mr. Morgan's house they paid him an extraordinary honor. Sovereigns and their wives rarely visit the houses of any but great noblemen and very high dignitaries.

Mr. Morgan was waiting on the threshold of his house, Prince's Gate, Hyde Park, London, to receive his royal visitors. As it was afternoon and an informal occasion, he wore an ordinary frock coat. He was accompanied by Dr. Williamson, the miniature expert who compiles his catalogues and furnished explanations when needed on this occasion.

The visitors were atended by the usual court officials and also by a umber of Secret Service police.

It must have seemed like a sudden entrance into fairyland as the visitors passed into the interior of the house, which externally is large but severely plain.

"Oh, how wonderful," exclaimed the Queen as she entered the hall, in which the finest specimens of the Morgan collection of armor and his large statues are arranged with admirable skill.

[illegible] Czarina were especially delighted with the room decorated with the famous series of panels by Fragonard, for which Mr. Morgan paid $500,000. The august visitors bent down and examined long and closely these masterpieces of old French art which represent some sentiments [illegible] in the life of Madame du Barry. Again and again the Queen and Empress uttered exclamations of pleasure and admiration.

Fragonard, of course, [illegible] expresses in his paintings most perfectly the graceful, feminine and [illegible] atmosphere of the French Court in the eighteenth century. Strange to say, it was his custom to paint the portraits of prominent men and, especially, women into his scenes, and consequently they found themselves represented in situations that we of to-day would [illegible] highly embarrassing. If any painter of the present time were to follow Fragonard's methods some of our prominent society women would [illegible] comparatively [illegible] in his time.

DRESDEN PORCELAIN BUST OF CHILD.

The five Morgan panels have a particularly curious history. They were painted by Fragonard for the famous Madame du Barry, the favorite of Louis XV., who prepared the way for the revolution by her extravagance. Fragonard endeavored to paint the du Barry in the most interesting and daring [illegible] he could think of, together with her [illegible]. The original order was for four panels. One represented the beauty showing her lover with a garland of flowers. Another was called "The Rendezvous," another "The Confidence," and another "The Kiss."

Strange to say, the panels did not please the du Barry, not because they were too bold, but because they were too modest and reticent. She refused to accept them, and left poor Monsieur Fragonard out of pocket. Then the du Barry fell out of favor, and to revenge himself Fragonard painted another panel called "The Desertion," in which he represented her miserable and alone, abandoned by her royal lover. He kept them quietly at Grasse during the troubles of the revolution, and afterward sold them for a handsome price.

The Queen and Empress were also delighted with the two masterpieces of French sculpture, "The Given Kiss" and "The Bought Kiss," by Houdon, for which Mr. Morgan paid [illegible]. They are remarkable for the delicacy of feeling with which the sculptor has rendered the expression of a woman who gives a kiss to her lover and of one who accepts a kiss for mercenary reasons.

The royal visitors spent a considerable time examining the English masters of the eighteenth century, of which Mr. Morgan undoubtedly possesses the finest collection in the world. Among them are the now notorious picture of the Duchess of [illegible], which was stolen and lost for so long. A famous picture by Sir Joshua Reynolds is "Lady Betty Delme and Her Children," for which Mr. Morgan paid [illegible]. Among the many other pictures by Sir Joshua are "Cupid as a Link Boy," "Babes in the Wood" and "Mrs. Payne Galwey and Son." Romney is represented by "Lady Broughton" and "Mrs. Henrietta [illegible]." BROKEN! THE ONLY PERFECT GRECIAN NOSE IN CHICAGO.

How a Trolley Car Brake Shattered Bessie Andrus's Classic Nose, Which Was the Pride of Her Life and Worth $25,000.

The Plaintiff Claims Her Looks Have Depreciated $25,000, as Shown by This Picture

Dr. Bessie Andrus's Nose as it Is To-day. No Longer Grecian

The $25,000 Perfect Grecian Nose, as It Looked Before the Brake Handle Smashed It.

DR. BESSIE M. ANDRUS, of Chicago, was a beautiful young woman until the brake handle on [illegible] car hit her nose and broke it. When her nose was set and healed she was [illegible] as pretty as before, but [illegible].

More people stared at her [illegible] and sighed, and the number [illegible] who begged for an introduction [illegible]. Furthermore she has [illegible] of the trouble. But all this [illegible] satisfy the young woman, who says she [illegible] be happy again.

She [illegible] her features to twelve jurymen [illegible] pathetically asked them to look at her and explained how her features had, in her opinion, depreciated to the extent of $25,000. The twelve men did their duty [illegible] looked often and long. They were [illegible] and tried to believe her and [illegible] consciences no further than to award her $2,500, a bare ten per cent of her estimation of the damage.

This was bad enough, [illegible] a Chicago judge a few days ago, after listening to arguments of counsel for a new trial and making his own appraisal of the plaintiff's countenance, decided that said countenance couldn't have been more than $1,000 worth better before the accident.

Dr. Andrus has refused the trifling award of $1,000 and will [illegible] of the original $2,500, or [illegible] in the hopes of getting a judge and jury with a bigger appreciation of classic features.

The whole matter [illegible] people out of ten [illegible] Grecian nose when they see [illegible] the nose on Venus de Milo [illegible] the other famous statues [illegible] flesh and blood life there is some [illegible] to the classically [illegible] seems cold and severe, and the men [illegible] prefers to talk to the girl with a [illegible] chiseled in under her eyebrows, and even gets foolish about the tip-tilted [illegible] nose abhorred by sculptors.

[illegible] this, the lawyers for the street car company which hired the man, who [illegible] car, that had the brake, that broke the nose of Dr. Andrus put forward [illegible].

The lawyers for Dr. Andrus contended that [illegible] was nothing [illegible]. Why, [illegible] was full of pretty girls, prettiness was common, so common [illegible] it was almost vulgar. As long as their client had her beauty it was no consolation that she had been made pretty. In fact, she would rather prefer to be plain.

The [illegible] of a pretty [illegible] seemed sort of "unethical" for a doctor to be pretty, and they knew of no precedents, they said. Surely $25,000 was getting off easy for turning a living model of the Venus de Milo into [illegible] a very pretty [illegible]. But the jury couldn't see [illegible] judge couldn't see it, [illegible] Dr. M. C. Vaneventer, who [illegible] plaintiff sees it very [illegible] you have, what do you value it at?

The fact that there was a woman in the large city of Chicago with a perfect Grecian nose like that of the Venus de Milo has created quite a stir. Since then people have been studying their noses until now there are a number who claim they have perfect Grecian noses. And yet [illegible] are not the most attractive of their se[illegible].

It remained for a cranky brake on a street car to discover the Grecian nose which since has created such great excitement. Dr. Andrus was riding on a North avenue electric car on the evening of October [illegible], 1906, when a pesky brake handle [illegible] by the motorman. It flew [illegible] Dr. Andrus's Grecian nose [illegible]. She fainted and fell [illegible] the arms of the physician, whom she [illegible] engaged to and whom she will [illegible] in the Summer.

Here is exactly what happened to the young lady's nose:

It suffered a compound fracture of the [illegible] nasal bone and the flesh was torn [illegible].

When the nose was being put back into shape again there were seven subcutaneous stitches put in, and all the time Dr. Andrus endured the pain, having taken no anaesthetic.

Now the right side of the woman's nose bulges slightly, but can only be noticed by looking quite carefully.

This last defect robs the nose of its original distinctive quality—the absolutely Grecian.

Dr. Andrus's definition of a Grecian nose has been discussed pro and con, until every detail of a Grecian nose is known.

Here is her description of it:

A Grecian nose is one which has no [illegible] from a perfectly straight line between the end of the curve from the forehead and the tip. It is just like the one you see in statues and pictures of Venus de Milo.

Dr. Andrus claims her nose was like that before it was damaged. She says it was [illegible] and that the bridge was straight. She could not exactly explain the details, but said it was like other good noses [illegible] was more perfect. In [illegible] was just a nose. She says that no amount of money can repay her for the damage that has been done.

Her original suit was for $25,000, and she testified at the trial [illegible] the principal damage done [illegible] great discomfort [illegible] she [illegible] $500 [illegible] loss of [illegible]. She [illegible]. In addition to [illegible] perfectly [illegible] was [illegible].

[illegible] of the [illegible] on to [illegible].

The nose [illegible] bones were pressed back into place. Then [illegible] plaster was placed [illegible] crisscross fashion over the [illegible] nose, serving as a cast.

After this operation the nose was stitched with seven horse hairs, and, despite the feminine bewailing of Dr. Andrus, her nose seems beautiful and perfect as any girl's nose could be. No casual observer could notice a defect.

If Dr. Andrus's nose had not been injured she probably never would have met the man who is to be her husband. When she fainted on the car platform after being struck by the brake she was picked up by Dr. M. C. Vaneventer, a physician who has offices in the building where she is located. He took her to his office, administered restoratives while she was unconscious, and began treatment of the nose.

The nose improved from day to day, and so did the romance. The romance finally culminated when Dr. Vaneventer asked Dr. Andrus to become his wife, and in June the couple will be married, notwithstanding the fact that the woman's perfect Grecian nose has been marred.

D'Alessandro immediately declared [illegible] dence of the padrone system, and [illegible] ful and tireless managed to [illegible] saved and retain all his earnings for [illegible]. Others followed his example. He helped them cast off the yoke [illegible] speeches against the padrone evil, and [illegible] the nucleus of independent labor [illegible] became a united organization [illegible] D'Alessandro at its head.

The man who could successfully defy [illegible] became the [illegible] fellow laborers. [illegible] urged him forward [illegible] organization finally demanded [illegible] paying him well for [illegible] as their leader.

He [illegible] with knives or revolvers [illegible] that [illegible] padrone system to [illegible] the padrones carried weapons. Accordingly, the hod carriers and mortar mixers, street cleaners, fruit sellers, street [illegible], and, in fact, pretty nearly all Italians carried a knife or a revolver.

D'Alessandro never was armed. He pointed out the danger and folly of it, and when his trade became an organized body it adopted a rule imposing a fine of $5 on any member found carrying a large knife or a revolver in the city. If he was compelled to go out of the city to work, or to any place of possible attack, the rule was relaxed.

When any of D'Alessandro's companions went back to Italy for a visit, as they do in considerable numbers every year, it was natural that they should sing his praises. His efforts and his influence had the effect of putting more dollars in the pockets of every Italian laborer in America, while immensely improving their conditions [illegible].

So the name and fame of Domenico D'Alessandro became very familiar to the King and to his Ministers. D'Alessandro was [illegible] for [illegible] distinguished services for [illegible] in America, and should be rewarded.

D'Alessandro was one of the last of his organization to hear how honored and celebrated he was to become.

On the evening of March 9 there was a meeting of the Boston Italian Hod Carriers' Local Union, No. 209, at its headquarters. The hall was crowded and D'Alessandro was present. On the platform was Marquis [illegible] D. Bruno, the new Italian Consul at Boston. He requested D'Alessandro to join him there, which the latter did.

Thereupon the Consul, speaking as much to the breathless audience as to the unsuspecting D'Alessandro, read a letter from Tittoni, Minister of Foreign Affairs at Rome, stating that on account of his distinguished services on behalf of his countrymen the King had been pleased to create Signor D'Alessandro a Chevalier of the Order of the Crown of Italy.

The enthusiastic applause which greeted this announcement left D'Alessandro in quite a daze, but he speedily recovered on reading a letter addressed to himself, of which the following is a translation:

A Cure for "The Blues."

Science Finds It's a Wicked Germ Which Makes Us Feel Gloomy and Depressed and Suggests a Very Simple Remedy.

THEY have found [illegible] the [illegible] of the blues.

It is an old acquaintance [illegible] microbe. Every one of us knows now it goes in its abominable work, making us wretchedly unhappy often when there [illegible] no reason why we should not be [illegible] satisfied with life.

Are there not times in the experience of each one of us when we feel utterly melancholy without knowing why? Our health is good. There are still a few dollars in the purse. We have plenty of friends. No danger seems to impend. But all of life is overspread with gloom [illegible]. We excuse ourselves by saying [illegible] attack of the blues.

The blues, [illegible] long suspected [illegible] able way, now we know [illegible]. We know because the special germ that causes the malady has been isolated and identified.

Its name is Bacillus proteus and it lives in the large intestine of the human body. Sometimes it is found elsewhere, but [illegible] its particular home.

This abominable microbe [illegible] understood, is a poison maker. And the effect of the peculiar poison it produces is to engender melancholy and disgust with life. The poison finds its way into the blood, [illegible] this means carried to all parts of the body and attacks the sympathetic nervous system. It is specifically a nervous depressant.

The Bacillus proteus is to be found at all times in the [illegible] that portion of the human body [illegible] erwise [illegible] It seems to do no [illegible] something go wrong [illegible] say, which affects [illegible] digestive apparatus—and [illegible] chievous.

Then, the first [illegible] the blues. The poison [illegible] of the disreputable microbe pervades our system, and for the time being life is hardly worth living. Everything presents itself to your mind in an unwholesome aspect. Your whole perspective is disarranged, you exhibit an irritability not at all characteristic of you in normal moments and [illegible] help feeling [illegible] companionship [illegible] and friends.

So long as [illegible] is difficult to fight [illegible] time we have [illegible] against the Bacillus [illegible] did not possess any [illegible]. Now [illegible] different.

Having [illegible] are [illegible] caused by a [illegible] ready isolated and [illegible] with a plug of [illegible] inside [illegible] comparatively [illegible] And [illegible] destroy [illegible] compared [illegible] animal [illegible] confined [illegible] subject [illegible] ation. [illegible] its protests [illegible] easier [illegible] easily [illegible] upon it.

For [illegible] ture of several [illegible] pared, some of [illegible] to render [illegible] thing and [illegible] put into a [illegible] few of the [illegible] er, and the [illegible] plug to prevent [illegible] kinds from getting [illegible] these circumstances the Bacillus proteus will rapidly multiply [illegible] numbers which run up into the billions.

Into a series of [illegible] each of them containing a thriving colony of the microbes, it is an easy matter to introduce different kinds of poisons. They are not necessarily what you or I would call poisons. Oh, dear, no. It is merely a question of finding something [illegible] to the life of this particular germ. The most deadly agent in its case seems to be sour milk.

Sour milk! Doesn't [illegible] seem odd? But the fact is that sour milk contains lactic acid. It is lactic acid that makes [illegible] sour—which is death to the Bacillus proteus. When [illegible] is exposed to an [illegible] which are afloat everywhere in the atmosphere get into the fluid, multiply at a great rate, and [illegible] produce [illegible] kind of germ [illegible] a poison [illegible] kind.

[illegible] Nothing more or less than [illegible] best [illegible] for [illegible] statement is backed by the highest medical authority. [illegible] wholesale [illegible] They [illegible] its presence [illegible]

RULES FOR OUR HOUSEHOLD—BY EUSTACE H. MILES, THE FAMOUS COURT-TENNIS CHAMPION, AND HIS WIFE.

MR. EUSTACE H. MILES.

By Eustace H. Miles.

HAVING recently married, I am learning daily how I ought not to have regulated my household. Enjoying greater comfort and eating more food than I used to as a bachelor, I find the expenses of my flat reduced by more than half. It is natural, then, that I should say a word on that important factor in the home—the woman.

The woman should relieve the man, and take away from him most of the domestic mechanism. She should also guide him by her wonderful instinct, and keep him from acting rashly or not acting at all. It follows that a man should confide in the woman, and consult her; he would [illegible] by telling her of his troubles [illegible] he is worrying her far less than he would by hiding these things from her. He must not be afraid of lowering himself in her eyes by confessing that he is in some trouble; she will like him more, and help him more, if he trusts her.

I wish that boys were taught how to regard women—at first their mother, then other women; this would lead to less secretiveness and fewer disasters.

But if the woman is going to be merely a [illegible], she is not wanted in the household.

The man, on his side, should relieve the woman of some of the domestic work, even if he only prepares the salads or winds the clocks.

But [illegible] the woman should [illegible] servants what the servants are paid to do for the master and mistress. The mistress should be able to perform every single detail of household work herself. But if she is constantly depriving the servants of their duties (which are part of their daily moral food), she is a bad mistress. The successful managers are those who can do the work for themselves, but delegate it to others whom they supervise.

The servants are not to be bullied and driven too hard in their work. They are not to be spoken to rudely and angrily. The authority of managers ultimately depends not on terrorism, but on justice. It has been our plan to select as our servants—or, we should prefer to say, as our fellow workers—those who like to know the reasons of things, and who will work because they like the work and trust us. Reluctant servants are no good to us. We want servants who will love their work and think about it and make useful suggestions.

Without pampering servants, we try to arrange for their health. For instance, in the evenings we send them out to buy vegetables and get a walk and a breath of air. We tell them a little about food, and gradually we find them taking to our diet by choice. In the well regulated house the kitchen should be the best lighted and the best ventilated room. This care for servants is, obviously, good policy as well as sheer duty. It does not interfere, we find, with implicit obedience.

When our servants see us "playing the game" in our dealings with them they learn to do the same in their dealings with us, or else they have to go.

But it is rather about the food and health of the household that I write.

As to the food, a knowledge of food values, of food preparation and cookery, of food preservation, is absolutely essential to success. The head of the household and the servants must know what builds up and feeds the body, how this should be prepared and supplemented with a view to attractive taste and digestibility, how the foods and their remains should be kept and utilized.

For example, every one in the house should realize what can be done with a lettuce, how, after it is cleaned, the inside can be used in a salad, the next layers can be cooked as a vegetable, and the outside layers put in the stock pot. At the same time, every one should realize that the lettuce is poor in body-building elements, and that, however refreshing and cleansing, it is not a sustaining food. Every one should realize what additions—any grated cheese or bean and parsley sandwiches—will make a well-balanced meal.

Besides, there should be [illegible] preparing such simple drinks as barley-water and lemonade.

As to health, why are there not more clear rooms for exercise and play? The need of open windows, of baths, and "sanitation" has always been insisted on. But the need of clear space for free movement has not. Instead, rooms are choked up with flimsy "ornaments," and healthy action is only carried on at the risk of demolishing these. The piano is a necessity; the table crammed with all sorts of things to be dusted every morning is neither a necessity nor a luxury—it is a handicap pure and simple.

Games in the home are not waste of time. They feed a much-starved part of our nature. Therefore, we must have space for games, or at least for exercises. I believe that if the walls had more shelves, we should have twice the amount of floor space to exercise in. In how many rooms can one now move quickly about without havoc?

These are the main points that occur to me, excluding the most commonplace rules which appear in every book on household management.

By Mrs. Hallie Eustace Miles.

THE word "Home" is essentially an English one. No other language has such a comprehensive word.

It means—or ought to mean—the place where one can be most happy, most at one's ease, where the worries and troubles of life are easiest to [illegible], the place to which all look forward as "the haven where they would be." When we speak of being "at home" with a person or "at home" in a house, it means that we are feeling quite at our ease with them and quite comfortable.

"Home" has nothing to do with wealth, or rank, or locality. It [illegible] with the individuality [illegible] and [illegible] of those who live in the house.

By the very arrangement of the rooms, the furniture, the flowers, the pictures, by the manner of the servants, by the way the meals are served, [illegible], by the habits of the household, by the indescribable everything, one can tell the character and personality of those in control.

The whole work of the household depends largely on the magnetism, so to speak, of those who are over the household. If there is no master mind directing the unseen details, there is, to that extent, disorganization and waste "below stairs." The heads should have such a personal influence over the staff that even if they are unable to look individually into the various items of the management, yet the servants feel the presence of their master and mistress with them all the day, making it impossible for them to infringe the rules of the house.

Nowadays, when economy is becoming a science, it is no longer thought "mean" to save in all the little things, which in the end lead to the big things.

The servants should be taken into our confidence; they should be told the reason of everything—for instance, the reason why there is hardly anything that need be thrown away.

If the dustbins of some households were examined what revelations they would contain. Some poor families could be kept on what is thrown there. I have often seen half loaves of bread and many other proofs of waste among ashes and refuse.

My husband teaches what can be done with even the outside leaves and tops of vegetables. The "new cookery" shows us how to avoid wasting the odds and ends that now disappear into the dustbin and fire.

But this must be wisely explained. Employes are so often told to do or not to do such and such things, but are not told the reason why.

If our servants are in understanding sympathy with our household schemes it affects the whole atmosphere of the home. When we are away they then represent us faithfully.

There should be a spirit of comradeship right through a household, all members working for one cause, the cause of health, economy and kindness; and these three words spell Home, Happiness and Success.

Of course, every house must have its worries, troubles, and anxieties, and—alas! its bills. But these things should be kept as much in the background as possible. When the husband comes back from a hard day's work, he should not be immediately greeted with the home petty troubles. We all know that, if a disturbing subject is spoken of while we are eating, our food seems to do us no good. It becomes like a hard lump which cannot be swallowed. That lump is the worry.

Then, our rooms should only speak of peace and rest. The appearance of a room can produce restful feelings. I think that there should be certain favorite rooms in every house, in which we do not talk over troubles and anxieties, for the actual air gets laden with our thoughts, and we can raise or lower the mental atmosphere by the thoughts we think. I believe that if two people in a house persistently refused to worry, it would affect the whole mental atmosphere of the home.

One of the songs that will live for ever is "Home, Sweet Home." It is the "touch of nature" that "makes the whole world kin." It is sung and felt in the cottage and the palace, and is a note that reaches the sailors at sea and the soldiers in foreign lands. The memories of home last as long as life lasts.

If the spirit of order, sympathy and kindness rules every household—then each home can become a "Home, Sweet Home."

The sad story of MY FATHER'S GREAT SUFFERING FROM CANCER

Read the following and be convinced

WE CAN CURE YOU.

Forty-five years ago my father who was himself a doctor, had a vicious cancer that was eating away his life. The best physicians in America could do nothing for him. After long years of awful suffering and after the cancer had totally eaten away his nose and portions of his face (as shown in his picture here given) his palate was entirely destroyed together with portions of his throat. Father fortunately discovered the great remedy that cured him. This was over forty years ago, and he has never suffered a day since.

This same discovery has now cured thousands who were threatened with operation and death. And to prove that this is the truth we will give their sworn statement if you will write us. Doctors, Lawyers, Mechanics, Ministers, Laboring Men, Bankers and all classes recommend this glorious life-saving discovery, and we want the whole world to benefit by it.

HAVE YOU CANCER, Tumors, Ulcers, Abscesses, Fever Sores, Goitre, Catarrh, Salt-Rheum, Rheumatism, Piles, Eczema, Scald Head or Scrofula in any form.

We positively guarantee our statements true, perfect satisfaction and honest service, or money refunded.

It will cost you nothing to learn the truth about this wonderful home treatment without the knife or caustic. And if you know anyone who is afflicted with any disease above mentioned, you can do them a Christian act of kindness by sending in their addresses so we can write them how easily they can be cured in their own home. This is no idle talk, we mean just what we say. We have cured others, and can cure you. Forty years experience guarantee success. Write us today; delay is dangerous. Illustrated Booklet FREE.

NO MORE WRINKLES

New Discovery Makes Beauty in a Night.

After beauty doctors, facial massage and cold creams had failed, I took out my own wrinkles by a simple home treatment of my own discovery which brought back my beauty and the freshness of youth. Doctors say: "It is the only treatment in the world that will actually remove wrinkles and make old faces look young and beautiful." Many of my friends look twenty years younger since trying my treatment. I will send further particulars to any one interested in my discovery, absolutely free. $200 FOR THE FASHIONABLE NEW COIFFURE!

THERE is no doubt about it, the Spring has [illegible] accessories to the [illegible] coiffures.

With hats growing smaller and smaller and the element of puffs and braids and curls growing larger and larger, the importance of hats as part, now only a part of the head dress, rapidly diminishes.

The question naturally suggests itself, When will fashionability take to wigs?

That it is a not remote possibility will be conceded by any one who gives this important matter a few minutes' thought.

Already there is little hair "grown on the premises" to be seen in the average woman's coiffure. The puffs are "extra hair"—you must no longer say "false"—the heavy braid [illegible] will cost [illegible] spend the night on [illegible] dressing table. When anywhere from five to two hundred dollars' worth of hair is worn on a woman's long-suffering head, is placed and [illegible] pinned, arranged and rearranged several times a day, is it quite within the bounds of possibility to believe that she will grow tired of this long before the fashion of elaborate coiffures wanes?

It would be so much easier to have the business done say once a week [illegible] would be all the hair dressing a wig would require. And as for deceiving people, who on earth is guileless enough to believe that women actually grow the masses of hair [illegible] into their heads.

Oh, yes, it wouldn't be at all surprising to find wigs become suddenly the fashion [illegible]

The Secrets of Fine Laundering.

AS the Frenchwoman uses more fragile and more daintily trimmed underwear than do her sisters in other countries, French laundering has come to be recognized as the highest point reached by that useful art.

A typical laundry in any large French city at once reveals to the visitor the secrets of the fine results they produce.

Whenever possible, clothes are dried in the open air. Each woman has sole charge of a certain number of lots—about five families, that is, she has her regular customers week by week, so that it is to her own interest to do her best, since if there is fault found it would be she alone who would be blamed. Likewise with those who iron and polish. Ordinarily the washer and ironer of certain lots work in conjunction, sharing the profits or commissions. These depend, too, upon the amount of the work, as well as the quality of the work done.

Everything first passes through the hands of the sorters and checkers, who enter the number of pieces under the heading of certain letters, which letters are also given to the women who take charge of the work. Thus one worker might have letters A, O, Z, K, V, at each letter representing a different family. Sometimes small letters, or small letters with figures attached, are used.

As she receives the washing each worker sorts it again, putting such things as flannels and woollen goods aside, whilst bed and body linen are kept separate. Daintily trimmed articles and laces are also placed by themselves, as also are colored articles. Each worker has three tubs, which are kept scrupulously clean, and although bed and body linen are washed together, all table linen is washed separately.

All white garments are carefully steeped twelve hours before washing in clear, cold water. Soap or soda are not used, as it is held that soap, if put in with white things, turns the linen a bad color, while soda is much worse. Dirty towels are, however, steeped in soapy water, and all stained portions well rubbed beforehand.

Such things as window curtains are well shaken before being steeped, to get rid of the dust.

All articles which have been steeped are now placed in clear, lukewarm water and rinsed again to loosen the dirt. No soap is used, and the water is only just warm.

Soap is now rubbed over the wet garments, and they are plunged into hot water and rubbed carefully by hand, no boards being used.

The articles are now wrung out and rinsed in warm water several times, a great deal of trouble being expended over this portion of labor. Each article is rinsed until the water in the last stage is quite clear.

A copper or boiling tank is used by every five women, but, in order to avoid confusion, each woman puts her articles in a bag numbered with her [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] into large trays half full of tepid water [illegible] several times, and finally given a rinsing in cold water.

Bluing is a very important process [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] with [illegible] [illegible] they are taken indoors and specially treated.

Change Those Restless, Sleepless Nights Into Nights of Peaceful Slumber

Are you more tired in the morning than when you go to bed the night before? During the night do you toss and twist and turn—then doze off for a few restless moments, only to wake up again with a sudden start? Dangerous symptoms—these! Insomnia is robbing you of the nerve-refreshing rest so vital to a perfect physical condition. Without abundant peaceful sleep you cannot retain health and strength. There is speedy and pleasant relief to be found in

[illegible]

It combines all the food values—all the energy, vigor and force-building elements of barley MALT with the bracing, soothing and nerve-toning effects of choicest HOPS. The lupulin properties of the HOPS not only calm, but tone up the nervous system, inducing peaceful and refreshing slumber. Then the barley MALT takes up its work. The nourishment offered in this predigested form, being easily assimilated by the blood, revitalizes the nerves and rebuilds the debilitated system. Thus a speedy return to perfect health is assured.

Pabst Extract The Best Tonic being a predigested liquid food, is welcomed by the weakest stomach. It relieves insomnia, conquers dyspepsia, strengthens the weak, builds up the over-worked, helps the anaemic, feeds the nerves, assists nursing mothers and invigorates old age.

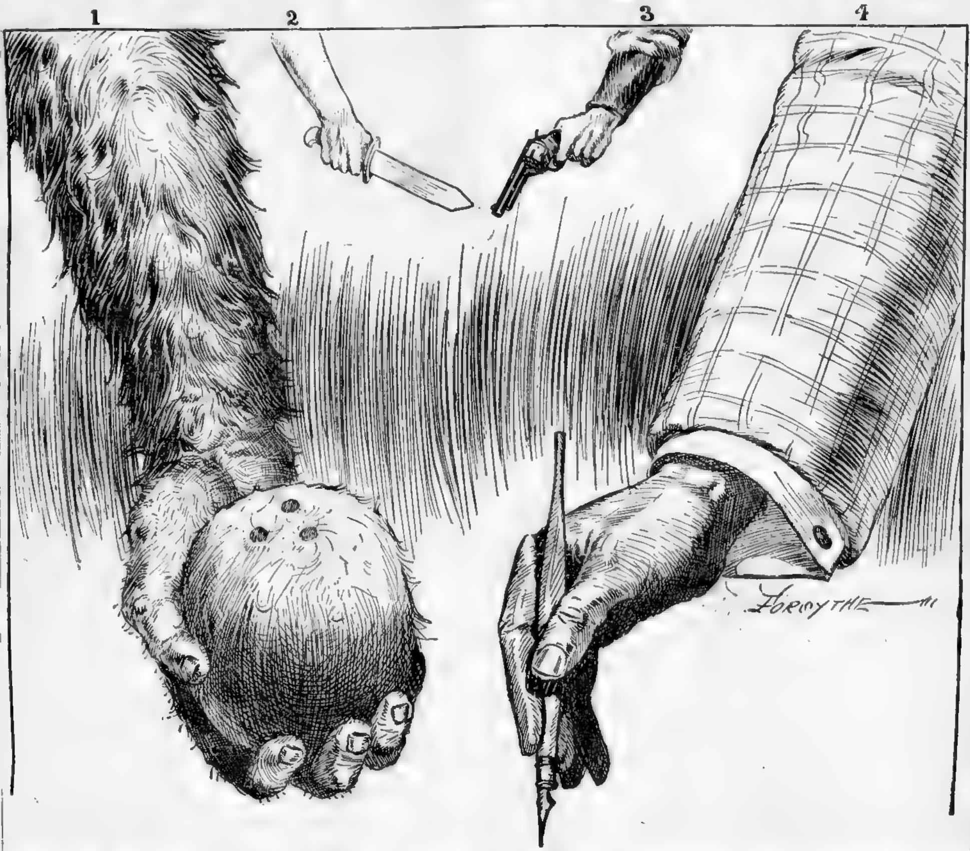
THE RULE OF THE WORLD



From the Monkey Throwing a Cocoanut to the Man Handling a Pen, Progress Has Been Slow. It Is Slow Now

HERE'S a picture of gradual change in the world's governing power.

The beginning of government was a fight, claw to claw and tooth to tooth. Among the animals, government consisted in seizing a weaker animal and killing it.

What we call government means the ability of one more or less developed brain to govern other brains and beings without coming physically in contact with them.

The first government at a distance, probably, was a monkey on a tree throwing a cocoanut at the animal sitting down below, unable to climb. The monkey wasn't strong enough to fight with his teeth, and he hadn't any claws. But he could throw a cocoanut. That is a good deal the picture of government to-day. The man above with the advantage of position throws things at the man down below.

The picture on this page calls your attention to the gradual change in the instruments of power or control. The hairy arm with the cocoanut, the more highly developed hand with the pen, and the other instruments in between—dagger, revolver and so on—have been parts of the gradual development of mankind.

First, notice that each forward step in governing, in fighting, in controlling, has meant a forward step IN THINKING.

The tiger with his teeth and claws dashed at the swamp buffalo, and fought it out against horns and hoofs. Neither of them had to think at all. The fighting machine was there, with the rage back of it. There was nothing but fighting, NO THINKING.

The monkey throwing his cocoanut on the head of the other monkey used his brain a little. If he and his friends showered cocoanuts or sticks at a climbing snake or wildcat, they chattered and screamed, adding mental demonstrations to blows. They took aim in their imperfect way—a full grown macaque can't throw a cocoanut much better than a full grown woman—but they used their brains a little.

* * *

Primitive man came along, and he used his brains a great deal more in his fights. He had thin nails like the monkey, teeth smaller and feebler than a baboon's. It was all thought with him.

He picked out a sharp stone, fastened it to the end of a stick—perhaps with thongs made of his half-brother, the monkey's hide, and he threw that stick with force and precision far greater than the monkey. That took a great deal of thought.

Afterward he took an elastic piece of wood, bent it a little, stretched the dried piece of some animal's intestine across it, shot a pointed arrow, and that was a very fine display of brains—it was a bigger step from the monkey with his cocoanut to the pithecanthropos with his primitive bow and arrow than from the oxcart to the flying machine.

And the number of centuries that it took man to pass from the cocoanut stage was probably much longer than the few centuries that have passed since men built the Pyramids.

* * *

After the bow and arrow came the other forms of fighting and of government. Wonderful human genius turned ore into iron. Then we had the age of government by steel, knives, lances, and armor. It was a big forward step when we had the more highly developed monkey covered all over with steel armor, with a helmet harder than any cocoanut.

There was brain in all that, and then came the application of the bow and arrow idea to the steel weapon. Firearms were discovered and men governed by bullets shot out of metal tubes by explosion, as the arrow used to be shot away from the bow.

There was and there is a great deal of brain in the making of government by cannon and bullet—for we are still largely in that stage of government.

* * *

We are beginning, however, to see the commencement of a government higher and more subtle than the government by dagger, bullet or arrow—that is, GOVERNMENT BY THE PEN.

After all, the force in all those fighting machines, in all those demonstrations of governing power, was THOUGHT. The monkey's cocoanut simply represented the monkey's thought. The knife, the pistol and bullet only represented thoughts of destruction or control.

The pen, the ballot are also simply demonstrations of thought. And thought now, working through the ballot and the pen, is a governing power, just as it was when some primitive, sad-eyed monkey sat up in the tree with his tail wrapped around a limb and said to himself: "I think I'll drop a cocoanut on that cat's head, and give him the surprise of his life."

The man who knows how to use a pen, the million men who know how to use a ballot, can prepare a thought and drop it on the head of the unjust "malefactor of great wealth" and give HIM the surprise of his life.

* * *

Government is power, and always will be power. But this power always had thought in the background, and the thought has been getting bigger, and the physical part of government and of battle has been getting smaller.

The thought invisible finds expression in the tiny pen, or in the invisible voice, and that thought expressed is more powerful than any weapon that man ever made.

A little, old judge, bent with age, and gray haired, looks seriously at the burly, powerful criminal. He never touches that criminal, he has no feeling whatever about him. He says quietly, "I sentence you to be hanged. You go and be hanged." He writes his name with a little pen on a death warrant. And the criminal, weighing 200 pounds and able to crush the judge's life out with a single closing of his fist, drops his head, goes out and IS hanged.

A large gorilla, eight feet high, one of the sort they have recently discovered in South Africa, would be very much puzzled if a little, dried up legal marmoset should say to another huge gorilla, "You go and die," and the other big gorilla went and died.

That's what happens with us all the time. We have made government more and more a power of thought, a power of the pen, of the spoken word, OF THE UNSPOKEN, INDEFINITE, RESISTLESS CONSCIENCE OF MEN.

* * *

If a rhinoceros should see a little white rabbit sentencing lions to death, if a weazel could see a dove administering justice, or a gorilla see a marmoset controlling gorillas, weazel, rhinoceros, gorilla would be greatly surprised and they would ask themselves, "Where does the power come from? Why do those powerful animals submit to the spoken word?"

Men in days to come will bring about changes in government and in the expression of power that to our men of to-day would be as surprising as to-day's changes would be to the brutal monkey-man of old.

Thought becomes more powerful. Power becomes more thoughtful. Matter becomes less important, and material force, with all its demonstrations of weight and sharpness, becomes feeble and unimportant compared with the spiritual, shapeless, formless, invisible ruling power that has back of it nothing but the one eternal AND ONLY POWER—Justice.

The Breaking Up of "Party Spirit"

The voter, watching political developments unfold before convention time has a beautiful opportunity to study "party spirit" and to understand the meaning of that aged phrase.

The Democratic party is split wide open. It must choose a radical, in which case the conservatives will desert in a body and support another candidate; or a conservative, in which case the radicals will vote for a man more to their liking, though he run under another party banner.

The "harmony" that exists in the Democratic party is like the harmony that prevails among a company of cats on a roof.

On the other hand the Republican party, with long years of power behind it, is just as unquiet as its old rival. President Roosevelt had a candidate for President. Wall Street has a candidate for President. Various States have various "favorite sons."

AND EVERY ONE OF THE MANY FACTIONS WITHIN THE REPUBLICAN PARTY WOULD RATHER SEE A DEMOCRAT PRESIDENT THAN THE CANDIDATE OF ANY RIVAL FACTION.

There is party spirit. There is party patriotism. Feud and enmity rage in the ranks of one great party, envy and bitterness in the camps of another.

And the voter, as a sensible, thinking citizen, can judge how much chance there is for good government in that sort of a spoil-hunting, place-seeking warfare.

At the conventions, platforms will be framed to suit as many factions as possible, which means that they will stand for nothing that the people want or need.

Planks will be inserted to please Wall street. Planks will be inserted to please the enemies of Wall street. Planks will be inserted to secure the farmer vote, and planks will be inserted to secure the campaign contributions of the predatory gentlemen, who are opposed to the farmer in every interest.

And there will not be one genuine, sincere plank among them; not one honest, earnest issue inserted because it is a thing of importance to the people and must be settled to meet a public demand.

This being true is it surprising that the old parties find themselves breaking up; that the old leaders compalin of a lack of party spirit?

The people have put the Republicans in power time and time again, and have not got what they wanted.

They put the Democratic party in power twice, and its President, Grover Cleveland, gave the enemies of the people what THEY wanted so speedily that he has been retired to a deserved oblivion.

The conviction is becoming general that nothing can be gained by allegiance to the old parties; that none of the reforms that cry out to be effected have the slightest chance of being carried out by either the Republicans or the Democrats.

And naturally, "party spirit" is giving place to the independent spirit of intelligent, thoughtful men, who know that this government must be taken from the hands of privilege of every kind and returned to the hands of the people, where the Fathers who framed it intended it to stay.

To the Independent, which is only another name for the honest-thinking American, the Independence party offers an opportunity to show his distaste for a party allegiance which is nothing short of party slavery. It gives him a chance to vote for real issues, for Independent candidates in short, to make his vote count for something when he casts it.

It is not the party of any class, unless that class be the class of honesty and fearlessness.

The principles it represents are the principles that made America a great nation—the principles of freedom and independence.

It declares war on no honest man, be he rich or poor, powerful or feeble. It declares war only on official dishonesty, on political cowardice, on the barter and sale of office and the bestowal of privilege to those who can afford to pay for it.

And the record it has made in one direction alone, that of jailing election thieves, is sufficient to prove its sincerity.

You can ransack the history of either of the so-called great parties for the evidence of its pursuit of election criminals and you will find nothing.

You can look through their platforms, past and present, for any convincing evidence that they desire honest ballot laws, laws that will make the sale of votes impossible, and you will find nothing.

The Independence party, as a beginning, not only declares for absolute honesty of the ballot, but proceeds to punish dishonesty as it deserves to be punished. That fact alone is sufficient to establish the honesty of its pretensions. And the fact that honest men of all parties are turning into its ranks is sufficient to prove that men are weary of parties that stand for nothing, and are eager for an opportunity to make their ballots count when they are dropped in the box.

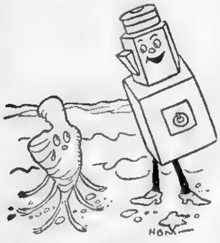
SLINGS AND ARROWS by James J. Montague.

The Presidential Handicap.

Behold, they come, the candidates; they line up for the race
Determination, fortitude and grit on every face.
Gaunt Fairbanks, lithe and lank of limb, and pale unto the nose
Where, just one touch of virile warmth a blushing cherry glows
Rears [illegible] all his [illegible] form, inspiring [illegible]
As [illegible] he cocks his ears to hear the [illegible]

And [illegible] at [illegible] in elegant [illegible],
His [illegible] all [illegible] his [illegible] waits [illegible] for the fray
Beside [illegible] H[illegible] with whiskers furled [illegible] no hold,
Stands [illegible] for the fight, a figure strong and bold,
And Cannon, spavined though he is, yet smiles a senile smile,
And girds his vitals with an oath to meet the gruelling trial

Among the van Philander Knox looms, [illegible] but intense,



"The barnacle and binnacle
Were strolling on the shore."

"Taft? Where's ole Bill Taft!"

And Woodruff, vested like the Pard, at horrible expense, Await the word with bated breath, which goes unnoticed, for
The breath of Fairbanks to their right is bated rather more,
Are coiled on springs with eyes ahead toward that important spot
Where stands the man who means to give the starting pistol shot.

But hold! Where's Taft? the cry goes up. The gentle breezes waft
It back and forth and to and fro! Where's Taft? Where's old Bill Taft!
Without him there can be no start! Loud rings the frightened shout.
Hunt up Bill Taft! Bring in ole Bill! Get busy! Drag him out!
Then some one shrieks, "We're done! We're done!" The surging crowd falls back
In rage, for Taft has got away! He's half way round the track!

Reuterdahl.

Oh, Reuterdahl came from our tottering fleet,
And he said that the turrets were not fit to eat;
That the bows wouldn't bow, and the jibs wouldn't douse,
And the guns wouldn't go in a gentleman's house
Not to mention the fact that the powder supply
Was [illegible] for plum duff and too sandy for pie.

The people went greenish, and Congress turned pale
When they harked to this horrible, harrowing tale
"Great Caesar!" they shouted. "If these things be true,
If the stun'sls won't boil into usable glue,
If the bilges aren't fitted to wear on the backs
Of the seamen when making their port starboard tacks,
We'd better look quick at the great Western drink,
For surely our vessels to-morrow will sink"

"You bet!" exclaimed Reuterdahl; "that ain't the worst,
The oil in the cylinders won't slake a thirst
You couldn't bite into the Michigo's ram
And the sails of the Mayne are much softer than ham,
Moreover, I think I omitted to state
That the stern of the Myoah doesn't run straight"

Aghast at these horrors, the nation repaired
To the isthmus en masse, for ill tidings prepared,
And they stood on the deck of a mountain peak high,
There to watch for the vessels to sink—or go by.
And, strange to relate, all the craft, great and small,
Went sailing right past there, not sinking at all.
So maybe our navy is toler'bly fair,
Though Reuterdahl wildly is clawing the air.

The Binnacle and the Barnacle.

The barnacle and binnacle
Were strolling on the shore
[illegible] watched the breakers curl and [illegible]
And heard them rage and roar
And [illegible] the barnacle outspoke.
It seems to me a shame
That I should be a sorry jest
And you a thing of fame

"You surely are no lovelier
Or worthier than I.
And yet the poets sing of you
Full often, and for why?
Because to make a rhyme for you
Is very lightly done,
For you good rhymes are manifold,
For me, alas, there's none

"With cynical, and pinnacle
And clinical, they may
Write roundel, ballade, villanelle
And sonnet, verse and lay
To make your praises known to men
Alas that it should be
That I am known as barnacle;
There is no rhyme for me

You ride upon the polished deck
I soak in muggy, soggy moss
Below the water line
The quartermaster rubs you down
Until you fairly gleam;
I lead a sad and lonely life
Upon the leeward beam.

"And he said that the turrets were not fit to eat."

"You cant your haughty head aloft
And give yourself great airs,
But no one knows that I am here,
And no one even cares
Oh! unjust world, that such a thing
Could ever come to pass!
Oh! woe, oh! bitter woe is me!
Alas! Alas! Alas!"

"Pish tush!" replied the binnacle
These things are true, you see
Because, poor fellow, you are you
And I, of course, am me
I am a thing of usefulness,
Of knowledge, and resource,
I stay and hold the compass
While the compass holds the course

"While you upon the leeward bilge
The passing waves impede
And making warts upon the planks
Obstruct the vessel's speed
I dare say, if you went to work
Some honest thing to do,
These poets would get rhyming books
And find a rhyme for you."

Ah! cold and heartless binnacle
Thus sourly to sneer
Upon a fellow passenger.
Within one short swift year
The ship upon a reef was run,
And in a sodden heap
It soon reposed despondent on
The bottom of the deep.

And thereupon the barnacle
Departed from its side
And bit the haughty binnacle
Upon its polished hide
And other barnacles drew near
Until the brazen cup
That once was called a binnacle
Was wholly covered up.

Which shows it is not wise to brag
When one is on the sea,
Where none knows what the dangers are
Or what the perils be
And also that there ought to be
For barnacle a rhyme,
Perhaps you'll hunt one up for me
Some day when you have time.

"Until the brazen cup
That was once called a binnacle,
Was wholly cup."

The Profession of Being A Woman —by Dorothy Dix

THE profession of being a woman includes, as a side line, an abnormal talent for loving

The woman who is a success as a woman must be ALL HEART, and have an ability to festoon her affection about anything. She must be able to love the unlovely, be faithful to the faithless and devoted to the worthless.

This is no easy task, because nature did not build all women that way. There are plenty of women with few emotions and glacial temperaments. There are also women who loathe domesticity, women who are born celibates, women who prefer fox terriers to babies. But there are practically no women who have the courage of their opinions on these subjects, for the unpardonable sin for a woman in the world's eyes is for her to depart from the conventions of her sex. For a woman to use her judgment instead of her feelings in deciding a subject is a thing that makes other women look on her askance, and men turn from her in horror

No woman dares to say that she hates pots and pans, and doesn't thrill at the sight of a new pattern in tidies, or that she regards children as necessary but unpleasant pests, or that she is heartily glad when death rids her of a mean and tyrannous [illegible] husband. On the contrary custom forces her to be [illegible] of [illegible] on these subjects, and, no matter what her private opinion may be, to keep up the bluff of being an adoring woman

It is part of a woman's profession of being a woman to love just as much as it is of a doctor's to study medicine, or a lawyer's to study law, and, to do mothers justice, every girl is trained to it from her cradle. Before a female baby is out of long clothes her mother has begun to talk to her about sweethearts. While her hair is in pigtails it is borne in upon her infantile mind that a woman's whole business in life is to love. Directly or indirectly, she is taught that the woman who loves is a success, and the woman who doesn't love is a failure. She sees women who are evilly married to men who have dragged them down to poverty and want, spoken of with respect because they loved, and rich and prosperous old maids pitied and commiserated because they don't love

She observes that women who are weak, and slovenly, and frowsy, and generally good for nothing, are excused for all their faults because they say they love their husbands and children. She sees the woman set upon a pedestal and glorified who continues to love the husband who has abused and insulted her in every way and who clings the tighter to him the more he tries to pry her off.

"While her hair is in pigtails it is borne in upon her infantile mind that woman's whole business in life is to love."

This early training, this grounding in the very rudiments of her profession, naturally brings about [illegible] results, and explains the phenomenon of why a gentle, refined, intelligent woman can love a man who is a brutal bully, and whose crass ignorance must make the goose flesh stand up all over her every time he speaks. It also offers a few pointers on why a woman can be faithful until death to the man who has flouted her, and who wasn't worth her giving three minutes' time to, even if he had been true. It is simply training and the inheritance of ancestral instincts. She loves as a pointer dog [illegible] birds.

Because it is part of the profession of a woman to love, most of women's troubles [illegible]. To begin with, a girl, having been brought up to believe that her great object in life is to love, is like a young doctor, who is so anxious to begin the practice of his profession that he is willing to experiment upon any kind of a case. By the time a girl is sixteen or seventeen years of age she feels as if she has gotten her diploma in the school of theoretical affection, and she longs to make it an applied science, so she commences looking out for some one to love, and it's the Lord's mercy, and not her own fault, if she hits upon the right man.

If she makes a mistake there is little help for her, poor dear, since women regard it as highly unprofessional to quit loving a man whom they have once loved. There is no spectacle in the world at once so touching and pathetic and so idiotic as that of women who have spent their lives breaking the alabaster box of their love before some idol whose feet were not only of clay, but whose very name was Mud

All of us know some sweet-faced spinster, some gentle Miss Annie, who gave her heart in her youth to a gay gallant, who loved, and kissed, and rode away. The man was a worthless cur, so dishonorable that he saw nothing contemptible in making a plaything of the heart of a girl so simple and unsophisticated that she did not even know the first rule of the game of a Summer flirtation. He wasn't worth a tear, or a thought, or a pang of regret, but, having loved him once, Miss Annie was true to her profession of being a woman, and went on loving him, and will go on loving him to the end. There has never been a day he has not been in her thoughts or a night that his name has not been in her prayers, and we know that when we come to robe her for burial that we shall find, laid away with the fine linen she has put aside for her shroud, the withered rose that he stuck one night in her hair, and a few faded old love letters, yellow with age and worn with reading.

The tragedy is even greater if the woman marries the wrong man, and still continues to love him. There must be a page in the Recording Angel's book blistered with the tears of pity that he has let fall as he writes down the things which many a wife endures because of the love she bears a worthless man, and that nothing can slay. Who does not know the tired, sad, wistful face of the woman whose husband is faithless to her, and neglects and insults her, but who waits patiently, hoping against hope that some time he will tire of painted women and come back to her? Who does not know the poor, cowed woman whose husband bullies and beats her, but who turns the other cheek to him, and lies to the world about the bruises on her flesh and her heart?

Who does not know the woman who night after night opens the door for a drunken husband, who takes him reeking from the gutter to her pitiful arms, and can still find something to love in the loathsome creature.

In and out of every penitentiary door in the land there is a procession of faithful women that never stops. It is composed of the mothers whose love no disgrace can lessen, no crime alienate, and who never see in the hardened criminals shunned by the balance of the world, anything but the innocent babes that they have pillowed on their breasts.

Stranger still, so great is woman's ability to love, so deathless is mother love, a woman will love the sons and daughters who forsake and neglect her, and fail to provide for her, and who are ashamed of the work-worn hands that grew knotted toiling for them. There are old women in the poorhouse explaining and excusing the conduct of their prosperous children.

These women, who love not wisely, but too well, are all familiar figures to us, and we know not whether to revere them as saints or mock them as fools. They are the high priestesses who minister before the altar of love, and they keep alive our faith in the streak of divinity that is still left in fallen humanity

And the curious part of it all is that this miracle of love is worked by women of every sort and condition, and is so common that we don't even stop to notice it and wonder at it. And the woman herself doesn't think that it is anything remarkable. It's just part of the profession of being a woman.

"Gave her heart in her youth to a gay gallant, who loved, and kissed, and rode away."

"The woman who is a success as a woman must be ALL HEART, and have an ability to festoon her affection about anything."

DEAR COUSIN OLE—Ay got yure [illegible] letter from Hunkinson, Nort Dakota and vile Ay bane glad to hear from yu Ay bane wery sorry yu cant get yob for me in Hunkinson rite now, becaus yu say money ban tight. Ay guess yu ban right about dis; money ban tight, yu bet Money ban so tight har in New York dat it ban having to hang on lamp post. Ay ban reading vat yu say bout Yon Yohnson, vich ban trying hard to ban next President of Union States, and Ay see vat yu say bout getting gude yob ef Maester Yohnson get yob bossing dis har Vite House.

Ay tal yu, Ole, Ay ban frade yu ant got much chance for yob vith Yon Yohnson in Vite House. Yu see, dar ban two geezers down har in East vich got yolly gude chance for being President of dese har Union States. One faller ban gude big fat faller, lak Yim Yeffries; his name ban Maester Bill Taft. Dis oder faller ban tall and having fine viskers, lak Yohn T. Brush His name ban Maester Charles Hughes Ven Ay get yure letter bout Maester Yon Yohnson Ay go to dese two fallers to find out how much chance Yohnson have for being President of Union States. First Ay go to Maester Taft, he ban fat faller.

"Maester Taft," Ay say, "my name ban Swen Swenson. Ay ant ben in dis har contry long, but Ay got cousin up in Hankinson, Nort Dakota, vich having fine chance to get gude yob vith new President of Union States if Maester Yon Yohnson get to be new President. Vat yu tenk ban Maester Yohnson's chances?" Ay say to Maester Taft

"Val, Swen," say Maester Taft, "in most cases fat fallers ban wery gude natured, and Ay ban no exception to rule. Insted of giving yu yolly gude kick down dese har stairs,' say Maester Taft, 'Ay skol asking yu to have gude seat vile Ay tal yu bout next President of Union States.'

"Tank yu Maester," Ay tal him. "Yu ban having fat body and fat head, but Ay tenk yure heart ban free from fatty de-yeneration, so Ay skol hear vat yu having to say."

"Next President of Union States," say Maester Taft, "skol be frend of Scandinavian fallers. Next President skol be frend of all common people, wery close to hearts of his faller beings, and wery gude and big around vaist line. Next President skol be a man," say Maester Taft, "who ban one of dese har com-mop-olites, vich [illegible] my dear Svede frend, faller who ban [illegible] over his whole vorld. Ay skol give yu picture of him now, Swen," say Maester Taft. "He ban a man of little over [illegible] height, wery big cross shoulders and long vays round middle, lak one of dese har yolly goldfish globes. His parents ban of [illegible] because his old man never ban [illegible] by Grand Yury, and his mother ban in Sout Dakota looking for divorce. Unlak present President," say Maester Taft, "he ban slow to anger and slow to shooting off his face except ven nation [illegible] tremble in some great crisis, lak a var vith Yaps. He never ban calling any faller a liar, becaus he never ban middleveight champion of his class in business college. [illegible] He never ban unkind to dumb brutes, [illegible] it ban heavy going for fat faller in dese Louisiana cane-brakes, and out in Vild and Vooly Vest dar ant any mustangs big enough [illegible] Union States [illegible]."

"Vat yu tenk bout Maester Yon Yohnson's chances?" Ay ask Maester Taft. "Ay ant caring much for myself," Ay tal him, "but Ay ban pulling hard for Cousin Ole vich have fine chance to get yob ef Maester Yohnson ban next President."

"Swen," say Maester Taft, "forget it. Maester Yohnson ban a democrat, and Ay tal yu dese har democrats ant got single chance for yumping into Vite House. As Maester Shakespear said 'Yon Yohnson [illegible] lean and hungry look, he drinks too [illegible] such men skol get the hook.' Vat [illegible] of Union States lak to have to boss Vite House," say Maester Bill Taft, "ban [illegible] fat headed man vich can sleep at night [illegible] ted of talking in sleep. Such a man," say Taft, "ban yure Uncle Villiam, at yure [illegible]. First in var, first in peace, and [illegible] Gudeby, Swen."

So Ay ban going avay [illegible] Maester Taft and looking for Maester Hughes, he ban guvnor of dis state. Ay tal him vat Ay [illegible] to find out, and he ask me to tak seat.

"Ay ban wery busy today, Swen," say Maester Hughes. "Yu see, Ay ban so busy [illegible] in dis state and setting alarm clock for Maester Yerome, so Ay can hardly giving yu much time to talk bout Yon Yohnson, guvnor of Minnesota at present, boss of Union States never. Of [illegible]

[illegible] and on ban end of [illegible] Ay [illegible] ing opvard and onvard skol reach my star of destiny an[illegible] Guvner Hughes.

"Dis Teodore Roosevelt [illegible] faller ant he?" Ay say.

[illegible] funny chances. [illegible]

[illegible] he ban on top [illegible] ground and say [illegible] ers, look at [illegible] spread before yure [illegible] var never ban [illegible] foot before [illegible] bout tousand [illegible] Shafter ban down dar [illegible]" Teodore say, "vaiting for [illegible]"

[illegible] stock brokers and [illegible] race horses ant [illegible] Ven Ay stop [illegible] President [illegible] "and put dis [illegible] tal [illegible] "Ay [illegible] President of Union States."

"Ant Yon Y[illegible]" Ay [illegible]

"How bout Ma[illegible]" Ay [illegible]

"[illegible] Hughes. "Ay [illegible] [illegible] Ef he tenks he skol run for [illegible]" say Hughes, "he ban better off [illegible] ground and make [illegible] Nobody loves dese [illegible] Vat people of Union States [illegible] for President," say Maester Hughes, "[illegible] long faller vith fine beard, [illegible] King Lear or Moses, vich ban leading Israelite tribes out of Egypt. Fat [illegible] ban all right vith little mustache," say Hughes, "but it takes heroes to vear long [illegible]"

"Ay ant so sure for dis," Ay say to Maester Hughes. "George Vashington ant hav [illegible] viskers, or Thomas Yefferson, or Andrey Yackson. Dey ban purty fine geesers, to. And Hughes, "how bout Napoleon, and Yulius Caesar, and Yoah of Ark?"

"Dey ban [illegible]" say Maester Hughes. "[illegible] stop [illegible]"

[illegible] to dese [illegible] and now Ay ban writing yu dis har letter. Of course Ay spose Maester Yon Yohnson [illegible] next President of Union States, but Ay ban a little [illegible] Ay hear Maester Bill Taft and [illegible] Hughes [illegible] Ay ban [illegible]

[illegible] Ay can [illegible] say clear to put in little [illegible] Yon Yohnson [illegible] President [illegible] Vite House. Ay skol drop yu a few [illegible] some day dis veek, and hope yu skol stay in gude health and yure family tu. Say, Ole, [illegible]

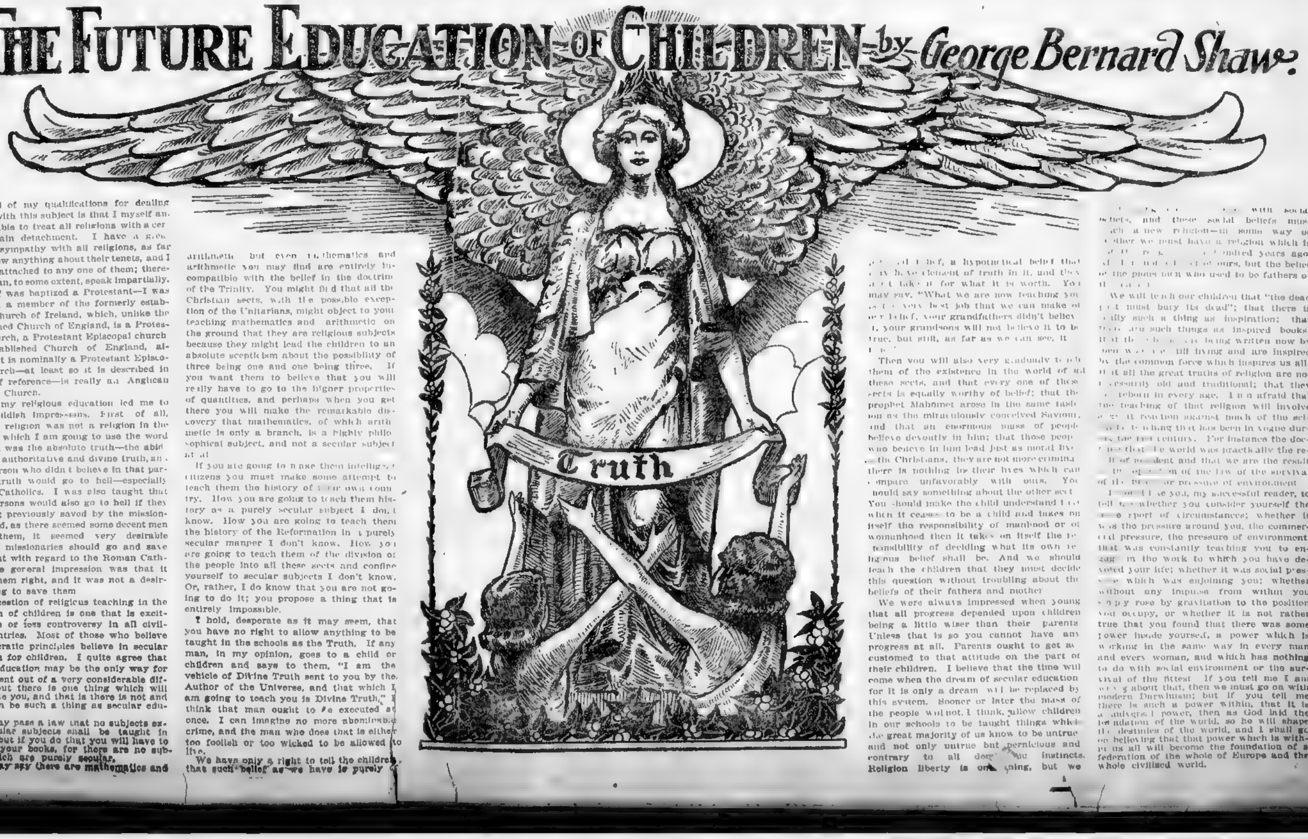
"'He ban fat enough,' say Guvnor Hughes. 'Ay bet yu he ban fat enough—but fat fallers ant wery gude to run for President.'"

THE FUTURE EDUCATION OF CHILDREN

by George Bernard Shaw.



ONE of my qualifications for dealing with this subject is that I myself am able to treat all religions with a certain detachment. I have a great deal of sympathy with all religions, as far as I know anything about their tenets, and I am not attached to any one of them; therefore, I can, to some extent, speak impartially. I myself was baptized a Protestant—I was baptized a member of the formerly established Church of Ireland, which, unlike the established Church of England, is a Protestant church, a Protestant Episcopal church The established Church of England, although it is nominally a Protestant Episcopal Church—at least so it is described in books of reference—is really an Anglican Catholic Church.

Now, my religious education led me to form childish impressions. First of all, with me religion was not a religion in the sense in which I am going to use the word here. It was the absolute truth—the abiding final authoritative and divine truth, and every person who didn't believe in that particular truth would go to hell—especially Roman Catholics. I was also taught that black persons would also go to hell if they were not previously saved by the missionaries, and, as there seemed some decent men among them, it seemed very desirable that the missionaries should go and save them. But with regard to the Roman Catholics, the general impression was that it served them right, and it was not a desirable thing to save them

The question of religious teaching in the education of children is one that is exciting more or less controversy in all civilized countries. Most of those who believe in democratic principles believe in secular education for children. I quite agree that secular education may be the only way for the moment out of a very considerable difficulty, but there is one thing which will checkmate you, and that is there is not and never can be such a thing as secular education.

You may pass a law that no subjects except secular subjects shall be taught in schools, but if you do that you will have to shut up your books, for there are no subjects which are purely secular.

You may say there are mathematics and arithmetic but even mathematics and arithmetic you may find are entirely incompatible with the belief in the doctrine of the Trinity. You might find that all the Christian sects, with the possible exception of the Unitarians, might object to your teaching mathematics and arithmetic on the ground that they are religious subjects because they might lead the children to an absolute scepticism about the possibility of three being one and one being three. If you want them to believe that you will really have to go to the higher properties of quantities, and perhaps when you get there you will make the remarkable discovery that mathematics, of which arithmetic is only a branch, is a highly philosophical subject, and not a secular subject at all

If you are going to make them intelligent citizens you must make some attempt to teach them the history of their own country. How you are going to teach them history as a purely secular subject I don't know. How you are going to teach them the history of the Reformation in a purely secular manner I don't know. How you are going to teach them of the division of the people into all these sects and confine yourself to secular subjects I don't know. Or, rather, I do know that you are not going to do it; you propose a thing that is entirely impossible.

I hold, desperate as it may seem, that you have no right to allow anything to be taught in the schools as the Truth. If any man, in my opinion, goes to a child or children and says to them, "I am the vehicle of Divine Truth sent to you by the Author of the Universe, and that which I am going to teach you is Divine Truth," I think that man ought to be executed at once. I can imagine no more abominable crime, and the man who does that is either too foolish or too wicked to be allowed to live.

We have only a right to tell the children that such belief as we have is purely [illegible] belief, a hypothetical belief that may have element of truth in it, and they [illegible] take it for what it is worth. You may say, "What we are now teaching you is the very best job that we can make of our belief, your grandfathers didn't believe it, your grandsons will not believe it to be true, but still, as far as we can see, it [illegible]"

Then you will also very gradually teach them of the existence in the world of all these sects, and that every one of these sects is equally worthy of belief; that the prophet Mahomet arose in the same fashion as the miraculously conceived Saviour, and that an enormous mass of people believe devoutly in him; that those people who believe in him lead just as moral lives as the Christians, they are not more criminal; there is nothing in their lives which can compare unfavorably with ours. You should say something about the other sects You should make the child understand that when it ceases to be a child and takes on itself the responsibility of manhood or of womanhood then it takes on itself the responsibility of deciding what its own religious belief shall be. And we should teach the children that they must decide this question without troubling about the beliefs of their fathers and mother

We were always impressed when young that all progress depended upon children being a little wiser than their parents Unless that is so you cannot have any progress at all. Parents ought to get accustomed to that attitude on the part of their children. I believe that the time will come when the dream of secular education for it is only a dream will be replaced by this system. Sooner or later the mass of the people will not, I think, allow children in our schools to be taught things which the great majority of us know to be untrue and not only untrue but pernicious and contrary to all [illegible] instincts. Religion liberty is one thing, but we [illegible] with social beliefs, and these social beliefs must [illegible] a new religion—in some way or other we must have a religion which is [illegible] hundred years ago [illegible] ours, but the belief of the pious men who used to be fathers of [illegible]

We will teach our children that "the dead [illegible] must bury its dead"; that there is [illegible] such a thing as inspiration; that there are such things as inspired books, [illegible] being written now by men who are still living and are inspired by the common force which inspires us all; that all the great truths of religion are not necessarily old and traditional; that they are reborn in every age. I am afraid that the teaching of that religion will involve a great reaction against much of the scientific teaching that has been in vogue during the last century. For instance the doctrine that the world was practically the result of accident and that we are the result [illegible] of the law of the survival of the [illegible] or pressure of environment

I [illegible] you, my successful reader, to tell [illegible] whether you consider yourself the [illegible] sport of circumstances; whether it was the pressure around you, the commercial pressure, the pressure of environment, that was constantly teaching you to engage in the work to which you have devoted your life; whether it was social pressure which was enjoining you; whether without any impulse from within you simply rose by gravitation to the position you occupy, or whether it is not rather true that you found that there was some power inside yourself, a power which is working in the same way in every man and every woman, and which has nothing to do with social environment or the survival of the fittest If you tell me I am wrong about that, then we must go on with modern Darwinism; but if you tell me there is such a power within, that it is a universal power, then as God laid the foundation of the world, so he will shape the destinies of the world, and I shall go on believing that that power which is within us all will become the foundation of a federation of the whole of Europe and the whole civilized world.

JOE WELCH AT ELLIS ISLAND

A BIG PRODUCTION AT THE ORPHEUM HEADING A GRAND VAUDEVILLE BILL

You know Joe Welch. You know what he has done in touching the heart strings of the [illegible] now you have an opportunity to see him in the greatest character he has ever undertaken to portray, the Italian laborer at the Immigration Station at Ellis Island waiting for his wife and child for whom he has saved for years to earn enough money to bring them over. The humor and pathos of the situation are clearly drawn. The scene is most realistic, showing the Immigrant Station with all the life, the activity, the immigrants and their friends, the [illegible] officers [illegible] how the foreigners get in and [illegible] all is the pathetic story of the [illegible]. It's not all pathos. Joe Welch always sees the humorous side and [illegible] he doesn't [illegible] perhaps you've heard of Lillian Shaw. Of course you have. That grotesque figure with the long feather who used to sing "Has Anybody Seen My Husband?" She's singing new and more up-to-date songs now and is just as funny as ever, in fact more so according to latest reports from New York.

There's no end of fun. The Three Meier [illegible] contribute more than [illegible] [illegible] bicycle riding, and there's something new [illegible] and startling in [illegible] ten of them and when we say that Edwards is responsible for them and all they do, [illegible] should be enough. Then we have the Mitchell Sisters, the girls who had everybody singing "Hiawatha" a few years ago and have been keeping up their reputation as singers and dancers with a lot of new material. Marsden Fitzpatrick and Company have something good in "The Turn of the Tide." Irving Jones has no superior among the colored brethren who entertain, and the Carroll-Burke Trio are up and doing acrobats.

P. S. The Painters are coming in a [illegible] Monday night. If you know one the chances are he has told you about it. Come anyhow. You'll not regret it.

N. B. Mat. 15 and [illegible] a few [illegible]. Evenings [illegible] 75. No higher.

TEDDY-B AND TEDDY-G: THE BEAR DETECTIVES.

No. XIX.---Carried Off by the Sinbad Bird. Verses by Seymour Eaton. Drawings by C. H. Twelvetrees

Copyright, 1908 by Seymour Eaton.

"Had grabbed those Teddy Bears so quick
"They didn't have time to get a stick."

THE Sinbad bird, with another shriek,
Had grabbed those Teddy Bears so quick
They didn't have time to get a stick.

In half a minute they were above the trees
And cooling off in a blustering breeze
Which whizzed and whirled and tossed and blew.

"And loosed the Bears and let them drop
"On a little island with rounded top."

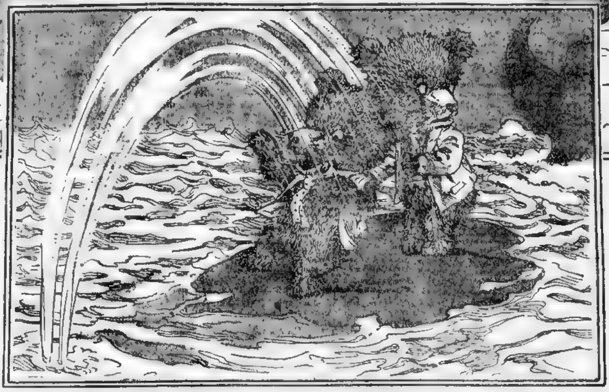
Fanned by the wings as on they flew,
The bird had grabbed them in her claws,
Each by the jacket, with hanging paws,
Then shoved them back beneath her tail,
As on they went on this skyward sail.

Said Teddy-G, as he looked below,
"We're deaders now if the bird lets go."
Said Teddy-B, "If we drop and hit
Those rocks below, it will hurt a bit;
But Sinbad the Sailor said that he
Was carried a thousand miles to sea.
That's where we're going; just look ahead;
The Atlantic Ocean's before us spread."

The bird flew on; the Bears stuck tight
Till land and hills were out of sight,
And down below a ship or two
Seemed just like specks on the ocean blue.
The bird let forth another screech
And stretched her wings to their widest reach,
And with graceful curve she dropped below,
And near the water her claws let go,
And loosed the Bears and let them drop
On a little island with rounded top;
But the island moved and slashed its tail,
And they knew at once they were on a whale.
The bird was gone; no boat in sight;
And nothing to help them in their plight.

"Teddy-G had doubts and said that he
"Would stick his knife in the whale to see."

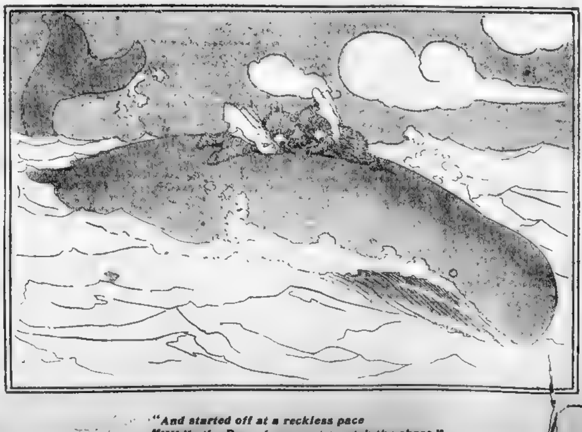
"Sinbad the Sailor," said Teddy-B,
"Was dropped on a whale, like you and me,
And he built a fire and scorched the whale
And got upset in an awful gale;
He drifted ashore to an island bay,
Where the rocks were gold and all the clay
Was full of diamonds—if the story's true—
And this may happen to me and you."



"The whale sent forth a waterspout
"And slashed his tail and turned about."

Teddy-G had doubts and said that he
Would stick his knife in the whale to see.
The whale sent forth a waterspout
And slashed his tail and turned about
And started off at a reckless pace,
While the Bears hung on to watch the chase.
They went through waves and waters deep,
For hours and hours till they fell asleep.
What happened then they never knew,
For they sailed clean off the ocean blue.
When they awoke, they were high and dry
On a sandy shore; but how or why
They landed there, they couldn't tell;
Whether put ashore by an ocean swell,
Or brought by the whale and there let go,
Or dropped by the bird, they didn't know.

"They went through waves and waters deep
"For hours and hours till they fell asleep."



"And started off at a reckless pace
"While the Bears hung on to watch the chase."

"I'm full of water," said Teddy-B,
"That's all that's wrong inside with me."
"I'm full of air," Teddy-G replied,
"That's all that's wrong with my inside."
"Take my advice," said Teddy-B,
"You run and hide next egg you see."
Teddy-G replied, "We sailed and flew,
And proved the Sinbad story true."

Sinbad the Sailor will have fun to spare
When he outsails a Teddy Bear.

"'I'm full of water,' said Teddy-B,
"'That's all that's wrong inside with me.'"
"'I'm full of air,' Teddy-G replied,
"'That's all that's wrong with my inside.'"

Cattishness Is One of the Meanest of All Woman's Faults

By Beatrice Fairfax

PERHAPS the [illegible] the [illegible] of women [illegible] cattishness.

It is astonishing [illegible] you will find [illegible] even in the best of women.

It is generally [illegible] jealousy, and though a woman may be naturally sweet [illegible] possessed [illegible] of her own [illegible] of getting [illegible] insinuating against some other woman.

She uses [illegible] envious [illegible] for [illegible] Instinctively she is against all women.

Smooth With Men

SHE is smooth as cream where men are concerned. She never shows them her claws.

It is only after she marries that she lets her real nature crop out, and the [illegible] man discovers that his pretty kitten is in reality a cat, and one with very sharp claws.

I tell you [illegible] it is a pretty poor sort of woman [illegible] does [illegible] fair with her sisters. It is so very easy for [illegible] woman to make another feel [illegible] uncomfortable.

She may [illegible] say one word that [illegible] criticised, but her manner can convey a world of insinuation.

She always tells you, with great affecta[illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].

Just as I said before [illegible] [illegible] And those of us who [illegible] [illegible] can stop it a[illegible] together if we want to.

Sacrifices Another

ALMOST every one of us will sacrifice another woman if we want to appear [illegible] [illegible] of a man.

We will [illegible] the other woman is selfish and fairly purr with content when he tells us how sorry he is for us and how selfish the other woman is to let us do the hard work. In reality, the other woman is not selfish at all, and the sweet one[illegible] [illegible] is just a wee bit cattish. [illegible] think so?

And now I think enough has been said of the faults of woman. It has been [illegible] criticise her at all, for I [illegible] my sex and would fight for it [illegible].

Of course we are not perfect, but [illegible] are very earnestly trying to do [illegible].

To be a really good woman is to be [illegible] best thing in all the world, and [illegible] the greatest influence of any living thing.

So let us try to be good and true to one another and to ourselves.

ROAST STEAK AND POTATOES

BUTTER a baking dish and sprinkle a [illegible] layer of chopped steak, season with salt and pepper. Put over this a layer of raw potatoes [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] until pan is full. Fill pan [illegible] hot water, cover and bake three hours. The flour used thickens the water and makes a delicious gravy.

MRS. JANE KING,
No. 76 Springfield street, Lawrence.

ESCALLOPED CLAMS

ONE quart shelled clams, one quart milk, one pound common crackers, or, better still, bread crumbs. Chop heads and hard part of clams, roll crackers or crumbs [illegible]. Butter a deep baking dish and cover bottom with half inch of crumbs, moisten [illegible] with clam liquor and milk and [illegible] layer of clams, chopped and soft parts together. Put tiny bits of butter on [illegible] and salt and pepper, then a layer of cracker or bread crumbs, layer of clams, etc., until the dish is full, having layer of crumbs on top. Moisten [illegible] crumbs well with clam liquor and milk. Bake one hour in moderate oven.

Enamelled Jewelry the Latest Fad

THIS is certainly peculiarly Twentieth Century, and so many women nowadays have learned the art of making enamel that it especially appeals to us. Most of such ornaments are large, taking the form of brooches or pendants, and are made after the fashion of old paste, intermingled with gems. Some of these pendants and brooches are in the shape of flowers or fruit, and faithfully copy the colors of both. Gold wire often intersects the enamel. A bunch of grapes has the tendrils and leaves in gold, the grapes represented by pearls, while green tints are represented by emeralds.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

A BRIDESMAID'S PRESENT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Just a few lines as I know you have helped others. I am going to be married in a few months and my future husband is going to give the best man a scarf pin. Is it necessary for me to give the bridesmaid a present? She is my future husband's sister. If so, kindly let me know what I can give her. PUZZLED.

THERE is no necessity for giving the bridesmaid a present, but if the bridegroom is giving the best man a present it would look better for you to give the bridesmaid some little gift. A pretty pin or some trifle of that kind would be appropriate.

LOVE VERSUS LEARNING.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am almost nineteen years of age and have taken a rather keen liking to a young lady, and at the same time I am studying a profession. I have taken her to several places of amusement. I have taken the advice you have given to young men in previous cases and am devoting myself to my studies and have cut my attentions toward her. It seems to me that this young lady has noticed the lessening of my attentions and she has shown a kind of liking to another young man who is a friend of [illegible]. Now, Miss Fairfax, is it that she is trying the "freezing process" on me or is it that she does not care to continue the friendship? Because she has been acting kind of queer lately. I hope that you do not take from this that I am madly in love with her, because I am not old enough, and not in a position to judge that much as yet, but the truth is that I like her very much. Can you advise me how I can continue the friendship and find out if she really cares for me, if she does not, how I can get her back without it interfering with my studies? X. Y. Z.

I DO not think that you can pay very devoted attention to a girl and keep up your studies at the same time. There is no reason why you should not be the best of friends unless she is not satisfied to have things on that footing. I am afraid that you cannot get her back without devoting yourself exclusively to her, and that might interfere with your studies. I dare say she is a trifle piqued because you have not been as attentive as usual. Why not have a talk with her and tell her you are anxious to get on with your studies, but want to hold her friendship, if possible?

Proof is inexhaustible that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound carries women safely through the Change of Life.

Read the letter Mrs. E. Hanson, 804 E. Long St., Columbus, Ohio, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I was passing through the Change of Life, and suffered from nervousness, headaches, and other annoying symptoms. My doctor told me that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was good for me, and since taking it I feel so much better, and I can again do my own work. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me during this trying period."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

The Perfect Woman.

Artists say the ideal proportion of weight in a woman is 26 pounds for every foot of her height. This would make a woman of 5 feet 4 inches weigh 138 pounds 8 ounces.

If you weigh more than this in proportion you are on the danger line and are likely to get too fat in a few years. Check it by taking a teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime of this receipt: ½ ounce Marmola, ½ ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic and 3½ ounces Syrup Simplex. Get the Marmola sealed and mix it with the other ingredients at home. This mixture is harmless, will not cause wrinkles, and has been known to take off seven pounds of fat a week without any help from exercise or dieting. It is inexpensive. Marmola Co., Detroit, Mich.

What the Theatres Offer

Colonial Theatre

Ethel Barrymore comes to the Colonial Theatre for two weeks, beginning to-morrow evening, with matinees on Saturdays, in the new play called "Her Sister," written in collaboration for her by Clyde Fitch and Cosmo Gordon Lennox. The play is a three-act comedy, with its scenes laid in England, though the incidents of the story are supposed to have occurred in America. The fact that it monopolized the pens of two such dramatists as Fitch and Lennox an entire summer, lends special distinction to the work. The collaboration is, at least, the first instance in this country, wherein a modern play was brought about by a duo of [illegible] of different nationalities [illegible] an American. The [illegible] Mr. Frohman [illegible] has surrounded Miss Barrymore embraces besides Arthur Byron, as leading man, Fanny Addison Pitt, Louise Drew, Lucile Watson, Anita Rothe, Charles Hammond, Lumsden Hare, Desmond Kelley, Rockliffe Fellowes and others.

Boston Theatre

Wilson Barrett's drama, "The Sign of the Cross," will make the attraction this week, this being the first time the play [illegible] presented by a stock company. Scenic Artist Hatch has given especial attention to the settings of the street in Rome, the Cestian bridge by moonlight and the Atriums of the palaces of Marcus and Nero. A large chorus of mixed voices has been engaged, the incidental music arranged by Charles L'Orage. The principal characters have been cast as follows: Marcus Superbus, Wilson Melrose; Nero, Walter Walker; Tigellinus, Theodore Friebus; Licinius, Thomas MacLarnie; Glabrio, Otis Thayer; [illegible] Donald Meek; Viturius, [illegible]; [illegible] Oliver, [illegible] Morgan; Dacia, Mary Sanders; Dorcas, [illegible] Nichols; Stephanus, [illegible] Beverly West; Mercia, Eleanor Gordon.

Castle Square Theatre

D'Artagnan, most fascinating of all stage heroes, will hold the centre boards this week, for the play is the picturesque, dramatic drama, "The Three Musketeers." The leading role, D'Artagnan, will be assumed by Edgar Baume. Miss Vail De Vernon, the new leading woman, who scored such a hit last week, will be the Lady De Winter, a role just suited to her. Charles Miller returns to the cast as Athos. The other members of "The Three" are Mark Kent as Aramis, and Fletcher Harvey as Porthos. Elfreda Lache will play Anne of Austria, and Miss Bondhill as Constance. Ogden Stevens will be the Cardinal Richelieu, and George Stuart Christie the Duke of Buckingham. William Foote will play the Count de Rochefort, Frederic Murray the King Louis XIII, Charles Brokate the Captain de Jussac, and minor roles will be taken by Reginald Simpson, Francis Learned, Miss Learned, J. T. Lyons, Lawrence Jenkins and Arthur N. Payne.

Globe Theatre

Kellar, the great magician, who has grown very popular in Boston of late years because he never fails to afford new surprises in his entertainments, begins his farewell engagement to-morrow afternoon. Appearing jointly with Mr. Kellar this season is Howard Thurston, who assumes full control of the entertainments next year, by far the cleverest of the younger generation of conjurors, who has but recently returned from an extended tour of the world. Mr. Thurston spent some time in India, and will present a number of new illusions he [illegible] among them being "The Phantom Bridal Chamber," "The Floating Ball" and "Princess Kiyo," a triple mystery filled with amazing appearances and disappearances.

Keith's Theatre

The grand opera star, Zelie de Lussan, will be heard for a single week only. Thomas J. Ryan has no superior as a delineator of Irish character. Assisted by Mary Richfield, he will present for the first time at Keith's [illegible] new [illegible] "Mike Haggerty's Daughter." Among the other [illegible] features will be [illegible] Clermont's [illegible]; the George [illegible] company in "Three of a Kind," its first showing at Keith's; Countess Rossi and M. Paulo [illegible]; the Four Bards; [illegible] the accordeon wizard from [illegible]; Hibbert and Warren; [illegible] "Bunny Dancer"; the [illegible] company in a jovial hodge-podge; [illegible] Dutton and [illegible]; Young and War[illegible]; [illegible] Mae McLane and [illegible] and Roberts; Pat Long [illegible] real Irish jigs, and new kinetograph pictures complete the list.

Orpheum Theatre

Joe Welch, the famous star of "The Peddler" and "The Shoemaker," and one of the best delineators of Hebrew and Italian characters now on the stage, will be the headline feature at the Orpheum Theatre next week, appearing in "At Ellis Island," as an Italian laborer who has been in this country some time and has saved enough money to bring his wife and four-year-old daughter over. Another star is Lillian Shaw, the grotesque comedienne. As [illegible] the Three Mosher Brothers have no superiors. A new feature from the comedy standpoint is called the [illegible] Kids. There is a large company of [illegible]. Other good features are the Mercedes Sisters, of "Hiawatha" fame; Madden and Fitzpatrick, in a sketch called "The Turn of the Tide," introducing some [illegible] piano playing and singing; the [illegible] of acrobats; Irving Jones, [illegible] comedian, and the kinetograph.

Park Theatre

Rose Stahl in James Forbes's comedy, "The Chorus Lady," made her first appearance here in this play last Monday and was accorded one of the most enthusiastic receptions that has been noted in a Boston theatre for a long time. Her portrayal of Patricia O'Brien proved one of the finest bits of characterization any native actress has accomplished in years. "The Chorus Lady," from any point of view, is excellent entertainment. It possesses those thoroughly human attributes which interest the masses and it has a fine moral lesson. The Henry B. Harris management has supplied an adequate production and a company each one of whom seems to have been especially endowed for his or her particular part. Both Miss Stahl and "The Chorus Lady" are bound to fill the Park as long as they can remain here.

FLASHES from STAGELAND

BY THE OBSERVER

PERHAPS the most talked about girl in the burlesque stage, as well as one of the most unassuming and modest, is Miss Patsy Johnston, who will be at the Columbia next week with "The Moonlight Maids." Patsy is said to be the original "Chorus Lady," the young woman Author James Forbes had in mind when he gave that pleasing play, "The Chorus Lady," to the public. Miss Johnston in real life is the exact counterpart of the heroine of the play, and is full of that delightful slang which has made the East Side of New York famous from coast to coast. In addition to her resemblance to the "Chorus Lady," she is full of Irish witticisms, and no one can get the upperhand of her when it comes to satire or repartee. Miss Johnston, however, is something more than a "chorus lady" this season. In fact she can be classed as one of the principals, for she made so much out of the little speaking part that was entrusted to her care earlier in the season that it has grown to considerable size, so that in the near future it would not be at all surprising to see the original "Patricia" in a role befitting her peculiar talents, and with her name emblazoned in the biggest and boldest type, a la Maude Adams and Rose Stahl.

* * * * * *

If you want a lesson in optimism, see Rose Stahl when she is off stage—that is, when she is not playing Patricia. Optimism, enthusiasm, real Irish wit, fairly exude from her. Magnetism and personality become almost meaningless words when one stands before her. She is Magnetism personified.

IT remained for an up-country friend to bring to my notice another talent possessed by Donald Meek. Of his character work and caricatures, you know. It seems, however, that he does other things; does them with a pen—and does them exceedingly well. Before me are a number of verses—verses of merit—written by Donald Meek. I would like to quote his "Sonnet to the Matinee Girl," but Mason street is all too narrow for the influx that might follow its publication. Instead, here is one bearing the title "The Biggest Joke." Read it: grasp its truth—and remember that the young character comedian of the Boston Theatre is its author:

"THE BIGGEST JOKE"

One man hath said that all the world's a stage,
And well he knew, ev'n in that distant age.
A stage it is, whereon the comedian, Fate,
Doth crack his jokes, his whims to satiate.
And after all the struggle, talk and fuss,
The curtain falls—and life is one on us.

George Shepard's Black Warblers—no need to go further in description of them. But they hold forth next Thursday evening at Chickering Hall, with "Chick" Fox, E. Stanley Nichols, "Joe" Rothe, Henry Nurenberg, "Dan" Haley, Charles Hassett, Eddie Kelly and all the old-timers. "Everybody black" is the watcry. Mr. Shepard will be the boss, and the entire Shepard Norwell delegation will be in evidence.

* * * * * *

WITHOUT being "a knocker," what's the matter with calling "The Jesters" a nifty little church or parlor entertainment, especially as the Hollis Street Theatre formerly was a church. On that idea, a poster for the show might shape up thus.

HOLLIS STREET CHURCH.

Grand entertainment by Miss Maude Adams and other members of the Sewing Circle in the high-class play, "The Jesters." There will be numerous recitations and Miss Adams will speak her brand-new piece "The Breeze." Good social time. Light refreshments.

No! This isn't a "knock." But isn't "The Jesters," when all is said and done, a melodramatic light-weight? It's pretty and clean and sparkling. That's all.

* * * * * *

That is a wonderful prayer which Arnold Daly makes in "The Regeneration," in his character of Owen Conway, after "Mamie Rose" has given him his first religious instruction. Left alone, Owen tries, sincerely, to repeat the prayer, falters, cannot remember, then improvises—and teaches the lesson that few so-called Christians learn—that it is not what is said but how it is said. Owen's attempt at a prayer is: "Our Father which art in heaven—Lord, does it make an awfulot of difference how I say it if it's on de level? Won't you just listen to de rest I got to tell you? It ain't much at dat. You're wise to all tings and dere's no use tryin' to trow you any bull con. You know I ain't no snow white lily, but you know I'm strictly on de level in this proposition. I want to be a man—leave de booze alone and work for de grub you're goin' to gi' me, and mebbe some day you'll gi' me a little home like dis. Aw, but I don't want to ask you for anyting yet. I don't want to impose on your good nature. Just gi' me a chance and I'll make good, honest I will, honest I will. Amen."

THEODORE ROBERTS, the character actor, who will play the role of Joe Portugais, the Canadian voyageur in "The Right of Way," at the Hollis March 30, is a master of the art of make-up. In this he has few equals and no superiors on the stage. During the performance of "The Squaw Man" in which he played "Tabywana" a Ute Indian, his make-up was so lifelike that men offered wagers that Roberts was a full-blooded Indian actor. When he appeared in "The Right of Way" earlier in the season in Ottawa, before an audience composed largely of men of the type he impersonates in this play, it was claimed by many that he was a genuine voyageur especially engaged to appear in the part. Another remarkable example of character make-up was his original Henry Canby in "Arizona." He was the ideal of the old cattleman in every aspect. Mr. Roberts is six feet in height and rather heavily built. He has the long, straight features and plastic face that are so often met with among actors. His skin is ruddy from outdoor exercise and his face is lighted by a pair of large, dark blue eyes, which for keenness can only be compared with those of the eagle. Mr. Roberts is very often confused in the minds of some people with the Canadian short story writer and poet, Theodore Roberts, the younger brother of Professor Charles B. D. Roberts, but the two men are not even distantly related by family connection and have never met, though sometimes they receive each other's mail.

Henry Alexander, who made himself very popular while a member of the local stock companies, comes back this week "in support of" Mamie Fleming in "The Girl of Eagle Ranch," at the Grand Opera House. Mr. Alexander has one of the best roles in his career, a Mexican "heavy."

Grand Opera House

Mamie Fleming comes this week in "The Girl of Eagle Ranch," a four-act melodrama. The story is a simple one, revolving about "The Girl" and her sweetheart, Lucky Jim. The first act takes place in a typical western barroom near Eagle Pass; the second act is Eagle Pass; the fourth act is the parlor of the mountain house in Denver, Colorado. A dynamite explosion, a hand-to-hand fight, and gun play in plenty are some of the stirring events. Many specialties of a high class will be introduced, among them being the Cowboy Quartette, Tommy West, an eccentric comedian, W. C. Gravey, in musical novelties and Miss Fleming in songs. Miss Fleming will be supported by Henry Alexander, who for many seasons was [illegible] strong favorite [illegible] of the Boston stock companies. Mr. Alexander will be seen in the part of Santo Pietera, a Mexican, one of his best characters. Matinees will be given on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday and on Friday night is the "bookless" amateur night.

Bowdoin Square Theatre

An English melodrama from the pen of Walter Melville, entitled "A Girl's Cross Roads," will have its first production on American soil this week. The plot unfolds an odd love story. It appears that Jack Livingston and Dr. Weston, two school boy chums, loved the same girl in their youth and, each thinking the other was the favored one, became separated. When the play opens Constance is still single and Jack is married. Jack meets Constance and the sight of her [illegible] the love of earlier days and [illegible] to realize his marriage was a [illegible]. Jack's wife is addicted to strong drink and in one of her ravings when her brain is crazed with alcohol she leaves him and is reported off with a foreign-bound steamer. Arthur [illegible] will assume the role of Jack Livingston and [illegible] Stuart will appear as Constance Cornell. The very powerful role of Nellie Meadows, an adventuress, will be assumed by Isabelle Sherman.

MERGER JUDGES HOLD QUARTER OF MILLION IN NEW HAVEN STOCK

Attorney Crocker of Special Commerce Sub-Committee Alone Controls 1,097 Shares, Worth $145,901.

ADAMS AND WARNER ALSO "CONCERNED"

Interviews Favoring New Haven-Boston & Maine Consolidation Found to Come Only From Stockholders of Mellen Road.

GEORGE Glover Crocker, one of the three Commissioners of Commerce and Industry who reported to the Legislature on Wednesday that it is "desirable to have the New Haven and the Boston & Maine under one control" is personally the owner of 717 shares of New Haven stock.

Commissioner Crocker's private office, in the Old South Building, it was learned yesterday by reporters for this newspaper, controls, altogether, 1,250 shares of stock in the Morgan-Vanderbilt-Astor railroad. This stock is owned by the Crocker family. When the market closed yesterday it was worth $166,250.

Charles F. Adams, 2d, and Joseph B. Warner, who signed with Crocker the majority report favoring the merger, also have New Haven stock. Mr. Adams has 217 shares in his name as trustee. Harvard College, of which he is the treasurer, owns 418 shares more. The Adams influence, therefore, covering 635 shares, was worth last night about $85,000.

Mr. Warner, whose personal holding is but twenty-two shares, valued at $3,000, holds a smaller amount of New Haven stock than either of the other members of the sub-committee on transportation, all of whom favor the merger.

Crocker's Relatives, Too

Adams, Warner and Crocker are Boston lawyers. Crocker, who was for several years Chairman of the Railroad Commission, is now Chairman of Boston's Rapid Transit Commission.

George C. Crocker's offices in the Old South Building are shared by his nephew, George Uriel Crocker, at one time City Treasurer. George Uriel controls 153 shares of New Haven as trustee. His uncle, George, owns 717 shares and controls 380 more as trustee, bringing the family and office holding up to 1,250 shares.

The stock held by the three commissioners, who reported last Wednesday in favor of the merger, is valued approximately at $254,000, or more than a quarter of a million dollars.

A close inspection of the New Haven stock list by Sunday American reporters brings out other interesting and illuminating points. Among them is the fact that Josiah Benton, Jr., and Charles F. Choate, Jr., the very able, very persuasive and exceedingly well informed counsel for the New Haven at the State House, are no mere hired men of the Mellen corporation.

Lawyers Also Heavy Holders.

The Choates of Southboro own 874 shares of New Haven. Charles F., Jr., holds 284 of them in his own name. His father owns 550. Charles F. Choate, Sr., furthermore, is president of the Massachusetts Hospital Life Insurance Company. The Choate insurance company owns a trifle like 1,700 shares of New York, New Haven & Hartford, worth something like $226,100.

And J. H. Benton, Jr., who is with his Brother Choate in the great battle for the merger, also makes a noise like a big block of New Haven

HELD UP ON STREET; POCKETS ROBBED

Cries of Highwaymen's Victim Brings Police—Youth Is Under Arrest

[illegible] Sevier, [illegible] years of age, of No. 216 F street, South Boston, was arrested at 11:30 o'clock last night by Policeman Lampe of Station 6 at D and Fifth streets, when shouts and cries for aid called his attention to a crowd of men who had surrounded [illegible] Ball of No. 171 Fifth street.

Ball was on his way home when four or five men [illegible] on [illegible] and overpowered him and searched his pockets, getting $5. Ball yelled for aid and Policeman Lampe came on the run. He seized Sevier, whom Ball declared was one of his assailants. Sevier was locked up and will have a hearing tomorrow morning.

Thieves Ply Trade in Court Room as Judge Sits Upon the Bench

Carry Off Overcoat, Hat and Pocketbook Under Eyes of Justice

While Judge Stone was presiding over the Third District Court in Cambridge late yesterday afternoon thieves entered the court room and stole a pocketbook containing $2, the property of Mrs. Annie Manley of No. 2 Hurley street, and carried off an overcoat and hat belonging to Jeremiah F. Thurston of No. 39 Montgomery street, who were among the spectators.

Mrs. Manley had her purse in her coat pocket. Thurston left his hat and coat on a settee while he stepped into the corridor a minute. When he returned both his hat and coat had disappeared. In the stolen overcoat was a life insurance policy in the name of Thurston's wife.

LABOR'S HIGH COURT DECIDES UNIONS CAN'T FIX WHOLESALE PRICES

Employers of Union Labor Have Right to Determine What They Will Charge for Goods.

[illegible] from Washington [illegible] received in Boston yesterday to the effect that the American Federation of Labor had [illegible] a resolution declaring the Boston American to be fair and deciding against the [illegible] who have been making war on the American aroused [illegible] interest in labor circles.

The decision was looked upon as of [illegible] interest, owing to the fact that it disposed of the question as to whether [illegible] attempt to fix the price [illegible] of union labor shall [illegible].

[illegible] extent of the decision was not learned [illegible] the day, owing to the absence from Washington of Secretary Morrison, who had the text of the resolutions in his possession.

President Samuel Gompers, in announcing the decision of the Executive Council, however, said:

"The convention holds that the Boston American belongs on the fair list and should not be termed unfair by the union. We hold that no labor organization had the moral right to declare the American unfair under the circumstances, and the action of the Newsboys' Union in this instance is not approved by the American Federation of Labor."

Not Supported by A. F. of L.

President Gompers said further that the Central Labor Union of Boston had endorsed the action of the boys, but that the heads of the American Federation of Labor did not agree with the subsidiary body.

Vice-President James O'Connell, who is also president of the International Association of Machinists and a member of the A. F. of L. Executive Council, said:

"The decision follows out the well established labor principle that labor does not propose to dictate to a concern recognized as fair, what price it shall put upon its product. The employer has a right to name the price at which he can afford to sell the article, just as we have the right to name the price upon labor.

"For this reason, the fight made against the Boston American was not supported by the A. F. of L. Had the fight of the newsboys been directed toward a paper that is unfair to labor, and been on account of such unfairness to union labor, the strike would have been in order. But, as we view it, the fight was made against a perfectly fair paper, solely on account of the price at which that paper was sold.

"It would have been inconsistent with the teachings of unionism to have countenanced such a position, and for this reason we disapproved of the step taken by the Boston union."

Endorse Mr. Gomper's Stand.

Except for a few leaders in the Boston Central Labor Union who have been most active in antagonizing the American, opinion among labor men throughout New England yesterday was practically unanimous in upholding the decision of President Gompers and the other members of the National Executive Council.

Employer May Fix Price of Product.

Newton F. McPhail, president of Boston Typographical Union No. 13, in commenting on the decision, said:

"The decision of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor in condemning the boycott of the American by certain labor organizations was not unexpected to me. I have claimed through the entire controversy that the final sober judgment of organized labor in this matter, as in most other matters affecting labor, would be right, and right in the American controversy could only mean that labor organizations must recognize the right of a manufacturer of a label product to set his own price on that product.

"Boston Typographical Union was the first labor organization to protest against the injustice of the attempted boycott of the American. We have on two occasions unanimously passed resolutions pointing out the dangers which such procedure might lead to and calling upon organized labor and its friends to patronize papers bearing our label, of which the American was one. For this action we have been condemned by certain men and interests, but we have consistently stuck to our position. Of course, I am delighted, as are the members of the organization which I have the honor to represent, that the highest court of labor in this country has set its seal of approval on our position.

Important Step in Union History.

"I regret that the controversy arose. But I rejoice that organized labor has spoken in no uncertain terms and that its decision is that an employer such as the American, which grants good wages, hours and working conditions to its employes, has the right to fix its own price on its product without fear of a boycott. To have decided otherwise and to have followed it out to its logical conclusion would have meant a conflict sooner or later, which could have resulted in nothing but disaster to the labor movement. I believe this view of the matter appealed to the great majority of the members of labor organizations throughout New England, as during the past week we have been in receipt of dozens of letters informing us that the position of the Typographical Union in the controversy had been indorsed.

"An important step in the history of trades unionism has been taken in this decisive action of the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. It will tend to place the labor movement on a firmer foundation than ever in this country, on a foundation on which every great movement must rest if it hopes to succeed—that of justice."

FITZGERALD WON'T BE CHAIRMAN OF THE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

Announces Withdrawal and Says He May Not Be Delegate-at-Large

EX-MAYOR John F. Fitzgerald will not be the chairman of the Democratic State Convention, which is to convene in Faneuil Hall, May 7, for the election of four delegates to the Democratic National Convention in Denver.

The ex-Mayor so announced in an official statement last night, closely following a "call down" which Chairman James W. Synan of the Democratic State Committee gave the sub-committee empowered to arrange for the Faneuil Hall convention.

This [illegible] to represent the [illegible] Lomasney, McNary, Fitzgerald [illegible] Democratic [illegible] in Boston.

Synan After Committee

Chairman Synan not only repudiated the action of the sub-committee in recommending that ex-Mayor Fitzgerald be the chairman, but he announced that the subcommittee had exceeded its powers. He stated, too, that it [illegible] for the State Democracy to [illegible] a tail to the kite of [illegible] in Boston.

With the prospect of a lively contest in the State Committee, Fitzgerald chose last night to gracefully withdraw.

He says:

"I was [illegible] surprised as anybody when I saw my name mentioned in connection with the chairmanship of the convention.

"No human being had mentioned the matter to me, and now that it has become a subject of newspaper discussion I desire to say that I am not a candidate and will not permit the use of my name in this connection, and as I feel now I will not be a candidate for delegate-at-large, though [illegible] endorsed by the Democratic ward leaders.

Sticks to Course

"I have never sought this honor [illegible] my entrance into politics, feeling that there should be as wide a distribution as possible of political honors.

"We want no more Springfield conventions, and every man who [illegible] of decent Democracy in his veins ought to map a course sacrificing if necessary his own personal and political advancement for the general party welfare.

"This will be my course, and I intend to stick to it."

CAUGHT BY DOOR OF CAR; DRAGGED

Tugging helplessly at his overcoat, which had become caught in one of the automatic closing doors of the East Boston tunnel cars, Walter S. Heath, aged twenty-eight years, of Bennington street, East Boston, was dragged along the platform of the Devonshire street station of the East Boston tunnel for a distance of twenty feet before the car could be brought to a stop.

He was rushed to the Relief Hospital, where it was found he was suffering from contusions of the body and head.

FAINT HOPE FOR LIFE OF GOVERNOR GUILD.

FAMILY NEAR AT HAND

Chief Executive Said to Be Suffering With Cirrhosis of Liver and Bright's Disease.

OFFICIAL BULLETINS MIDNIGHT.

"The condition of Governor Guild at the present time is unchanged from what it was this afternoon. He is now resting comfortably. I do not expect any change to-night, and this will be my last visit until Sunday morning." -Dr. Frederick B. Winslow.

7 P. M.

"The Governor slept comfortably most of the afternoon. His condition remains unchanged." —Dr. Winslow

WHILE the bulletins issued by Dr. Winslow late last night stated that there was no change in the condition of Governor Guild, evident anxiety was shown by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge and Courtenay Guild, who were the last people to leave the house.

Instead of going to his own home, the Governor's brother remained for the night at the home of Dr. Winslow.

Senator Lodge was a guest at the home of Dr. Amos L. Mason at No. 265 Clarendon street, near Marlboro.

Attorney General Malone was with Senator Lodge, Edward C. Johnson, Mrs. Guild's father, and Courteney Guild at the Guild residence on Marlboro street until 11 o'clock last night while Dr. Winslow was making his last call for the night on the Governor. It was noticed that none save the physicians went upstairs. All wore anxious faces when they came out.

Even Physicians Anxious.

Developments showed that even the physicians were anxious. A conference between Drs. Winslow, Joslin and Shattuck was held at Dr. Joslin's home on Bay State road shortly after [illegible] o'clock.

They were together for some time, but none would tell the conclusions that had been arrived at. All three of them were with the Governor at various times during the day.

That Governor Guild is suffering from cirrhosis of the liver and Bright's disease, is said to have been admitted by members of the family, although the doctors have not [illegible].

Mr. Johnson, when he came out of father-in-law when he came out of the house at 6 o'clock, was very grave. In answer to a question as to the Governor's condition, he said:

"[illegible] Dr. Winslow told [illegible] that [illegible] are very much [illegible] but [illegible] he still holds out [illegible] and if his condition remains the same [illegible] his chances for recovery will be good."

That the Governor does not realize how dangerous [illegible] was made known in [illegible] the Sunday American [illegible] nurse in attendance, who yesterday afternoon was obtained to gain the [illegible] for the first time since the chief executive's condition took a turn for the worse.

The nurse is William Cook, who became acquainted with the Governor during the Spanish War. The Governor remembered him, and when it was decided [illegible] nurse was needed asked that Cook be sent for.

"Jokes Family," Says Nurse.

"He does not realize his critical condition," Nurse Cook said. "He jokes with his family when they enter the room. He is in much pain all of the time, and we have to turn him over in bed every so often. While two of us have been on duty since his illness, the work has become so trying, we getting little sleep during the night, that Dr. Winslow has detailed another nurse on the case. Two of us will always be on duty while the other sleeps.

"Neither digitalis nor oxygen have been administered to him as yet, but of course we have them ready in case of necessity. He has a very powerful constitution, and we still have hopes for his recovery."

It also became known last night that Senator Crane, in Washington, talking over the telephone with Lieutenant Governor Draper was informed that it was not expected that the Governor could survive his illness.

Mrs. Guild received a number of telegrams, some of which she was enabled to answer. President Roosevelt asked that he

In reply Mrs. Guild telegraphed: "My heartfelt thanks [illegible] to the citizens of Nahant for your good wishes to Governor Guild and [illegible] sympathy for me."

Strange Woman Visitor

Because of the actions of a strange woman dressed in black velvet at the Governor's house, the police officer on duty was instructed to allow no one up the steps save those authorized by the members of the family.

Miss Murphy, the housekeeper, reported to the police that the woman came up the steps and stood on the [illegible] for a while, as though she was trying to get into the house. When Miss Murphy asked her what she wanted the woman turned and ran down the steps.

The services of J[illegible] Leman, a private detective, who is Adjutant of Hugh Wolliten Camp No. 1, United Spanish War Veterans, of which the Governor is a member, were tendered to the family. Leman spent the night patrolling along Marlboro street and was given the entree to the house.

At 9 o'clock, when the Count and Countess Guidi left, none of Mrs. Guild's relatives were in the house. Her father, Mr. Johnson, and Courtenay Guild, brother of the Governor, arrived at 10 o'clock, soon after Dr. Winslow came. They were accompanied by Senator Lodge and Attorney General Malone.

When they were admitted instead of going upstairs to the floor where the Governor's [illegible] is located they remained [illegible] the [illegible] on the first floor, where they engaged in [illegible] conversation [illegible] Dr. Winslow [illegible] the examination of the Governor.

All Show Anxiety

All [illegible] together and all showed their anxiety.

"The Governor's condition is no worse, I am glad to say," Dr. Winslow remarked. To which Courtenay Guild added, "Let's hope he gets a good night's sleep."

After their departure the lights in the Guild house were turned down low and it looked as though the Governor was trying to sleep.

Unless there should be demand for his services, Dr. Winslow planned not to return to the house again during the night, although he was near enough to be reached very quickly.

In the churches throughout the city regardless of denomination, prayers are being offered for the recovery of the Governor. In the Jewish synagogues throughout the city yesterday the Rabbis spoke of his illness and asked the prayers of the congregations.

Dr. Winslow to-day will issue bulletins on the Governor's condition at 9 a. m., 1 p. m., 3 p. m., 6 p. m. and 10 p. m.

Police Guard Street

Every precaution was taken to have the police keep teams away from the house and to have the slightest noise avoided. For that reason two police officers were stationed at either end of the street, which a [illegible] guard in front of the house, cautioning messenger boys and even the callers to refrain from ringing the bell.

George L. Clark, who lives directly opposite the Governor, came to the rescue of the newspaper men by placing his front parlor at their disposal. Thus at no time was there a crowd [illegible] gated in front of the residence.

As it grew dark [illegible] at parts of the street [illegible] house [illegible] the [illegible] they [illegible] dwindled away [illegible] boy [illegible] the sidewalk [illegible] down.

Wife's Constant Vigil

On the [illegible] of the [illegible] room occupied by the Governor, the curtains were drawn and the lights turned down very low.

In the [illegible] Mrs. Guild and the nurses kept watch save when the Governor [illegible] and then his wife [illegible] for a brief rest. When he awoke she came into the room.

It was noted that Mrs. Guild has [illegible] so apparent [illegible] her constant vigil [illegible] told on her strength. She is bearing up extremely well, but it was said she had to be cautioned about taking rest.

PRAYERS FOR GOVERNOR GUILD OFFERED AT CITY CHURCHES YESTERDAY

At the church services in Boston yesterday prayers were offered for the recovery of Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., in the various Episcopal churches of the city where Lenten services were held and at the Temple of Ohabie Shalom, where Rabbi M. M. Eichler asked Divine aid for the Governor. Prayers were also offered for him at the Cathedral and other Catholic churches where services were held.

The prayer offered by Rabbi M. M. Eichler yesterday for the recovery of Governor Guild was as follows: "Lord and Father who art ever righteous to those who call upon thee in truth, we approach thee humbly and sincerely to implore thy mercy on behalf of our brother, the chief executive of the Commonwealth, Curtis Guild, Jr., now lying on a bed of pain and sickness. Show compassion unto thy servant and send him a perfect healing, that he may again be able to continue his righteous work on behalf of the welfare of the people of this Commonwealth. Hear the prayer of the people assembled in thy sanctuary."

The prayer offered at the Episcopal churches was:

"O Father of mercies and God of all comforts, our only help in time of need, look down from heaven, we humbly beseech thee. Behold, visit and relieve [illegible] servant the Governor of this State. Look upon him with the eyes of [illegible] comfort him with a sense of [illegible] preserve him from the tem[illegible] give him [illegible] affliction; and in thy good time restore him to health and enable him to lead the residue of his life in thy fear [illegible] thy glory, or else give him grace [illegible] take thy visitation that after this [illegible] life ended he may dwell with thee [illegible] everlasting through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen."

SCORES OF NOTES OF SYMPATHY FOR GUILD

All Day Long, Procession of Callers Left at Governor's Home Messages of Hope.

Scores of prominent Bostonians and many from all over the State called at Governor Guild's house on Marlboro street yesterday, to leave a message of hope and sympathy.

From 8 o'clock in the morning until after 6 o'clock in the night friends and admirers kept coming and going.

Only a few were admitted to the house and these included members of the Governor's family, Mrs. Guild's relatives and Attorney General Dana Malone.

Automobiles by the score came as far as either Dartmouth or Clarendon street, where the police were stationed to keep the teams from passing by the Governor's home. Their occupants would inquire the latest news from the bedside and then whirl away.

Messages of Sympathy

Messenger boys came every five minutes. They were received at the basement door by Miss Murphy, one of the maids, where the messages from all over the country were sorted and then sent upstairs to Mrs. Guild.

To those that she could answer Mrs. Guild sent immediate replies.

Many beautiful bouquets were sent to the house by messenger and were taken in at the basement door.

Men and women prominent in society, representatives of all religious creeds, [illegible] members of the Legislature [illegible] called and left their cards at the [illegible] the basket provided for that purpose. On many of them there were written [illegible] messages of sympathy.

Rev. Alexander Mann, rector of Trinity Church, where prayers are being said every afternoon for the Governor's recovery, wrote, "Best wishes for speedy recovery." Rabbi Charles Fleischer's card read "Kindest inquiries."

Cards Fill Basket.

So rapidly did the cards fill the basket that the Countess Guidi, sister of Mrs. Guild, who spent much of the day at the house, was compelled to empty it several [illegible]

[illegible] the arrival of Dr. Frederick Winslow, the family physician, who has [illegible] in attendance [illegible] his first [illegible] was posted [illegible] of the house:

[illegible] Governor passed a restless night. His condition remains the same.

A little later Dr. Winslow [illegible] to the house and spent nearly [illegible] Bradlee. When he came out he had this official [illegible] sent to Secretary Dean at the State House:

The Governor passed a fair night, was [illegible] restless, but is holding his own this [illegible] There is no apparent change [illegible] in his condition.

It was [illegible] that if the Governor [illegible] his strength through the night [illegible] would be a report in the morning [illegible] condition had improved.

Courtenay Guild, the Governor's brother, one of those spending most of his time at the house, arrived at 8 o'clock and remained there the greater part of the day.

Twice Attorney-General Dana Malone was another at the house, but he was not admitted to the room. After his first visit he said:

"There is no change for better or worse. The Governor remains just about the same. I didn't see him this morning. No one is allowed in the room save the immediate relatives, the physicians and nurses."

[illegible] was about the tenor of all the [illegible] made by those who were admitted [illegible] house.

[illegible] Johnson, Mrs. Guild's father, [illegible] there were three nurses [illegible] the Governor and that two of [illegible] were always on duty. He said [illegible] was no change in the Governor's condition.

The gravity of the case, however, seemed [illegible] impressed on the faces of all those [illegible] Especially was this noticed in the relatives, and while the physicians were [illegible] their reports it [illegible] that they appreciated [illegible] was very critical [illegible] that [illegible] not improved at least [illegible] the day.

While Dr. Winslow announced that he did not believe there would be a consultation of the other two physicians and himself, he had hardly been in the house ten minutes for his second visit at noon than Dr. Joslin arrived. They were in the house nearly an hour.

As they came out Dr. Shattuck arrived. [illegible] a few [illegible] conversation with the other two [illegible] entered his carriage and drove away. At this time Dr. Winslow said:

"The Governor is now resting comfortably. His condition remains unchanged."

Dr. Joslin refused to express an opinion.

Says There Is Hope.

Dr. Winslow was asked, "Do you feel that there is hope for the Governor?"

He replied, "Yes, I feel so."

In this those who anxiously awaited the news found a little encouragement.

There were no callers admitted after [illegible] visit, save the Countess Guidi, until after 2 o'clock. Then Attorney General Malone arrived and Drs. Winslow and Shattuck.

All three came out accompanied by Courtenay Guild about 3.30. "The Governor is no worse," said Mr. Guild, and the others [illegible] assent.

[illegible] Attorney General Malone had [illegible] the sick room and had talked with the Governor. The nature of the conversation was not divulged.

The two doctors entered a carriage and were driven to the residence of Dr. Joslin on Bay State road. As they started away Dr. Shattuck said:

"I am pleased to say at least that the Governor is no worse."

They had told the family that they expected no change for a while at least.

Doctors in Consultation.

The consultation at Dr. Joslin's house was a long one, and just what the physicians decided they refused to state. It was the first they have held away from the Guild residence. After they went away Rabbi Fleischer and the Count and Countess Guidi arrived. The relatives were admitted.

DEFIANCE SALE CONTINUED

The public responded so generously to our defiance sale announcement of last week that we have decided to continue the sale for another week. We once more have thrown down the gauntlet to our would-be price competitors, one and all, and defy them to duplicate our prices upon any articles found in our stock. We make no bombastic statements about "mark-down" sales, "half price" sales, &c., &c., but simply say we are not undersold by any one. We give below a few examples of the values we offer. See our immense assortment of goods and note carefully the prices at which we offer them. Mail orders carefully filled when accompanied by check or money order. See our window displays. They are one of the sights of the town. And always follow the crowd to

'KELSEY' KING'S ALIAS SAILING ON ETRURIA

Boston American Traces Financial Agent to New York Hotel and Steamer in Flight to Europe.

The Boston Sunday American [illegible] presents evidence [illegible] missing financial agent fled [illegible] New York to [illegible] on [illegible] Etruria under the assumed name [illegible] "Charles W. Kelsey."

Kelsey registered at the Hotel Marseilles, West One Hundred [illegible] street, New York [illegible] the same day that King left Boston. A photograph of King, reproduced herewith, has been identified by the night clerk and bell boy as that of [illegible] W. Kelsey of Boston.

The same picture [illegible] of the Cunard line was [illegible] the likeness of Kelsey [illegible] ried aboard with two [illegible] the Etruria [illegible] tiously about before he walked up the gang plank.

A Boston American reporter traced the signature of Charles W. Kelsey on the register of the Hotel Marseilles. William E. Hingston, the [illegible] expert, declares last night that [illegible] questionably written by [illegible] King.

King Signed "Kelsey"

After comparing the Kelsey signature with the well-known signature of King, Mr. Hingston said:

"There is no [illegible] that the two signatures were written by the same man. It is my opinion that King wrote the 'Charles W. Kelsey' [illegible] work. The Kelsey signature shows [illegible] regularity which would not [illegible] natural signature."

The handwriting expert's conclusions in detail are given below. The King and the Kelsey signatures are reproduced [illegible] column, that the reader may compare them.

The American reporter who traced King to the Hotel Marseilles [illegible] steamer on which [illegible] that he went to England [illegible] clew to his movements from [illegible] the head baggage [illegible] line, at pier No. [illegible]

On looking at King's picture, he said instantly, "Yes, I saw [illegible] aboard the Etruria on Washington's birthday. Just before she put off he came down the dock and he had two valises. I noted him particularly because of that, for most passengers have at least one trunk.

Looked About Cautiously

"I know that was the man. He was a big fellow, about 200 pounds, and he had a jaunty carriage. I remember the mustache, too, and I noticed also that [illegible] though he was a late arrival he looked from side to side along the [illegible] before he went up the gangplank."

Baggageman [illegible] is a [illegible] and his long years of service along the water front have [illegible] keen perception. He impresses [illegible] man who [illegible] sends travelers [illegible] he could not [illegible] the man whose features were shown in the photo.

A passenger list of the Etruria [illegible] ary 22 [illegible] New York, showed the name Charles M. Kelsey. The letters M and W are easily mistaken for each other. This was the only name in either the saloon or second cabin lists which in any way resembled the name of [illegible] Cunard Agent Fulton said that Kelsey had given no address but the Hotel Marseilles in engaging his passage. This was a slight [illegible] He could not tell at what office Kelsey booked. It might have been at any one of twenty different ones in New England.

Identified by Hotel Clerk.

A visit to the hotel showed the chirography of "Charles W. Kelsey" of Boston. There is no such man known in this city. The reporter was at once struck with the similarity in the handwriting of King and "Kelsey."

When shown the picture of Cardenio F. King, the night clerk said: "Yes, that's the man who came in here on the night of February 20 and registered as Kelsey of Boston. I remember him especially because there had been an unusual occurrence in the office here just before his arrival [illegible] he is [illegible] he signed his [illegible] [illegible] of the bellboys, the [illegible] remember that [illegible] and gave you [illegible] the picture."

[illegible] bell boy [illegible] know him anywhere. He's a good fellow, too. Had lots of money and used us white. He just had two valises, no other baggage."

[illegible] said that the man [illegible] two [illegible] most [illegible] supplied [illegible] King [illegible] ever been noted for lavish expenditures.

Seen by New Yorker

A New York business man is reported as having recognized King on board the Etruria as she was heading down New York Bay, and this passenger is said to have [illegible] to this effect to a friend [illegible] the post.

[illegible] was also reported as registered at a London hotel of the [illegible] but this story has never [illegible]

Friends of Mrs. C. F. King in Boston and [illegible] where she is living with her two youngest sons, assert that she does not know where her husband is. King is said to have realized more than [illegible] before he left Boston on [illegible] but his close friends deny this, declaring that he had less than $1,500 when [illegible]

KING WROTE "KELSEY" SIGNATURE, DECLARES EXPERT W. E. HINGSTON

Handwriting Expert William E. Hingston, who after comparing the signatures of C. F. King and "Charles W. Kelsey" declared that the same man wrote both, gives his conclusions and his reasons for the same in the following statement to the Boston Sunday American:

By William E. Hingston.

WM E. HINGSTON

You will understand that I am giving my opinion from traced signatures. There is no doubt in my mind that the two signatures were written by the same man. I do not believe that there is such a person as Charles W. Kelsey who writes his signature just like this because a man naturally writes his signature automatically. By that I mean his natural, familiar handwriting, such as he uses when signing his name every day or frequently.

A man giving a business check, for instance, will remember in his mind the name of the cashier, the amount, date and so forth six months from date. And if you say to him, "You did not sign," he will begin to apologize, for he has made his signature so many times by automatic movement that he has forgotten whether he really did in this particular case sign his name. How many business men would try to open their sealed letters after once saying that they had signed?

Kelsey Signature Irregular.

The signature of "Kelsey" shows an irregularity which would not occur in a natural signature. The movements vary in size in the word "Charles." Notice the letter "s" in Charles and in "Kelsey." One is almost double the other in size. If it were a natural signature they would be the same, especially in the handwriting of the man who has become so proficient in handwriting as the author of the signature in question.

The "C" in the "Charles W. Kelsey" and [illegible] King [illegible] back in the [illegible] the slanting back at [illegible] forty or so degrees, [illegible] in the writing [illegible]

[illegible] in the final letter "g" [illegible] It is an imperfect way [illegible] He makes [illegible] to make a "q." This [illegible] became a habit of [illegible] letter of his name. In the "Charles Kelsey" [illegible] the same habit, which would [illegible] a man who [illegible] as well as "Kelsey."

Slant of Forty Degrees.

I would say at once that King was the [illegible] wrote Kelsey. Mr. King also [illegible] a slant of forty degrees over the [illegible] Spencerian hand taught in schools. [illegible] that King wrote [illegible] Charles W. Kelsey." This is not guesswork. I do not say that I am right [illegible] I am giving my opinion [illegible] which I am using as an [illegible] If [illegible] the original writing of [illegible] I would give a positive opinion. If you could furnish me with a half dozen signatures of King, so that I could note [illegible] habits of the writing [illegible] writing [illegible] [illegible] in writing are those [illegible] disguise because he does not know that he has them.

KING'S OFFICES ARE RUDELY STRIPPED OF RICH FURNISHINGS

The palatial offices of C. F. King, the missing financial agent occupying the entire fourth floor of the Journal Building, are today dismantled, part of the furniture having been placed in storage late yesterday.

The sound of the stock ticker, which has been heard daily since February 20, despite the absence of the promoter, is now stilled. The telephones are disconnected.

All personal property was deeded by King to his wife just before he left Boston, but he had also borrowed $5,000 from George A. Sampson, a Tremont street [illegible] on January 19, giving a mortgage to cover the loan. If Mrs. King [illegible] with interest for two [illegible] April 11 the furniture will revert to [illegible] Otherwise Mr. Sampson will [illegible] sale. None of the proceeds [illegible] to satisfy those [illegible] creditors [illegible] as the property was [illegible] King's name.

On March 18 Trustees [illegible] King sent out a letter to creditors [illegible] them to place their claims in the hands of the law firm of Carver, Wardner & [illegible] who, according to the announcement, would look after their interests without expense.

Recommends Lawyers.

This law firm, which is recommended in the circular, is counsel for the trustees King named. Mr. Wardner asked the officials of the [illegible] criminal court for permission to be heard on any application for warrant for King's arrest before such application was made by John G. Metcalf [illegible] one of the bankruptcy petitioners.

Besides, Abruzzi is one of the richest European princes. The American papers also make too much fuss over the question of titles and rights. There is [illegible]

"He once gave me his ideas concerning marriages. He said that a king or even a prince should always listen to the dictates of his heart. [illegible]

Kings Ideas Are Modern.

Thus history shows that the Italian royal family are not sticklers for marriage with their equals in rank. Signor Tittoni, the Italian premier, said:

"Although I am unable to speak officially of the King's approval, he would naturally prefer that all members of his house marry into royal or noble families. But his ideas are nevertheless entirely [illegible]. As for the duke renouncing his [illegible], such as it is, nothing of the kind has been discussed."

JAPAN TO VOUCH FOR SAFETY OF FLEET

Takahira Declares Visit Will Restore the Confidence of Both Nations.

IS PROOF OF FRIENDSHIP

Navy Board Considers the Itinerary for the Return of the Battleships.

Washington, March 21.—The general board of the Navy Department in conjunction with Rear Admiral Pillsbury, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, by direction of the Secretary of the Navy, has taken up consideration of the itinerary for the return of the fleet from the west to the east coast. A number of changes will be necessary because of the visit which will be made to Japan.

The question of saving time, by sending the fleet direct to Japan from Australia and then to Manila and home instead of visiting Manila before going to Japan, is one that must be settled.

To Visit Australia First.

It is the intention to adhere to the original program as closely as possible by which it was intended to send the fleet from San Francisco to Honolulu, to Samoa, and then to Sydney. Since it has already been announced that the fleet would visit Australia first, it is not considered good taste in naval circles to change that plan [illegible]

President Roosevelt has been desirous of welcoming the fleet back home and having a grand review just as he did when the ships sailed from Norfolk on December 16. Since the Japan visit was decided upon, however, it is doubtful if the fleet can be brought home before the President retires on March 4 next.

The Japanese ambassador, Baron Kogoro Takahira, talked freely and frankly to-day regarding the forthcoming visit of the [illegible] battleships to his country [illegible] question of a possible [illegible] ships while they are in Japanese waters.

Vouch for Fleet's Safety

"You may rest assured," said he, "that the safety of the fleet and every man aboard will be vouched for by the Japanese government, as it always is by any government when foreign warships are visiting its ports. There will be no untoward incident to mar the effect of this manifestation of the friendly feeling that exists between my government and that of the United States.

"We were really at a loss as to what action to take. We could not very well invite the United States to send the fleet to one of our ports if there were no intention of having it visit that part of the world. Just as soon as we learned that the fleet had been ordered to stop at Manila, which is comparatively close [illegible] that we [illegible] visit to Japan.

"The fact that we have asked for the fleet, even as Great Britain has done for [illegible] has been so promptly granted should be sufficient evidence to certain disturbing elements in Japan and the United States, as well as those in other countries, who apparently would like to see trouble between the two countries, that Japan and the United States are determined to maintain their most friendly relations that have extended over so many years.

Visit Proof of Friendship.

"We have not suggested the time of the visit or the port to be thus honored. Inasmuch as we do not know the plans of your government for the movement of the fleet we have merely asked that the ships be sent and have left the remainder to the pleasure or convenience of the Washington officials.

"I believe," said the ambassador, in conclusion, "that this visit will do more than anything else to restore the confidence of the people of each country in the other and more securely cement the close relations we have always enjoyed, and which we have every sensible reason for continuing to enjoy."

D'ABRUZZI, HAPPY, SAILS FOR HOME; ADMITS THAT HE WILL SOON RETURN

New York, March 21.—"Everything is all right. You must not believe everything you see in the newspapers that is sent from Washington. These stories are not true. [illegible] from [illegible] and a wrong [illegible] placed upon their [illegible]

This statement was made by the Duke d'Abruzzi before he sailed for Europe on the Cunard liner Lusitania.

A cablegram from Rome to-day says that the official organ of the Italian Government admits the engagement of Miss Elkins and the Duke of the Abruzzi.

Smiling and happy, his every word and action showing that his love affair was progressing to his satisfaction, the Duke of Abruzzi boarded the Cunard liner Lusitania at [illegible] o'clock this morning. His baggage had preceded him by several hours. He is booked as Luigi Sarto, his family [illegible] his cabin A6 adjoins the captain's.

[illegible] to have a care in [illegible] almost all the time that he talked to the newspaper men, and his whole attitude was that of a successful suitor, whose suit had been smiled upon, not only by the woman of his choice and her family, but by every one to whom he owed any duty. He refused to say when he intended to return, but intimated that he would not be gone very long.

ARMY PLANS MILITARY PAGEANT AS BATTLESHIP FLEET REACHES FRISCO

San Francisco, March 21.—Every branch of the army will take part in the street parade which will follow the arrival of Admiral Evans's fleet. The army contingent will be headed by General Funston and his staff. The military pageant will include a provisional regiment of coast artillery, the entire Twenty-second Infantry, a squadron of the Fourteenth Cavalry, a battalion of field artillery and a company of engineers and a company of the Signal Corps. There will be nearly 8,000 men in line.

BAR ANARCHIST PAPER FROM MAILS

Washington, March 21.—A new crusade against anarchy has been begun by the government. La Questione Sociale, an anarchistic Italian paper published in Paterson, N. J., and credited with a circulation of 30,000, was to-day debarred from the United States mails by order of the Postmaster-General, under authority conferred upon him by the postal regulations relative to immoral matter.

JEALOUS HUSBAND KILLS COUNTRYMAN

Riddles Wife's Former Sweetheart When Latter Calls to Have Letter Written.

Providence, March 21.—Maddened by jealousy [illegible] Vorlmon [illegible] years old, released to-day from a hospital [illegible] in the Vorlmon [illegible] before the eyes of Vorlmon's wife, who was writing a letter for the dead man [illegible] and [illegible] murdered man were [illegible]

Desert appeared and went upstairs to the Vorlmon apartment, where he sat down at a table with Mrs. Vorlmon. The husband followed him and standing in the doorway fired at Desert point blank.

The wounded man managed to stagger to the doorway, when Vorlmon fired again. The second bullet knocked the man down stairs, where Vorlmon followed him and fired three more shots, all of which took effect.

The police were called, but Vorlmon made no resistance and at the police station he is said to have admitted that he deliberately planned to kill the man who, he claims, had ruined his home.

PASSENGERS ABOARD THE LUSITANIA FAIL TO RECOGNIZE THE DUKE

Fear Gotham Trolley Riots Today on "Pay as You Enter" Edict

Have the Right Change, Don't Smoke, Don't Crowd, Says Company to Travelers.

New York, March 21.—New York promises to have its liveliest Sunday in many months through the putting into operation of the new "pay as you enter" street [illegible] two of the busiest lines in the city, the Fourth and Madison avenues. [illegible] new cars have been tried rioting [illegible] have marked their [illegible] police [illegible] are prepared [illegible] with serious outbreaks as a result of the innovation.

The new rules adopted by the company, and to be [illegible] by the public [illegible] expected to add materially to the trouble. One of these rules forbids passengers to stand on the platforms and prohibits smoking or carrying lighted cigars or cigarettes into cars. Another fixes the maximum number of passengers to be carried as seventy-five, while cars cannot start from terminals with more than fifty passengers aboard.

The "pay as you enter" scheme contemplates that every person must have the exact change for his fare.

THE WHITE SCOURGE
Neglected Colds MAY CAUSE Consumption

MRS. MARY MEYER. MISS BEULAH B. BROOME. MISS JOSIE SCHAETZEL.

MRS. MARY MEYER, [illegible] Avenue, near [illegible] Road, [illegible] N. Y., writes:

"I have been annoyed with a cough for years. Often it was so bad that I could not sleep half the night. Many people thought I had consumption.

Consumption Was Feared.

A woman recommended Peruna to me two years ago. I began to take Peruna and now I am perfectly free from a cough. I am glad to say that Peruna cured me entirely.

"I take Peruna occasionally when I do not feel well and I also give it to my children.

"Peruna is the best medicine for coughs and colds. I have told many people how much Peruna has helped me."

Mrs. Hettie Green, R. R. No. 6, Iuka, Ill., writes as follows of the efficacy of Peruna:

"Last November I had catarrh and felt so miserable I thought that I would go into consumption.

"I tried so many doctors and medicines but nothing did me any good only Peruna.

"After I began the use of Peruna I began to improve in every way. My head did not hurt so much, my stomach is all right, my bowels are regular, my appetite good, my complexion clear, my eyes are bright and am gaining in flesh and strength.

"I think Peruna has no equal as a catarrh remedy."

Peruna tends to lessen the cough, decreases the expectoration, strengthens the patient, increases the appetite and in many cases procures sound, refreshing sleep.

Miss Beulah B. Broome, 4[illegible] 12th St., N. E., Washington, D. C., writes:

"I have suffered from weak lungs and catarrhal troubles for four years, brought on by many neglected colds, but on the recommendation of a friend I gave Peruna an honest trial and I am pleased to state that it restored me to perfect health. There is not the slighest trace of catarrh in my system and my lungs are perfectly sound.

Weak Lungs For Years.

"I unhesitatingly give this testimonial."

Mrs. William Hohmann, 569 N. Paulina St., Chicago, Ill., writes:

"I suffered with catarrh of the bronchial tubes and had a terrible cough ever since a child. After a while it got so bad I had to cough both winter and summer. Finally I burst a blood vessel in my throat from the strain of coughing, next a blood vessel in my stomach, so I kept getting worse and [illegible] and even then could get no relief. I thought, and everyody else, that I had consumption.

"Reading the papers about Peruna I decided to try it, without the least bit of hope that it would do me any good. But after taking three bottles I noticed a change. My appetite got better, so I kept on, never got discouraged.

"Finally, I seemed not to cough so much, and the pains in my chest got better. I am well now. I cannot tell you how grateful I am, and I cannot thank Peruna enough. It has cured where doctors have failed. People who think they have consumption better give it a trial."

Miss Josie Schaetzel, General Delivery, Appleton, Wisconsin, writes:

"I contracted a severe cold which settled on my lungs in very short order and it was not long until it developed into a serious case of catarrh. Every morning I would raise a lot of phlegm, which was very disagreeable. My digestion was poor and my lungs sore.

"After a few doses of Peruna I began to mend, and felt that if I kept on taking it it would not be long until I would be well. I was right, for in four weeks I was well again.

Consumption Prevented.

"I think Peruna is a grand medicine, and wish to add my testimony to the many others you have."

The fight against consumption is becoming a national problem.

Everywhere we hear of sanitariums established at the expense of the state for the treatment of the vast army of consumptives.

The open air treatment, fresh air and sunlight are recognized by the medical profession generally as being the greatest necessities in the treatment of consumption in all its stages.

Dr. Hartman has for many years advocated the fresh air treatment for consumption. At the same time he has recognized Peruna as a useful palliative for the many distressing symptoms which accompany the white plague.

The promptness with which Peruna relieves a fresh cold, and even removes chronic colds, is well known. This ranks Peruna as a reliable prophylactic against consumption.

PASTOR ROUSED BY USE OF HIS LETTER

Merry Political War Stirred Up in Campaign for National Delegates.

PARISHIONER IN CONTEST

PASTOR IN CLASH WITH POLITICAL LEADERS OVER TAFT DELEGATES

REV-DR-PHILIP S MOXOM

Springfield, March 21.—Rev. Dr. Philip S. Moxom, pastor of the fashionable South Church, and Chairman Paul [illegible] Lombard of the Rep[illegible] city committee, Representative Daniel H. Morgan of this city and Former Senator William H. Feiker of Northampton, the two latter being Taft candidates to the Republican National Convention, are engaged in a stiff political battle because the Morgan-Feiker supporters are using a letter by Dr. Moxom as campaign material. Now comes Dr. Moxom with a statement that his letter, incorporated into [illegible] circular for political purposes, is unauthorized.

Dr. Moxom's ire was aroused, say those favoring a delegation for Taft, because Winford N. Caldwell of this city, president of the American Writing Paper Company and a member of Dr. Moxom's church, is also a candidate for delegate but desires to go [illegible] pledged. They further say the doctor doesn't care to go throughout the district as opposing Caldwell and apparently favoring Morgan and Feiker.

"The whole trouble is the American Writing Paper Company has put the screws on," said Mr. Lombard. "The American Paper Company is using its influence for Caldwell and Wheeler.

"Nevertheless we are going ahead and use the Moxom letter, which was evidently written in good faith."

TAFT HAS ONLY 350 VOTES SAYS ANTIS

Washington, March 21.—Campaign managers of the "field against Taft" got together to-night and issued a statement sharply questioning the Hitchcock forecast of Taft strength, in which it was claimed that the Secretary would have 552 votes on the first ballot.

Conceding to Secretary Taft every delegate of whom he has even the most remote prospect, the statement read, there cannot be mustered for him in excess of 350 of the 491 votes necessary to a nomination.

It was claimed this represents the high water mark of the Taft [illegible].

"The Taft forces from now on must fight for every [illegible] was added, "and it is predicted that the next thirty days will find the Taft [illegible] unable to maintain its own [illegible] and therefore in serious danger of being stampeded."

One month before the statement predicted the field would have a lead of more than 100 votes [illegible] 140 more [illegible] could control. [illegible] In reply to the [illegible] that after [illegible] favorite son vote is given Taft will be [illegible] mustered, the opposition states that "soft spots" in the Taft column of instructed delegates will [illegible]

Hitches Up Team and Drives Young Wife and Her Affinity to Depot

Waterville, Me., March 21.—William H. Sturdivant of Oakland says that if his wife, Lillian Sturdivant, thinks more of A. J. Poussait than she does of him, she is welcome to him.

In proof of his willingness to acquiesce in Mrs. Sturdivant's preference, Sturdivant actually hitched up his gray mare to the carryall and drove his wife and Poussait to Waterville station, where they departed on the Boston express.

Sturdivant is 70 years old and his wife [illegible]. They were married nine years ago. Poussait is one of the [illegible] French [illegible] here [illegible] overseer of the poor. He is also married and had [illegible] from [illegible] Mrs. [illegible]

FATHER CLAIMS 2 BOYS POLICE FOUND

The two little McKinnon boys, William, aged seven, and James, aged ten, who were picked up at Roxbury Crossing late Friday night and taken to the Chardon Street Home by Lieutenant Lovell, were last night taken to their [illegible] father.

The two boys were found by Lieutenant Lov[illegible]. They said [illegible] had no home and were forced to spend [illegible] walking the streets.

The little fellows were taken to the Chardon Street Home, where they were cared for until the arrival of their father, William McKinnon, last night. He told the officials at the Chardon Home that he was at a loss to account for his sons' action in leaving home.

TWO CONFESS TO THE SAME MURDER

Wilkesbarre, Pa., March 21.—Although Thomas Willis, a colored man, now in jail here, has confessed the murder of Cameron Cool, an aged horse man, at West Pittston, a colored woman named Rosetta W[illegible] told the authorities today that she hired a colored man and gave him $25 to kill Cool. She says she had a grudge against Cool and wanted to get revenge. The authorities place little credence in the story told by the woman, but will investigate it.

TWELVE FACE TRIAL IN CITY GRAFT CASES ON MORAN'S RETURN TO WORK

DOUBT OVER WELCH CASE

The city graft cases now pending in the Superior [illegible] as stated yesterday [illegible] Moran [illegible]

As [illegible] Finance [illegible] ing twelve indictments against various individuals. In addition, there will probably be presented to the Grand Jury during the District Attorney's absence, under his instructions, the evidence obtained by the commission in its investigation last Monday, regarding collusive bidding by companies engaged in steam [illegible] repairs for the city. The commission itself believes that admission of collusive bidding and a division of the profits was a confession of conspiracy to defraud the city.

Welch Case in Doubt.

The [illegible] who testified in regard to this [illegible] will be [illegible] Alfred E. Cox [illegible] Mullen, former member of the [illegible] Council, treasurer of the Atlas [illegible] Works, East Boston, Duncan B. R[illegible] the James Russell [illegible] E. Lynch, treasurer of the [illegible] Boiler Works, and Charles F. [illegible] Jr., former manager of the [illegible] Iron Company.

It is [illegible] whether the evidence obtained [illegible] Finance Commission in regard to [illegible] payment of money by Contractor [illegible] F. Welch to Philip J. McGonagle when the latter was a member of the City Council, for influence [illegible]

The [illegible] fence for a men[illegible] have any interest [illegible] from a contract [illegible]

Loophole Is Found

Since the law was enacted the power to make contracts was taken out of the City Council. District Attorney Moran [illegible] of Senator and Former [illegible] did not [illegible] to the Grand Jury.

The same reason will [illegible] prevent the evidence of the alleged connection of McGonagle with Welch, Councilman Mc[illegible], Contractor Charles M. Callahan, and the Curleys with D. F. O'Connell, and James A. Mahan from being presented to the Grand Jury.

The Finance Commission unearthed evidence [illegible] William H. [illegible] connection with city contracts, [illegible] the case was not presented to the Grand Jury. In the Welch case, however, an investigation may be conducted by the [illegible] was that persons "higher up" than McGonagle were interested in the contract.

Of the twelve indictments now pending seven are in connection with the sale of a piece of property on Codman street, Dorchester, to the city for the use of the street department. The city paid twelve cents a foot for the land, or $13,370.76, while the evidence obtained by the finance commission showed that the middlemen paid the real owner but six cents a foot, or [illegible]6685.38, and that the land could be [illegible] at this price. Payment by the [illegible] to the brokers was made by two checks for equal amounts, one of which went to the owner, and the other, it is others charged, was divided by officials and Flagstone Cases Up.

The indictments against former Superintendent of Supplies Michael J. Mitchell and Thomas F. Maher are in regard to the purchase of flagstone from Maher Brothers by the Supply Department at sixty-seven cents a square foot. The city had been paying sixty-seven cents a linear foot, which is equal to two square feet of flagstone. It is set forth that the city, at the time of the purchases from Maher Brothers, could have bought flagstone at half the price it paid.

The coal investigation was the first taken up by the Finance Commission and the evidence showed that the city was mulcted of thousands of dollars by the [illegible] of an inferior grade of coal [illegible] ing from the investigations of the finance commission follow:

Maurice H. Klous, charged with the larceny of $32,623.97 from the city in connection with the sale of coal by the W. K. Niver Coal Company, of which he was agent. Bail $20,000.

Joseph T. Hiles, charged with the larceny of $3,703 from the city in connection with the sale of coal to the city by Hartfield & Hiles of Philadelphia. Bail $10,000.

HELD IN GYPSY CAMP BOY TELLS STORY OF TORTURES

Leonard Allen Found in Fall River Declares He Was Kidnapped From Home.

"My mother? Why, I wouldn't know her if she walked in here now. Don't even remember how she looked."

"Father? Oh, he's dead. I don't know when, but somebody once told me he died."

"School, did you say? Where's that? I never was there, anyway. All I've ever done is clean horses in a livery stable and work for gypsies. But I won't go with the gypsies any more."—Leonard Stanley.

Fall River, March 21.—In Superintendent Dolan's big reception room at the City Almshouse, fumbling nervously with a heavy Winter cap, wearing overalls and heavy rubber boots and having all the appearance of a rugged country chap in his early teens, a big blue-eyed boy unfolded to a reporter for the Boston Sunday American all that he could remember of his life story.

He was Leonard Allen, son of Mary Ellen Allen of Middletown, N. Y., a widow, and he was rescued by the police from a gypsy habitation in Eastern avenue, where he had been held captive in filth and squalor and with scanty nourishment, the police say, for weeks.

Tells Startling Story.

With tears streaming down his cheeks, Leonard told how he was kidnapped by gypsies from the fair grounds at Middletown, how he was bundled into a caravan [illegible] away under cover of darkness and awoke next morning in a strange country, presumably many miles from home.

Leonard is not able to tell all that the Fall River sleuths who have been working on the case would like to know, but he has given sufficient information to convince them that during his wandering from State to State he suffered untold cruelties.

Leonard Allen, in his sixteen years, has [illegible] but privation and hardship. His father died when he was young. The burden of the household fell upon Mrs. Allen, and [illegible] her struggle to make both [illegible] and keep the little family together [illegible] her health. The children were neglected. Leonard never found his way into a schoolhouse.

As a child he played around livery [illegible] also when able to carry water, mix feed and handle a sponge and chamois rag, he [illegible] stable keeper [illegible] wagons and [illegible] Now he knows [illegible] as well as a veterinarian the difference between a spavin and a ring worm, but he [illegible] how to read or write.

Was Seized by Force

When the Middletown Fair was in progress in New York State, early in 1907, Leonard and his younger brother went down one afternoon to see a balloon ascension. To one side of the grounds there was a camp of gypsies. The Indian ponies [illegible] near the tents caught [illegible] eye and he left his brother to walk over and see them.

[illegible] story is that upon entering [illegible] tents he was seized and [illegible] in the caravan. He cried to be released, but [illegible] brought no response. Some time during the night, he says, he remembers the horses being hitched to the [illegible] and the gypsies starting on their [illegible] afterward [illegible] when he was released from the caravan and ordered to work in the stable tent.

The gypsies were then in a wilderness. It was dusk. Not knowing what way to turn if he ran away, and afraid of being punished if he dared to make a break, the boy decided to remain in the camp [illegible] favorable opportunity for [illegible] present itself next day. But [illegible] was like the preceding day. The gypsies kept going further away. The more they travelled the less were the boy's chances of finding his way back to Middletown.

Since then Leonard Allen never saw [illegible] other, it is claimed, and carried from city to city and State to State until finally, in his mental condition, he began to forget [illegible] Now he does not even recall what his mother looked like when he last saw her. He remembers distinctly the name of his home city, but it was not until Superintendent Dolan had refreshed his memory that he recalled the [illegible] he lived on.

Mother Seeks Him in Vain.

Mrs. Allen, according to press dispatches, has been distracted since her boy's disappearance. Certain that he had [illegible] she went from [illegible] ing up her search only when her money became exhausted. Once she says, she thought she had track of the band in Providence, but before she could get to a police station to tell about it, the band had decamped.

It was in a dingy tenement in Fall River the other day that the boy was recovered. The place was occupied by Joshua Stanley and his daughter, Sophia Smith. Besides the Allen boy there is a girl in the family, Sadie Smith, as she is known. Sophia claims Sadie as her own daughter. The girl's father, she says, was Frank Smith, who was [illegible] by gypsies in Norristown, Pa., in 1900. Frank Smith formerly lived in Providence, R. I.

The Stanleys are well known gypsies of Massachusetts. Joshua Stanley, head of the clan, is a tall swarthy old man with gray hair and a gray chin whisker. Joshua, like all the rest of the Stanleys, buys, trades and sells horses.

Tom Stanley's daughter Jennie and Joshua Stanley's son Sam eloped recently and the result of it was a family feud which led to stories being told the police about a boy held in captivity in Joshua Stanley's house.

When the police investigated they found Leonard Allen. Tom Stanley, before the boy's recovery, had slapped Sophia Smith's face in a quarrel, and was arrested for assault. Then, Joshua Stanley and Sophia Smith were arrested, charged with kidnapping. Both the assault and kidnapping cases were continued in court until to-day.

Now comes a strange feature of this strange case. The Stanleys have buried the hatchet and are smoking the pipe of peace again. Sophia has forgiven Tom. And Tom, in turn, is anxious to help Sophia and Joshua out of their trouble. The assault charge against Tom was dropped in court to-day and the kidnapping charge against the others will come up again on Tuesday.

Leonard Allen was in a pitiable condition when found by the police. He wore little clothing. His emaciated face bore out the boy's assertion that he had received little food or drink. His body was a mass of sores. A scar on his head he said, was the result of a beating a gypsy once gave him with a club because he wouldn't mind. There is another scar on his hand.

CLOSE MISSION AT CATHEDRAL TO-DAY

Five Thousand Men Join in Services Under Direction of Dominican Fathers.

With mass and holy communion at 7 o'clock this morning and with final instructions, benediction of the Blessed Sacrament and bestowal of the Pontifical blessing at 4 o'clock this afternoon, the mission for men conducted at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross on Washington street during the past week by four priests of the Dominican order will be brought to a close.

Five thousand men last night went to the confessionals in the Cathedral in preparation for to-day's communion.

To-day's exercises mark the close of one of the most successful religious retreats for men ever held in this city. Since last Monday, when the mission began, the morning masses with short instructions and the evening rosary, sermon and benediction have been attended by concourses of men that tested the capacity of the great Cathedral.

The exercises have been under the direction of Rev. J. P. Meagher, O. P., prior of St. Vincent Ferrir's convent in New York. Assisting him were the Rev. Frs. Cahill, Stanton and Wilkenburg, members of the [illegible] who [illegible] with the most [illegible] Catholic church in the United States. A week ago they completed a mission for women that was one of the most successful ever held in Boston.

Beginning next Sunday evening they will conduct a two weeks' series of lectures for non-Catholics. A "question box" will be placed in the vestibule of the Cathedral for depositing queries as to the Catholic faith. The queries will be answered from the pulpit each evening by one of the fathers.

DEAN HODGES URGES CHRISTIAN ACTIVITY

At Noonday Service, Recommends Support of Worthy Boston Societies.

In his sermon at the noon Lenten service in St. Paul's Church, Tremont street, yesterday, Rev. George Hodges, dean of the Cambridge Theological Seminary, recommended to those in the congregation who have a plethora of money or time or ability, that they give of them to the Watch and Ward Society or to the South End House, thereby doing much in the line of Christianity and uplifting society.

The preacher spoke on "Active Religion." He deprecated the fact that many are willing to claim membership in a church, will pay pew rent, but seldom attend services.

He said he had in mind two ministers who had comfortable parishes, with good salaries, but who were heart sick because they found very few persons in the pews when services were held. He urged on his hearers that they attend church services regularly and thereby strengthen the spiritual side of their existence. Another way the speaker said, in which the spirit of God could be spread more throughout the community was by aiding the various institutions that have for their object the improvement of society. It was in this connection that he referred to the two institutions mentioned.

Speaking of the South End House, he said it was doing a noble and necessary work, necessary because of the number of young women who come from the country to the city and who do not know where to find a home that will be within their means and be at the same time respectable.

PARK STREET CLUB FAVORS INCOME TAX

Taking for their subject, "That the method of imposing taxes on incomes is the most [illegible] system," the members of the Park Street Club went deeply into the merits of the question in their rooms at the Park Street Church last night. Loverling Reynolds and John A. Waldo, Jr., spoke in the affirmative, and the negative was in the hands of Merrill N. Davis and Spencer J. Steinetz. The question was decided in the affirmative by a vote of the members.

SCIENTISTS WILL STUDY MRS. PIPER

Noted Medium Returns to England for Further Investigation by Distinguished Men.

That Mrs. Piper, the celebrated medium of Arlington Heights, who has been under constant scientific observation for more than twenty-three years, recently returned to England for further investigation at the hands of Sir Oliver Lodge and other distinguished scientists became known yesterday.

Mrs. Piper's movements are kept more or less secret, but it is known that before sailing she gave a series of sittings to Hereward Carrington, a member of the council of the American Society for Psychical Research, and author of the "Physical Phenomena of Spiritualism."

That Mrs. Piper will figure prominently in Sir Oliver's forthcoming report is generally understood by those interested in psychical research. Mrs. Piper soon after the death of Dr. Richard Hodgson, went to England, where she remained under the investigation of the English Society for Psychical Research [illegible] last Summer, when she returned to New England for a [illegible] tion. A current rumor, still to be confirmed by an authoritative statement, is to the effect that an important message from the late F. W. H. Myers to Sir Oliver Lodge was partly transmitted through an English medium and that later the complete message was delivered through the mediumship of Mrs. Piper.

Back Bay Dentist Begs That Their Two Loved Little Ones Be Left to Him.

BREAKS DOWN IN CELL

Two beautiful children, each less than four years old, are the centre of a bitter fight between Mrs. Sara Luce Brouillet of No. 362 Commonwealth avenue and her husband, Dr. George A. Brouillet, the fashionable Back Bay dentist who was found guilty by a jury last week of attacking his brother-in-law, James Luce, with a hatchet.

Mrs. Brouillet has sued for divorce, alleging cruel and abusive treatment at divers times since their marriage in Vineyard Haven on October 22, 1901. She asks for the custody of the children, George A., Jr., aged three years eleven months, and Louis, aged sixteen months. The doctor's property has been attached for $10,000.

Dr. Brouillet is still in jail. He will contest the divorce libel in court, for he dearly loves the two children.

Breaks Down in Cell.

When the papers were served on him, within a few minutes after the jury brought in its verdict in the assault case, he completely broke down and said:

"This is the most cruel blow of all. If they take my dear babies away from me it will break my heart. I could stand anything but that. Here I am a convicted felon and now they want to take my little boys away from me, all I have in the world that's dear to me."

The doctor's defence in the attack on his brother-in-law was that he was justified in doing what he did, inasmuch as he believed his children would be kidnapped if his two brothers-in-law got into his home. The doctor said they were forcing their way in, in company with his wife, their sister. He testified that on the morning of the attack his wife told him she was going to leave him [illegible] day. This was [illegible] the house.

He contended that his wife's sole purpose in returning with her two brothers-in-law that night was to take the children away from [illegible] He testified that it was while resisting their intrusion that he picked up the first thing on which he could lay his hands, which happened to be the hatchet.

Dearly Loves Babes.

That the doctor worships his children there is no doubt. The two servants employed in the Brouillet house had testified that he used to help dress them in the morning, fed them, took them out for airings, played with them [illegible] and helped put them to bed at night. When the wife was on the witness stand she admitted that her husband loved the children very much.

"Dr. Brouillet was both mother and father to his children," said Attorney Alfred R. Shrigley in his argument to the jury. "While his wife was on the stage of the Castle Square Theatre he was caring for the babies. If she had the right mother-love that is in the breast of nearly every woman she would have remained at home and looked after them. Instead she was performing on the stage of the Castle Square Theatre."

Judge Makes Inquiry

The family troubles of the couple are now under private investigation by order of Judge Charles De Courcy [illegible] Suffolk Superior Court. He said that he would not consider the matter of sentence in the assault case until he knew something more about both the doctor and his wife.

"In view of the insinuations that have been made by Dr. Brouillet against his wife, I think their family affairs should be looked into," said the judge. "In view of the fact that Dr. Brouillet has admitted that he often thought of committing suicide and contemplated taking the children with him, I think his mental condition might be looked into, for normal minds do not brood over such things. I believe that before passing on the question of sentence I should know the conditions that led up to this assault."

While under cross-examination Dr. Brouillet admitted that he frequently thought of killing himself and often thought of taking the children with him, but could not make up his mind to kill them. He said this state of mind was brought about because conditions at home were unbearable. He said that on the night before the assault he went to his mother-in-law's house and complained of his wife's conduct.

Dr. Brouillet appears for sentence in the Superior Court to-morrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.

TALKS ON TEETH

By G. Gordon Martin Incorporated

Good Looks and Teeth

How often one hears:

"She was beautiful until she opened her mouth, and then, Oh my, such teeth! They made her positively homely."

Then, again, you have often heard

"She had a plain face, but such glorious teeth that when she opened her mouth she became positively handsome."

The plainest face of man or woman can be made almost handsome and certainly much more attractive by a good set of teeth. Our Alveolar Process of Dentistry will give anyone the beautiful looking teeth that adds to the beauty of the most beautiful face and will make handsome or fine looking the plainest countenance.

It will cost you nothing to have your teeth examined by us. We will be glad to tell you just what we can do for you and all about our Alveolar Process of Dentistry.

Beauty and fine looks mean much to the woman and almost as much to the man. A smiling face made more attractive by beautiful white teeth makes life easier for everyone.

Our Alveolar Method of Dentistry will give anyone strong, beautiful, natural looking teeth, as perfect as the soundest natural teeth. If you have two or more teeth in either jaw we can build up a complete set of perfectly natural looking teeth. We can make firm and strong the loose natural teeth that you may have. We can fill the disease breeding cavities of your decayed teeth, so that they will be almost as perfect as sound natural ones.

As a business man, much depends upon the pleasing first impressions you make. Why handicap your work with bad teeth, when our Alveolar Method will help you to make a good impression? It does not matter whether you are young or old. Our Alveolar Method of Dentistry is so scientific that we can tighten the loose teeth and replace any teeth that are missing.

We do it entirely without ordinary bridge or plate work, by a scientific method that is controlled exclusively by us under patent, and which process this company has the sole right to use in the New England field.

We want you to have our book on the Alveolar System of Dentistry. Write for it at once. We will mail it free. Do not put it off. Our process is no new thing, but has been in use for years by us. We have letters from all over New England that we would be glad to show you.

Call at once. An examination will cost you nothing, and our prices are no higher than any good dentist.

CAUTION—We have no offices outside of those given below.

FEAR MADHOUSE FOR FOES OF CZAR

Expelled Member of Duma to Call for Several Insane Asylums.

ALL RUSSIA IS AROUSED

Weinstock's Exposure of Horrors Tells Tortures Practiced by Police.

St. Petersburg, March 21.—The defiance with which the revo[illegible] are meeting the threats and the [illegible] on the part of the Government has led Vladimir Purishkevitch, one of the leaders of the Union of True Russians, a man whose conduct caused his expulsion from the sittings of this reactionary Duma of which he is a member, to declare that he is going to bring in a [illegible] number of insane asylums [illegible] in V. A. Weinstock's rev[illegible] will be intended to serve as prisons for all guilty of questioning the indisputable authority of the Czar.

While this project is being condemned on all sides the sudden lull in the investigation into the charges raised by Weinstock's articles causes grave apprehension among the relatives of those who are at present in the toils of the Russian police. With no law but their own whims and fancies to dictate their courage, it is feared that the [illegible] may eagerly seize the suggestion of Purishkevitch, and may [illegible] both men and women to asylums where they will be slowly tortured to death.

The following chapter of Weinstock's narrative deals with the period of his convalescence previous to his being sent back to the fortress and then to the Siberian mines.

By V. A. Weinstock.

When I regained consciousness I found myself in the morgue. I was covered with a sheet, and I could plainly hear some one crying.

With an effort I [illegible] the coverlet down and saw one of my former cell comrades sitting at my feet shedding bitter tears.

I recollected at once all that happened. I could not [illegible] effort to articulate caused dreadful [illegible].

After several at[illegible] I came to the conclusion that the lower jaw was broken in halves. A short investigation showed to me that the head on the left side was badly injured, that my right arm was broken; and that I sustained several other more or less serious injuries. This did not discourage me, what [illegible] me most was the fact that I was choking through the throat which was proof of internal injuries.

In spite of my sufferings I had to smile at the hurry with which I was removed to the morgue and expected every moment to see an undertaker and his assistants enter to prepare me for the burial obsequies.

Was Doomed to Die.

My comrade went to [illegible] a physician but returned shortly very much excited and bubbling over with indignation, saying that the doctor on duty only answered that it was needless to trouble oneself, as I was doomed to die anyhow.

Two more days passed. I could take no food [illegible] [illegible]

On a third day a w[illegible] was [illegible] that I had [illegible] [illegible]

How to Stop Pimples

In Five Days You Can Get Rid of All Skin Eruptions by the New Calcium Sulphide Wafers.

Trial Package To Prove It Sent Free.

Any man or woman gets awfully tired going around with a pimply face day after day. And other people get awfully tired, too, seeing them go around with faces full of disgusting pimples.

If you are one of the unfortunates who can't get away from your pimples, and you have tried almost everything under heaven to get rid of them, take a few of Stuart's Calcium Wafers every day. Do that steadily for a few days, and in less than a week look at yourself in the mirror.

You will then say that Stuart's Calcium Wafers are a wonder in getting rid of skin eruptions.

These wonderful little workers contain the most effective blood purifier ever discovered, calcium sulphide.

No matter what your trouble is, whether pimples, blotches, blackheads, rash, tetter, eczema or scabby crusts, you can solemnly depend upon Stuart's Calcium Wafers as never failing.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers have cured boils in three days and the worst cases of skin diseases in a week. Every particle of impurity is driven out of your system completely, never to return, and it is done without deranging your system in the slightest.

Most treatments for the blood and for skin eruptions are miserably slow in their results and besides, many of them are poisonous. Stuart's Calcium Wafers contain no poison or drug of any kind; they are absolutely harmless, and yet do work which cannot fail to surprise you.

Don't go around with a humiliating disgusting mass of pimples and blackheads on your face. A face covered over with these disgusting things makes people turn away from you, and breeds failure in your life work. Stop it. Read what an Iowa man said when he woke up one morning and found he had a new face:

"By George, I never saw anything like it. There I've been for three years trying to get rid of pimples and blackheads, and guess I used everything under the sun. I used your Calcium Wafers for just seven days. This morning every blessed pimple is gone and I can't find a blackhead. I could write you a volume of thanks. I am so grateful to you."

Just send us your name and address in full, to-day, and we will send you a trial package of Stuart's Calcium Wafers free to test. After you have tried the sample and been convinced that all we say is true, you will go to your nearest druggist and get a 50c box and be cured of your facial trouble. They are in tablet form, and no trouble whatever to take. You go about your work as usual, and there you are—cured and happy.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Lynn Bookkeeper Under Arrest on Charge of Larceny of $1,800

AGNES L. McKEIGUE

ACCOUNTS TANGLED: GIRL IS ARRESTED

Costly Gifts to Sweetheart Said to Have Led to Charge of Theft of $1,800.

Lavishly spending money for the education of her sweetheart and showering him with expensive gifts are said to be the real reasons why Miss Agnes L. McKeigue, a pretty and talented girl of twenty-four, high in the social circle of the [illegible] section of Lynn, is under arrest on a charge of theft.

Miss McKeigue up to [illegible] months ago was the trusted bookkeeper [illegible] Ruven's clothing store, No. 37 Munroe street, Lynn. Yesterday she was arrested on a warrant charging her with the [illegible] of $1,800 from the proprietors of the store. Miss McKeigue was not compelled to accompany the officers to the station house, but was allowed her freedom on the assurance of her counsel, Sisk Brothers, for her appearance in court. Yesterday her case was continued until March 28, without bonds.

The complainant in the case, Mitchell Basker, manager of Ruven's clothing store, is confident the amount will reach even a larger sum than that specified in the complaint. Expert accountants have gone through some of the books and are prepared to swear to a shortage of at least $1,800.

Confronted with Charge

Discrepancies in Miss McKeigue's bookkeeping were discovered three months ago. Confronted with the charge of having taken the amounts missing, she at first denied the charge, but later confessed. Her employers were disposed to be lenient, and when her father, James E. McKeigue, of No. 152 Lawton avenue, superintendent of James Phelan and Sons' shoe factory, pleaded with them in behalf of his daughter, and promised to return the money, the matter was not reported to the police.

Miss McKeigue is alleged to have turned over a bankbook to them showing a deposit in her name of about $500. Mr. Basker says that after waiting three months for the balance of the missing funds a warrant for her arrest was served at the McKeigue home Friday night by Sergeant O'Brien.

The case has caused a sensation among her friends in the Highland district. Although Miss McKeigue received a salary of $12 a week her friends say that she always was fashionably dressed. It was known that she was engaged to be married and the wedding was to have taken place in June.

Planned for Wedding.

Miss McKeigue was to have married a young man by the name of Ernest [illegible], formerly of Berwick, Me. To a reporter for the Sunday American, Mitchell Basker, her employer, said yesterday that Miss McKeigue gave the young man many expensive presents and was furnishing the money for his education as an architect.

"Miss McKeigue came to me highly recommended and gained my confidence at the start. I was obliged to be out of the store more or less. Our system of bookkeeping was rather intricate, but we supposed it was all right.

About Christmas time we began to suspect that some one was taking our money. My little sister came in here and looked at our books and could not account for the small amount of ready cash, which did not agree with the large amount of receipts. When we called in the expert accountants they discovered the discrepancies readily. In addition to the money some of the books are missing."

Miss McKeigue is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. McKeigue, of No. 152 Lawton avenue. She has lived in Lynn all her life, and was a graduate of the High School. Later she entered Burdett College, finished her course and later went to work in a department store. She worked here as a bookkeeper and then accepted a position with Alfred Cross & Co. It was from this firm that she came to work at Nuven's.

Miss McKeigue refused to talk about the case as did other members of her family. Their only reply to questions was that they had been instructed by their attorney not to talk.

Attorney William Sisk said yesterday that he knew nothing about the case except that there was a disagreement between Miss McKeigue and her employer.

"My brother, Richard Sisk, was Miss McKeigue's counsel, but he is sick abed," said the lawyer. "When I came to the office this morning the case was turned over to me, and all I know about it is what occurred in court. I advised my clients not to talk for fear that they might injure themselves by talking too much."

PICKPOCKETS IN MILE CHASE ESCAPE

After a chase of over a mile from Harvard square to the Brighton marshes three professional pickpockets escaped from Inspector James Cox of the Cambridge police late yesterday afternoon. The attempt to capture [illegible] when they were in the crowd [illegible] Harvard square created the greatest excitement, in which women and children were nearly [illegible].

ROBSON AT MERCY OF GROVER HAYES

Philadelphia, March 21. There wasn't the slightest chance for two opinions over the outcome of the bout between Grover Hayes and "Spike" Robson at the National Athletic Club to-night.

Robson failed to get in his knock-down punch—in fact, the only semblance of a knock-down was in the first round when "Spike" went to the floor as the result of a combination slip and punch. On [illegible] different occasions during the bout, [illegible] rocked Robson perceptibly. His [illegible] as a rule lacked steam, but there [illegible] on any of them in comparison with the [illegible] landed by Robson that he [illegible] received the decision on points [illegible] were in order.

There never was any question about Robson's willingness. Hayes was far the quicker in working his hands.

EMPLOYED NEGRESS, HIS HOME SHOT UP

Upper Sandusky, O., March 21.—Twenty-five whitecaps rode into McCutcheonville, near here, and completely riddled with bullets the home of Constable Peter D. Kieffer. The masked visitors objected to the presence of a negress as a servant in the home of Kieffer and warned him against further similar importation.

RIVER PIRATES WALK OFF WITH A DOCK

Burlington, Ia., March 21.—River pirates stole a large ferry landing dock here and towed it to some hidden cove in the river with a steam tug without being detected. The dock is a large, unwieldy affair, and was firmly anchored to the shore.

NEW SET OF TEETH AT THE AGE OF 73

Council Bluffs, Iowa, March 21.—A third set of teeth at the age of seventy-three is the unusual experience of "Auntie" Mary S. Price, of this city. She recently noticed a soreness and throbbing sensation in her gums, and now "Auntie" has a full set of new teeth making their appearance.

BITTER WAR IN CONVENTION RENDS R. I. DEMOCRACY.

Greene-Fitzgerald and Quinn-Fitzsimmons Factions Struggle for Mastery.

BRYAN MOTION IS LOST

Eight Delegates Chosen for National Convention Go Unpledged.

WORST SPLIT EVER MADE

Great Crowd of Spectators Join in Pandemonium Despite Police.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 21.—Harmony was scattered to the four winds in the Democratic State Convention to-day when 200 delegates engaged in a bitter factional fight over the selection of eight delegates to the National convention in Denver. A resolution indorsing William Jennings Bryan as the Democratic Presidential candidate was introduced only to be lost in the excitement and never even voted on.

It was a clash between the Quinn Fitzsimmons and Fitzgerald Greene factions for the mastery of the Democratic party in Rhode Island. It developed the most violent rupture that the Democracy in this State has ever known. Bitter personalities flew thick and fast.

Unpledged Men Chosen.

Eight delegates to the Denver convention were elected, but they were not pledged. The national delegates elected are:

Governor James H. Higgins of Pawtucket.

Ex-Mayor George W. Greene of Woonsocket.

Judge Frank E. Fitzsimmons of Lincoln.

Col. Patrick Henry Quinn of Warwick.

Ex-Senator Patrick J. Murphy of Newport.

Ex-Senator [illegible] Mowry of South Kingston.

Peter C. Cannon of Providence.

David J. Barry of Providence.

Nearly 2,000 [illegible] into Music Hall and urged on the 212 delegates in their free for all [illegible] enthusiastic spectators jumped into the [illegible] and Colonel P. H. Quinn [illegible] of the big Democratic leaders [illegible] to the police to [illegible] the crowd from [illegible] the meeting.

Bryan Men Silenced.

Three of the staunchest Bryan supporters in the country, Senator Thomas P. Gore, the blind statesman from Oklahoma, Colonel Alexander [illegible] of New Haven, president of the New England Progressive Democratic League, [illegible] Bryan organization of the past [illegible] Fred Walker of Boston were on hand to help [illegible] their eloquence [illegible] and presence. They were sadly disappointed at the way their favorite was [illegible].

[illegible] the State convention would tear the party asunder as it has never been split before. The two factions [illegible] had made arrangements [illegible] declared a truce [illegible] agreeing upon a slate, the delegation to Denver to be split.

Bitter Threats Made.

But an awful "jolt" was handed the Fitzgerald Greene faction when the convention got under way. The election of delegates for the Quinn Fitzsimmons faction was hurriedly [illegible] through, and it took a three hours' fight, and [illegible] of treachery and "trimming" for the Fitzgerald Greene faction to get two of the delegates.

[illegible] the convention hall [illegible] the breach more than ever [illegible] around the election of ex-Mayor Greene of Woonsocket and David J. Barry of Providence, and despite the fact that the Quinn Fitzsimmons faction [illegible] support them in [illegible] support for their candidates the two were [illegible] after a [illegible].

Judge Frank E. Fitzsimmons of Lincoln, president of the State [illegible] Committee, rapped the convention to order at 2 o'clock. [illegible] o'clock [illegible] was spent by the State [illegible] closed doors in [illegible] fights over the [illegible] of delegates.

Senator Gore arrived in Providence just before [illegible] from New Haven accompanied by [illegible]. They were met at the union depot by a delegation comprising Judge Fitzsimmons, ex-Governor L. F. C. Garvin [illegible], ex-Senator Patrick J. Murphy of Newport, Colonel Peter J. Cassidy of [illegible] and ex-Mayor George W. Greene of Woonsocket and Peter C. Cannon of Providence, the Reception Committee appointed by the State Committee.

The temporary organization of the State convention, Judge Fitzsimmons as chairman, Colonel Peter J. Cassidy as secretary and Joseph H. Gagner as assistant secretary, were made permanent officers by a unanimous vote, the expected opposition to Judge Fitzsimmons as presiding officer having failed to develop.

The first fight was over the representation of delegates. Daniel A. Colton of Providence moved that the eight delegates to Denver be elected from the various counties of Rhode Island, four from Providence County, one from Newport County, one from Bristol County, one from Washington County and one from Kent County.

Mayor John J. Fitzgerald of Pawtucket, leader of the Fitzgerald Greene faction and the law partner of Governor James H. Higgins, moved that the eight delegates be elected irrespective of county representation and be selected from the entire State. The fight then went on in full swing and all kinds of personalities were tossed about.

MILLIONAIRE AND HIS BRIDE PARTED BY CRUEL PLOT.

Beatrice Godfrey Estranged From Lumber King's Son By Conspiracy to Wreck Home.

MYSTERIOUS FOE IN WEST

Anonymous Letters From Jealous Woman, She Declares, Broke Up Romance.

HINTS OF RECONCILIATION

Millionaire Father-in-Law Now Said to Be Only Obstacle to Love's True Course.

The romance surrounding Beatrice Bruner Godfrey, a beautiful nineteen-year-old girl, and Arthur Wilbur Godfrey, son of Boston's millionaire lumber king, is one of the strangest in history.

By means of two cunningly worded anonymous letters, a jealous and maddened woman has brought about a sudden separation.

Friends of the beautiful child-wife declare the stern father of her husband prevents a reconciliation.

"I love my husband devotedly and he loves me devotedly; there is a conspiracy to estrange us," asserts the beautiful girl.

"I NEVER harmed anybody. Why should anyone want to harm me? All I want is my husband. I love my husband. He loves me. I know he does because he has told me so over and over again and he is a truthful man," cries Mrs. Beatrice Bruner Godfrey.

"I am convinced that a conspiracy exists to destroy our married happiness," she said.

Almost hysterical, all but a nervous wreck, her beautiful face drawn in anguish, attended by a trained nurse and visited daily by a physician, the fair, flaxen-haired child-wife of Arthur Wilbur Godfrey to-day pines in her luxurious apartments in Commonwealth avenue for a sight of the man whose wife she became no longer than last September.

And there are indications that the keen attorneys who represented her and her husband will ere long arrange a common understanding and that the cruel and mysterious woman from the West, who has sought to separate them forever through anonymous letters, will be baffled.

Wedded Six Months.

Less than six months ago Beatrice Bruner became the wife of Arthur Wilbur Godfrey, of the Godfrey Lumber Company of this city, and the son of Lester S. Godfrey, Boston's lumber king.

The fair bride, the [illegible] of Davenport, [illegible] nineteen years of age [illegible] girl [illegible] Arthur Godfrey [illegible] not more than twenty [illegible] himself [illegible] of a great [illegible] and [illegible] of his father's business [illegible], were happy as young husband and wife could be when they came back to Boston from [illegible] where they had stolen a march on parents, relatives and friends by their sudden marriage.

Friends of the young couple say that the marriage had always been opposed by Godfrey's father and mother. They intimate that more than one stormy interview took place between father and son when the latter [illegible] before the marriage announced his intention of wedding the prettiest girl in Iowa.

These same friends to-day insist that the younger Mrs. Godfrey blames her father-in-law for much of the present misunderstanding that has arisen between her and her rich young husband.

Two Anonymous Letters.

They declare that when two stealthy, poisonous anonymous letters, written by a disappointed, jealous woman, came to him to Boston from the West that the father used them as a means to bring about the separation between the happy couple.

The pretty child-wife, who has been attending the New England Conservatory of Music, for she is a talented musician and has had stage offers, has been very ill since her husband took apartments in the Parker House and later removed to the home of his parents, and her physician and nurse know that she is suffering more from mental than physical affliction.

"I don't know what I have ever done to anybody that all this trouble should be visited upon me," declared the beautiful girl yesterday to a Boston Sunday American reporter.

"I have denied myself to all inquirers for weeks, and still shun publicity, but there are some things that even I cannot stand and keep silent.

Wants Only Husband and Peace.

"They have said, my traducers, that I desire to go upon the stage; that I even welcome publicity and this separation from my dear husband. That's false; every word of it. Stage life has no attraction for me. It never so much as enters my thoughts, much less any plans of mine.

"All that I want is my husband and peace. It is wrong and unfair to paint me otherwise. Have I not trouble enough without that? Perhaps I have some musical talent, but so have hundreds in Boston, who, like myself, have other aims in life.

"My husband and I love each other devotedly. I love him above everything in the world, and he loves me for he says so, and my husband is always truthful.

"I am convinced that we are being separated and disturbed by malicious per-

Glacia Calla Comes Home; Soon to Appear on the Stage, She Says

Anxious to Know What Progress the Case Against Roy Is Making.

Special to the Sunday American.

Portsmouth, N. H., March 21.—Glacia Calla [illegible] her husband, Paul Roy, of [illegible] her brother, arrived in Portsmouth from New York this afternoon [illegible] home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] at Newington [illegible] for a few days [illegible] the stage.

Asked [illegible] she would make her first appearance [illegible] her manager, Mr. [illegible] and [illegible] that she expected to start in about one week.

She [illegible] her attorney, John H. Bartlett [illegible] if anything had been heard regarding her husband, and, when informed by her lawyer that he could give her no information on the matter, she expressed great surprise.

She said that she had heard much [illegible] the fact that the French government might not surrender Roy, but could [illegible] it clear why he could not be [illegible].

"NATIVE NOBLEMEN" FROM PHILIPPINES

De Armond Would Make Islands Supply Station for Heiresses.

Washington, March 21.—When the question of the fortification of the Philippines came up in the House to-day Representative DeArmond, Democrat, Missouri, made the novel suggestion on the floor that the Philippines be converted into a supply station for native noblemen, whom American girls could marry without taking so many millions out of the country. He would have a high protective tariff put on the "importation" of noblemen from any other co[illegible]

FIREBUG FOILED BY WOMAN'S WIT

Policeman's Wife Alarms Neighbors and Calls Out Department to Quell Blaze.

Shortly [illegible] 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon Mrs. [illegible] O'Brien, wife of Police Officer [illegible] O'Brien of the East Dedham street [illegible] discovered a fire raging [illegible] the [illegible] frame building at No. [illegible] street, South Boston [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] fire started was an abundance of fuel for a quick fire, but none of the occupants of the house had been in the cellar and it is believed the blaze was the result of a design [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] Shields on the second floor [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] Clark [illegible] the [illegible].

[illegible] Mrs. O'Brien had alarmed the [illegible] it was with difficulty that Mrs. Shields and Mrs. Clark escaped. After the arrival of the department, a report circulated that Mrs. Clark was yet in her apartments and Ladderman Keough of Ladder 20 rushed through the blinding smoke to the top floor in search of the woman. After hunting through the appartment for several minutes he appeared at the window bearing Mrs. Clark's pet fox terrier, which was nearly dead from suffocation. He carried the dog down the ladder and placed it in the arms of its mistress, who had not been in the building since the alarm of fire had been given. The damage was about $[illegible].

ROOSEVELT IS MASTER; ALDRICH YIELDS.

President Forces "Stand Patters" to Accept Plan for Tariff Revision.

WILL CALL EXTRA SESSION

Measures Demanded by Labor on Program for Passage by Present Congress.

NEW MESSAGE THIS WEEK

Currency Legislation Along Aldrich Lines Favored at White House Conference.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—President Roosevelt is to have his own way with Congress.

The laws which labor leaders have been demanding, and which the President favors, will be passed before the present session adjourns.

In addition "the stand patters" in the party will be shocked to learn that the President has forced the high tariff leaders to consent to the passage of either the LaFollette or the Beveridge bill creating a tariff revision commission.

The questions were settled to-day after a long conference between the President and Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island, the "big boss" of the Senate, and Representatives Payne and Dalzell, the sub-bosses of the House.

A [illegible] official statement issued from the White House tonight the President will probably send a message to Congress next week containing explicit [illegible] the legislation which he [illegible] that Congress should [illegible] before the close of the present session.

To Pass Labor Measures.

A [illegible] specific legislation is not [illegible] in the statement, it is learned from an authoritative source that it will [illegible] follows:

[illegible] along the lines of [illegible]

[illegible] liability law.

A [illegible] power of injunction.

Amendment of the Sherman anti-trust law [illegible] traffic agreements, [illegible] arrangements and other proper combinations, under governmental restrictions.

The passage of a measure providing for an investigation of the tariff schedules by a commission, preferably consisting of the Ways and Means Committee of the House and the [illegible] Committee of the Senate [illegible] the revision of the tariff at a special session of Congress, to be held after March 4, 1909.

Yields on Only One Point.

[illegible] programme it will be seen that the President yields on only one point and [illegible] He takes the [illegible] Senator Aldrich has withdrawn [illegible] feature of his bill, [illegible] of its most objectionable [illegible] do no particular [illegible]

[illegible] programme [illegible] of a commission [illegible] Senator Beveridge [illegible] introduce [illegible] Senate early [illegible] speech upon it. [illegible] unpopular [illegible] a similar [illegible] he intended to [illegible] speech upon the question.

[illegible] Mr. La Follette [illegible] three or four days [illegible] at least do not wish [illegible] this time in [illegible] of a campaign; [illegible] the appointment [illegible] the President [illegible]

[illegible] taking a firm [illegible] it is believed that [illegible]

[illegible] commission will be appointed was made clear by Senator Aldrich, just before the Senate adjourned [illegible] Senator Culberson [illegible] to the legislation [illegible] it was about [illegible] for an inquiry as to [illegible] American [illegible] cheaper abroad than at home.

"Stand Patters" Surrender.

Senator Aldrich finally declared that he would have no objection to the adoption of legislation looking toward "a full inquiry" into the situation referred to by Senator Culberson, and Senators Scott and Gallinger, two of the original "stand patters" in the Senate, [illegible] that a bill creating a special commission to revise the tariff might be allowed to go through.

One reason why the bill may be taken up and passed without delay, is the desire of Senator Aldrich and his lieutenants to prevent Senator La Follette from making another attack against the policy of the Republican leaders such as he is now making against the Aldrich bill.

Meanwhile the President has been receiving urgent demands from all parts of the country for a revision of the tariff of schedules in the Dingley law and believes that in view of the approaching storm it is well to create the commission in order that it may get to work before the campaign opens. He believes that unless this is done Democrats may obtain a decided advantage in the approaching campaign.

"Will the Programme Prevail?"

"Will the Republican leaders deliver the goods?" This is the question which is worrying the President, Senator Aldrich and the House leaders. At least one of the more important leaders doubts whether this programme can be carried out and is certain that [illegible] be done without great [illegible] if there will be [illegible] revision of the [illegible] the [illegible] administration and [illegible] tariff revision [illegible]. He protested that [illegible] pressure upon the Senate and House to carry out a programme of this kind. The House, he said, might be forced into line, as pressure could be applied with greater effect, but he doubted if [illegible] or Aldrich or any other man [illegible] the President could whip the Senate into line for so many propositions. The Senate, he added, was desired to provide laws demanded by the country and would attempt to do so in its way without influence from any direction.

This man said further that if the President found himself unable to make headway on this program, he would resort to his only method of sending special messages to Congress demanding action without further delay.

Message Already Prepared.

In this connection it is known that the more conservative friends of the President are trying to induce him to confine his next message to the definite program. They have told him during the last few days that if he continues his old practice of denouncing and criticizing everything in the country his message will lose its effect and his program will fail.

The message, it is said, has already been prepared tentatively and is said to be very similar to the special message sent in some time ago. The friends of the President are seeking to induce him to "tone it down," and to confine it to the questions which are worrying all of the leaders in the Republican party. In other words, that they are telling him to use arguments and advance reasons, rather than to devote the entire message to denunciation of men and their business methods.

Following the conference with the leaders, the President talked with many Republican Senators and Representatives and to each of them he urged the necessity of standing by the program he has outlined.

RAILROAD BILL TO AID HIBBARD

Power to Reduce Appropriations Quickly Granted at State House.

Through a new and powerful weapon to be placed in his hands by the Legislature tomorrow—the power to reduce as well as veto appropriations—Mayor Hibbard expects to be able to defeat those members of the City Council who administered a temporary defeat to his policy of [illegible] by rejecting an appropriation bill $[illegible],521 above the Mayor's figure and up to the [illegible] allowed by law. The bill which passed the Common Council Thursday night, and will probably pass the board tomorrow, totals $18,770,256. Ordinarily the only course left open to the Mayor would be to either veto those items raised by the committee, or sign [illegible] the department heads [illegible].

[illegible] Mayor Hibbard [illegible] the report of the committee [illegible] Secretary [illegible] the Mayor's friends [illegible].

[illegible] the Mayor [illegible] power over appropriations was rushed through its readings [illegible] and on Friday was given its three readings in the Senate [illegible] passed to be engrossed. It will be enacted by both branches tomorrow and signed by Acting Governor Draper. It is expected, so that on Tuesday morning when the appropriation bill [illegible] the aldermen, his new authority will be [illegible].

TOO MANY SEAMEN; PAY GOES DOWN

For the first time in ten years the supply of able-bodied seamen in and out of Boston exceeds the demand and no captain is obliged to delay here a day through inability to get a crew. In times past ships have often been held here as long as two weeks on account of the scarcity of sailors. In consequence of the present surplus of seamen their pay has declined from $[illegible] to $[illegible] a month on coastwise vessels, from $25 to $20 on West Indian craft and from $[illegible] to $18 on deep-sea ships.

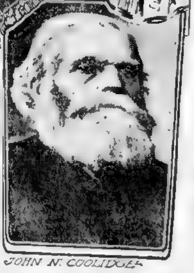
Fair Plaintiff in Breach of Promise Suit, and Defendant



JOHN N. COOLIDGE

Principals in "a thousand kisses" $10,000 breach of promise suit in which aged West Medford man is defendant. A sealed verdict is to be opened Monday. A feature of the hearing was the reading of love letters offered by each.

SEALED VERDICT IN $10,000 BALM SUIT

Pillsbury-Coolidge Love Letters Read in Court Reveal Ardent Wooing.

ROMEO, 77, IS DEFENDANT

Lawrence, March 21.—The greatest interest is manifested in the verdict which the jury in the $10,000 breach of promise suit brought by Miss Mary A. Pillsbury of Methuen against John L. Coolidge of West Medford, has returned and which will be opened in the Superior Court here Monday morning before Judge Dana.

Every one of the three days of the trial, which closed yesterday afternoon, was a field day almost for the young folk here and the court room was crowded all of the time. The thirty-seven-year-old plaintiff and the venerable defendant of seventy-seven vied in the interest they created. Every word spoken in the trial and the reading of the letters which had passed between the couple were followed with absorbing interest. What verdict the jury reached after its four hours of consideration is now a matter of the [illegible] speculation.

Never were more interesting love letters read in open court, especially when it is remembered the disparity in the ages of the couple and the fact that Miss Pillsbury had once divorced Dr. William H. Garland of Plymouth, N. H., and yet was willing to re-experience the hazard of marital life.

The letters which were read covered the correspondence in September, October and November of 1906. The more ardent letters purporting to have been written by Mr. Coolidge were signed "J. L. C.," while when his affection is alleged [illegible] they were signed by his full name. Miss Pillsbury used "Mollie" as a favorite signature.

Writing of his home, where he had once been accompanied by his wife, who had died, one of the letters reads: "The house stay seems to be great and needs a [illegible] still [illegible] to fill the missing [illegible]. My best wishes to you and lots of love. J. L. C."

And "Mollie" wrote in [illegible] on the day after September 25, 1906: "Life would be better, sweeter and happier for you by my company if we can agree. I don't want you to talk about your former wife. I will not talk to you of any other men. I want to dress well, but within reason. With lots of love and very good wishes."

And Still More Love.

And then "J. L. C." [illegible] "I long to be back to the old home. Sending you lots of love."

"I want to get home soon so that I can see Mollie. We had better make up our minds, as the Winter is coming and it will be cold. J. L. C."

"Dear Mollie: You are absent, but not forgotten. I lived forty years with my first wife and [illegible] so you need not fear but that I can provide for you.—J. L. C."

Then "Mollie" wrote, [illegible] October 11: "I [illegible] with you, but I would like to know [illegible] regarding your [illegible] money matters. Money, [illegible] a small part, but it is necessary to get along. If I do the best I can for you, putting in time and strength, I feel that I should have a home for life. Of course your relatives should be remembered some. Sending my best and constant love, I remain, Mollie."

Miss Pillsbury, or "Mollie," wrote two letters on October 19. In one she said: "You know I have the deepest sympathy for you in your sadness. I do not think any of the relatives, except your niece, should have any of your money. I think you should come up to see me, so that our affairs might be straightened out. I believe, though, that I should have the property not settled upon your niece. Yours with love."

"A Thousand Kisses."

The other letter of that date said: "I wish, dearie, that you were here today. I would like to have you here and put my arms around you and hug you until you didn't know where you were. I think that a wife ought to be an equal partner with her husband, and that each should put the way and have an interest one for the other. A thousand kisses, when I have the time to give them to you."

[illegible] On November [illegible] Mr. Coolidge wrote this letter:

"Dear Miss Pillsbury: As I find we are [illegible] all our [illegible] I would [illegible] properly [illegible] close [illegible] I was [illegible] my own [illegible] the last straw [illegible] We may [illegible] John L. Coolidge."

[illegible] November [illegible]

"Dear Mr. [illegible]: I am surprised [illegible] letter and I was not [illegible] like this [illegible] words instead of [illegible] and straighten [illegible] placed [illegible] in the hands of a lawyer. Your friend,

"MARY A. PILLSBURY."

TRACER LEADS TO FAMILY REUNION

Like Message From the Dead Comes News of Father and Other Relatives.

OTHERS APPEAL FOR AID

Separated by the death of their mother from their father and other members of their family, years ago, two sisters, Annie and Elizabeth [illegible], known in Pawtucket, R. I., as Annie Quinn and Elizabeth Goff, were [illegible] through the Bureau [illegible] Lost Persons of the Boston American. On Thursday, like a message from the dead, came a letter to the [illegible] from [illegible] Mrs. Jose[illegible] of Lawrence, Mass., saying that [illegible] father whom they had long [illegible] for dead was alive and [illegible] two brothers and a [illegible] were living in Lawrence. [illegible] reunion [illegible] planned.

When the mother of Annie and Elizabeth Bateman died the [illegible] were placed in an institution. They were adopted afterward by the families of Henry Quinn of No. 248 Fountain street and Julia Goff of Weeden street, Pawtucket. It was rare fortune that they were destined to the same city, to families friendly with each other and living in the same neighborhood. Annie was taken by the Quinn family, Elizabeth by the Goffs.

Long Hope Realized.

The girls played together as children, went to school together and prayed together hundreds of [illegible] they might be reunited with [illegible] before [illegible] Miss Annie [illegible] twenty [illegible] and Miss [illegible] twenty-two. Through all these years [illegible] searched [illegible] for [illegible] father and brothers and sister [illegible] request was [illegible] until a week [illegible] through the Boston Sunday American came an [illegible] prayer.

"We wish to express our sincere thanks to the Tracer Bureau [illegible] the American. Early [illegible] morning came a letter [illegible] had sought to [illegible] and now thank [illegible] future efforts [illegible] our best wishes [illegible]."

From several [illegible] letters were received during the past [illegible] asking the [illegible] operation of the Tracer [illegible] in finding lost parents and brothers and sisters. Mrs. Annie [illegible] of No. [illegible] Tucker street, [illegible] Mass., tells a pathetic story. [illegible] she was three years of age her father [illegible] a hospital at Lawrence [illegible] for [illegible] being too poor to care for [illegible]. She [illegible] been able to learn [illegible] Now she appeals to the Boston Sunday American to help her solve the secret of her identity.

The mother was known as Mrs. Ralston and [illegible] was employed at Roxbury Crossing. Maud [illegible] is nearly twenty-five years old and anxious for information regarding her parents [illegible].

Mrs. Margaret Best of No. 250 Fifth street, Fall River, writes to the Sunday American:

"I am an orphan girl with one sister living. I was [illegible] when [illegible] of five years of age. To my best recollection my parents were [illegible] living in Holyoke, Mass. My father's name was [illegible] McCabe and he was one of the firm of McCabe Bros., undertakers, in that place. [illegible] any information regarding him or regarding my sister, Nora McCabe."

George Washington

UNTO every generation of Americans George Washington is justly held to be the purest figure in history—a superb example of the perfect citizen—a just and righteous ruler and "a light for after time."

This commanding personality had a magnificent physique. He stood over six feet in his stockings, was remarkable for horsemanship, agility and strength—the finest gentleman and athlete of his day.

His constitution was of iron and he knew how to keep it so. His biographers declare that in eating and in drinking as in all things he was normal; enjoying the juice of the malt all the days of his life. He drank it around campfires, as well as in his own home and upon social and state occasions.

Furthermore, upon his Mount Vernon plantation he had a brew house, as was the regular custom of wealthy Virginians.

SOCIETY PLUNGES INTO ROLLER SKATE GAYETY

Drop Dancing Pumps for Latest Diversion to While Away the Drowsy Days of Lent.

By a Society Woman.

Shades of our prim and Puritan ancestry, society dames and damsels whiling and whirling away the hours on roller skates.

Yes, roller skates have taken the place of dancing during Lent, and beaux and belles of the smart set who are not of the High Church and are given to but a perfunctory observance of Lent have substituted the seductive roller skate for the dancing pumps which have served so long.

It is proving a delightful means to a desirable end. It is an exercise that keeps one in good physical form and is a welcome change from the overdone dance. The children of the Back Bay have also taken up the fad, and nearly every day, when the weather is fine, rosy-faced groups of them may be seen racing along Commonwealth avenue and Beacon street at breakneck speed.

The older members of the fashionable set have not as yet taken to the streets with their skates, but many of them have had spare rooms fitted into rinks, where they [illegible] and gracefully glide away the hours that would otherwise be a bit monotonous at this season.

Lenten Wedding Bells.

Weddings in Lent are so rare that when one does occur all there is of society left in town is sure to be there, and so Miss Charlotte Young's wedding to William Tudor at Emmanuel Church to-morrow promises to be quite as large and brilliant as those of Easter or June. It was only two weeks ago that Miss Young's brother, Benjamin L. Young, [illegible] was married [illegible] same church to Mary Hall of Bay State Road.

The ceremony takes place at 11 o'clock and will be followed by a small reception at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Benjamin Young, on Beacon street. Miss Margaret Young will be her sister's maid of honor and the ushers have been chosen among Mr. Tudor's classmates, Harvard '98.

Miss Young in her bridal robes of white satin will make a most picturesque appearance as she is tall, dark and [illegible], with a beautifully expressive [illegible]. She is a favorite niece of Mrs. [illegible] Stevenson and a cousin of Mrs. Huntington Wolcott (Hannah Stevenson), a recent bride, and of Mrs. Robert Saltonstall.

Mr. Tudor is the third in his family to wed within six months, both his younger sisters, Mrs. Louis Fletcher and Mrs. Reginald Gray, being brides of the Autumn. Another sister is the Countess de Pierrefeu. His older brother Harry married Eleanor Gray. Mrs. James Garland, Mrs. Starling Burgess and Mrs. Ned Slade are cousins.

Harvard Man to Wed.

Another interesting wedding to take place to-morrow will be that in St. James Protestant Episcopal Church, New York, of William Lawrence Breeze, Harvard '04, and Miss Julia Fish. Thomas Bottelle, a Harvard classmate of the groom, son of [M]r and Mrs. Eugene Battelle of Marlboro street, and Charles Lawrence will be the Boston ushers.

ANNOUNCE BETROTHALS OF MEMBERS OF THE HUB COLONY OF FASHIONABLES

An out of town engagement which is of much interest to the exclusive set in Boston is that announced on Monday of Miss Mary Bowditch of Albany and Washington and Francis Otway Byrd of New York. Ever since her debut, Miss Bowditch has spent much of her time here with her relatives, chiefly with the Vincent Bowditches of Beacon street, and has been looked upon by society here as one of its own. Miss Bowditch is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bowditch and a niece of Mrs. Robert Murray, Mrs. Oliver Murray and Mrs. Archibald Murray of New York.

Mr. Byrd is a son of the George H. Byrds, who have lived in New York a number of years, and once owned a handsome Summer place on Lake Champlain. They belong to one of the oldest Virginia families, being related to the Virginia and Maryland Carters. They are also connections of the Cuttings and Mrs. Townsend Burden of New York. The wedding will take place in the early Summer.

* * *

Of much interest to a large circle is the announced engagement of Miss Edith Merrill, eldest daughter of Dr. Frederick Merrill of Boston and Roxbury, to William Ralph Maxon of Washington. Miss Merrill has been much admired both here and in Washington, where she has spent considerable time and where she first met her fiance two years ago. She has just returned from a visit to the Capital city, where she was the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Frank Baker, and it was at the conclusion of her stay there that the engagement was announced.

Mr. Maxon was formerly a New York man, but has for some time been connected with the Smithsonian Institute at Washington, and is just now at Harvard, where he is doing some research work. He is a graduate of Yale. The marriage will take place early in June.

* * *

Another interesting betrothal is that of Miss Helen C. McKey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. McKey of Brookline, to Charles Waldo Adams, Jr., of Paris, France, formerly of Chicago. The announcement was made at a reception given at the McKey home Tuesday, and since then the prospective bride has been literally deluged with flowers and felicitations. It is expected that Mr. Adams will come to America in June, and that the wedding will take place then.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Wesley Bragg of No. 301 Beacon street, have announced the engagement of their niece, Edith Louise Emery, to Ervin Demmon Renick, also of Beacon street.

* * *

The many friends of Miss Theodosia A. Roberts, daughter of Harry C. Roberts of Brookline and Boston, were delighted to learn of her engagement to Lieut. Edward A. Stockton, Jr., C. S. A., now stationed in Washington.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Eldredge of Holbrook street, Jamaica Plain, have just announced the engagement of their niece, Miss Alice M. Wentworth, to Arthur B. Cleveland of Roslindale. Mr. Cleveland is, at present, in South Dakota where he is employed by the government as a civil engineer.

* * *

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Elizabeth Randall Murphy, daughter of James R. Murphy of Hotel Buckminster, to Wilbur Warren Higgins of Cambridge.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Melville L. Cook of Francis street, Brookline, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Helen M., to Walter Stanley Bucklin, also of Brookline.

Popular Society Girl to Be Feted on Return From Europe

100 VINCENT GIRLS IN 'HOODWINK' CAST

Arrangements Go Merrily On For Production of Helen Guild's Clever Play.

Preparations for the Vincent Club show in April are progressing merrily, and so busy are the members with rehearsals that they find little time for anything else save an occasional spin on their roller skates or a game or two of bridge.

The name of the play which was written for the club by Miss Helen Guild has been changed from "A Midsummer Night's Madness" to the shorter and more mysterious title, "Hoodwink."

There are a hundred of the cleverest girls of the club in the cast, and it is said that the show this year will be far superior to any given before. The first scene opens in a fashionable hotel, and later in the play the characters adjourn to a masked ball, where ample opportunity is given for the clever stunts of the members.

Miss Katherine Fay, who has not taken part in the club's shows for several seasons, will again be seen in some artistic fancy dances, as will also Miss Olivia Thorndike and Miss Helen Prince of Paris.

Miss Anne Lindsay will be at the head of the attractive group of ushers and Miss Elizabeth Porter will conduct the orchestra.

The dates of the performances are Wednesday afternoon, April 29, Thursday afternoon, the 30th, and Friday evening, May 1.

A welcome oasis in the Lenten desert will be the performances of "Romeo and Juliet" to be given in Jordan Hall next Thursday afternoon and Friday evening by the Lend a Hand Dramatic Club for the benefit of the Trade School for Girls and the Boston Normal School of Gymnastics.

Mrs. Samuel A. Eliot, Mrs. William A. Copeland, Mrs. Malcolm Seymour, Mrs. Harry L. Burrage, Mrs. LeBaron R. Briggs, Mrs. Samuel M. Crothers, Mrs. Mary Morton Kehew, Mrs. Edward A. Horton, Mrs. William H. Lyon, Mrs. Albert L. Lincoln, Mrs. Jerome Jones, Mrs. James R. Dunbar, Mrs. John E. Gale, Mrs. John P. Meade, Mrs. Charles J. Rolfe, Mrs. Joseph Balch, Mrs. James W. Carret, Mrs. Charles Merriam, Mrs. W. Waldo Merrill, Mrs. Anna C. Hewes, Miss Amy Homans, Miss Elizabeth M. Eustis, Miss Helen Kimball, Miss Ida Mason, and Miss Edith M. Howes are the patronesses.

The honorary patrons are Rev. Edward Everett Hale, D. D., President L. Clark Seelye, D. D., Professor William J. Rolfe and Alfred Young.

The club has its own orchestra which will be under the direction of Miss Elizabeth Loring.

The Sarah Fuller Home for little children who are deaf will be benefited by the lecture on "Foibles and Furbelows," to be given by John Colby Abbott at the Tuileries Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The patronesses are Mrs. Brooks Adams, Miss Mary T. Andrews, Mrs. Alfred Bowditch, Mrs. Peter C. Brooks, Miss Fanny Brooks, Miss Louise W. Brooks, Mrs. Robert F. Clark, Mrs. J. Randolph Coolidge, Jr., Mrs. Louis Curtis, Mrs. John E. Devlin, Mrs. Norwood P. Hallowell, Mrs. B. F. Hayes, Mrs. Henry Jackson, Mrs. Arthur Little, Mrs. E. L. Osgood, Mrs. John Thorndike, Mrs. William W. Vaughan and Mrs. Edmund M. Wheelwright.

A vaudeville concert by professional talent will be given in Potter Hall Wednesday night for the benefit of the Charity Club Hospital. Among the patronesses are Mrs. Edgar M. Young, Mrs. Austin C. Wellington, Mrs. W. G. Blanchard, Mrs. Joseph B. Gould, Mrs. Albert Geiger, Mrs. C. H. Bond, Mrs. J. Sewell Reed, Mrs. J. F. Bunting, Mrs. Samuel Crowell and Mrs. Joseph B. Gould.

The committee in charge is composed of prominent members of the club, among whom are Miss Frances Gallier, Miss Florence Crockett, Miss Julia Brown, Mrs. Eugene Bessel and Miss Maude Abbott.

GAELIC STUDENTS TO SPREAD REVIVAL

Instructor O'Daley to Continue Good Work Resulting From Evening Class.

Encouraged by the success of the evening class in Gaelic at the English High School on Montgomery street, several of the pupils are planning to act as missionaries in all parts of the State to arouse greater interest in the revival of the Irish language.

The class, which opened in January, will close for the summer season on Thursday, April 2.

Instructor Patrick J. O'Daley, through whose efforts the class was started, is much pleased with the work of the last [illegible] months, and hopes for an even larger [illegible] when the studies are resumed after the vacation.

It is the intention of Mr. O'Daley, assisted by others interested in the Irish movement, to have branches of the school in every part of Boston. He will make an effort to have the language included in the course of studies in the parochial schools in the several parishes of the city.

Speaking upon this new movement which he is about to inaugurate, Mr. O'Daley said: "It is generally acknowledged that the Anglo-Saxon tongue was the ground work of the English language, and it is recently acknowledged, though not generally, that when the Anglo Saxons came to Briton in the middle of the fifth century, A. D., they did not have an alphabet, and, as a natural consequence, that their vocabulary was limited. English language has a copious vocabulary which it borrowed from all the other languages of Europe, mainly the Latin and Greek, the Irish getting credit for only a small percentage.

"All that the languages of Europe could give us we have got, and more, for our false etymology has come from them and still there remains a large percentage of our vocabulary unaccounted for. Therefore, from samples already given by Irish scholars, we must depend on the Irish language to explain all the etymological deficiencies of the English languages—all assisting therein now. Why, therefore, are American scholars, and the American nation so indifferent about the Irish language?"

It is expected that the members of the A. O. H. will take up the Irish language revival at the biennial convention of the national body at Indianapolis next July. National President Mathew J. Cummings, who gave Mr. O'Daley support in introducing the language in the evening high school, is already in favor of the project, and will undoubtedly suggest in his report plans to further advance the movement.

GAVE EMPLOYES CONDEMNED MEAT?

Springfield, March 21.—Charged with distributing condemned meat among the employees of the Springfield Rendering Company, James H. Fitzgerald, a U. S. inspector at the plant, has been suspended by Dr. Henry E. Brown, inspector in chief of this district. It is charged that Fitzgerald distributed to the employees condemned meat which had been sent to the company to be rendered into soap and similar products.

Form Company to Give a Permanent Home to Grand Opera in Boston

Eben D. Jordan Said to Have Offered to Erect Building to Cost $700,000

Detailed announcement was made yesterday of the plans made to secure permanent grand opera for Boston [illegible] in the season. It is planned to have the opera open in 1909.

The Boston Opera Company has been incorporated, with Eben D. Jordan, George R. Fearing, Jr., Charles Hayden, and others as directors. The company is incorporated for $150,000, with shares at a par value of $100. Invitations have been issued to subscribe to stock.

It is stated that a generous "Boston citizen," who is known to be Eben D. Jordan, has offered to build an opera house on Huntington avenue, near Gainsborough street, to cost $700,000 for the land and building. A guarantee of the expense of performances for three years is offered, providing the company is incorporated as above, that the house is rented by the company and that subscriptions to the boxes for three years be obtained at $2,000 a year for each box.

Mr. Henry Russell, impresario of the San Carlo Grand Opera Company, is to be managing director with full power. The plan is to give a season of fifteen weeks in Boston, with probably five weeks in other cities. The price of seats is to range from three dollars down to seventy-five cents.

Avoid Secret Stomach Remedies

Because Most of Them Contain Dangerous Ingredients, Which Produce the Drug Habit.

Thousands of people, having dyspepsia or stomach troubles in some form, continually "dope" themselves with all sorts of secret tonics, drugs, pills, cathartics, etc., which not only inflame and irritate the stomach and intestines, but in many cases cause the opium, morphine and cocaine habits.

You have a right and should demand to know what any medicine contains before you take it, unless it is put up or recommended by some reputable physician. Fakes and quacks will put most anything into their secret preparations to make you like their useless stuff so as to want more of it, until it makes you the victim of some drug habit, which will ruin your health in a short time.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are not a secret remedy; they do not contain injurious drugs, and they are recommended by thousands of physicians in the United States and Canada to their patients for dyspepsia, catarrh of the stomach, and all other stomach troubles resulting from improper digestion of food.

These wonderful tablets actually digest food because they contain the very elements that are required of a healthy stomach to properly digest food, thus acting as a substitute and giving the overworked digestive organs a rest and a chance to regain their former health, strength and vigor.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain fruit and vegetable essences, the pure concentrated tincture of hydrastis, and golden seal, which tone up and strengthen the mucous coats of the stomach and increase the flow of gastric and other digestive juices; lactose (extracted from milk); nux, to strengthen the nerves controlling the action of the stomach; bismuth, to absorb gases and prevent fermentation, and pure aseptic pepsin (gov. test) of the highest digestive power. All of these are scientifically incorporated in these tablets or lozenges and constitute a complete, natural, speedy cure for any stomach trouble.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold in large fifty-cent boxes, by all druggists.

Independence Party Spreads Consternation in Republican and Democratic Ranks

MACHINE MANAGERS FIND ALL CALCULATIONS COMPLETELY UPSET

'STRENGTH OF PARTY CAN'T BE ESTIMATED'

Political Comment in Newspapers of the Country Mainly About New Party—"Will Hurt Taft as Well as the Democracy."

GREAT THREE-CORNERED FIGHT IS EXPECTED

Democratic Papers, in Effort to Prevent Defection, Say There Is Little in National Party Platform That Democratic Convention Cannot Embody. Republicans Told to Heed Hearst Planks at Chicago Convention.

Throughout the press of the entire country is reflected the spirit of amazement with which the politicians views the rapid growth of the Independence National Party.

The guessing contest that started in the camps of Republicanism and Democracy the day the new party was launched has grown even more intense during the past week, and some of the newspapers believe the Republican party will be almost as badly disorganized as the Democracy during the coming campaign.

Others profess to believe that the National Party votes will come mainly from the Democracy, which will be annihilated by the newer party in the coming campaign.

The newspapers show that political discussion in the country is not so much about who will be the Democratic nominee or who will be the Republican nominee as it is about what the new party intends to do. Its plans are looked upon as the greatest political conundrum in several decades.

Newspaper comments show clearly that the politicians are thoroughly scared.

"WILL DRAW VOTES FROM BOTH PARTIES"

(From the Bellingham (Wash.) Herald.)

The final determination of William R. Hearst to form a new political party [illegible] campaign of the present year [illegible] William Jennings Bryan. It probably removes the last hope of Bryan's friends and [illegible] of the [illegible] Republicans may place in the field. This at any rate, is the feeling that prevails among men in Washington where Hearst is known and where his strength in certain quarters [illegible].

It is true that Hearst as the [illegible] of an independent party [illegible] independent candidate he [illegible] from both the Republican and Democratic candidates [illegible] his support [illegible] from the voters [illegible] Bryan [illegible] Hearst will [illegible] than Bryan [illegible] New York [illegible] California [illegible] polled. Hearst has the distinct advantage [illegible] the people [illegible] New York [illegible] Chicago American [illegible] San Francisco Examiner [illegible] issues, [illegible].

It has been known for months that New York and New England have not looked with favor on Bryan. The Democrats of that section have hoped against hope that Bryan could be side-tracked. They tried to persuade him to withdraw, but to no purpose. They evidently [illegible] to shove some [illegible] conservative candidate to the front [illegible] Now [illegible] along comes Hearst. He is no more favored by the business interests than is Bryan [illegible] business interests [illegible] the Democrats [illegible] Bryan [illegible] the New York and New England [illegible] hopes [illegible] Bryan [illegible] his party.

The Hearst candidacy will lend interest to the campaign [illegible] Bryan from his favorite [illegible] Democratic candidate for the presidency.

"DEMOCRATIC LEADERS ARE MUCH CONCERNED"

(From the St. Louis Times.)

While the Democratic leaders acting the part of wisdom are giving no sharp outward signs of anxiety over the activities of William Randolph Hearst and his Independence League, they are nevertheless giving them due heed, and are feeling much inward concern. They don't know just what Mr. Hearst is driving at though they would give much to learn. Moreover the party's leaders here fear that the gentleman from New York, Chicago, California and elsewhere is bent on playing into the hands of the Republican enemy.

This Hearst [illegible] Hearst [illegible] at the present moment, but it makes little difference, for whatever way it is looked at, there can be seen but little comfort for the regular Democracy, provided, of course, that Mr. Hearst [illegible] Democrats in Washington [illegible] praying [illegible] this is not [illegible] allowed to go his own way [illegible] a better chance [illegible] to bring the Hearst [illegible] line.

It was charged here that the editor was acting in the interests of the election of Secretary Taft [illegible] truth is, and it is admitted by the thoughtful Democrats, that the Hearst candidacy would hurt Mr. Taft just as much as it would hurt the candidacy of any other Republican suggested for the nomination.

IN POSITION TO MAKE A LOT OF TROUBLE

(From the Literary Digest.)

If the attitude of the press counts for anything, Mr. Hearst's new "National Independence party" will have little support in the coming campaign. Hardly a newspaper outside of his own group of journals has a good word for it. But in his campaign for Mayor of New York the same thing was true, and he polled enough votes to put the result in doubt; in his campaign for Governor in 1906 he nearly carried New York State under similar conditions, and in Massachusetts his Independence League won second place, making the Democrats a "third party." We have not seen any predictions that he will cut any large figure in the returns next November, but during the campaign "it requires little imagination to foresee that he may be in a position to make a lot of trouble," remarks the Baltimore News (Ind.). It will be hard for the Democratic party to resist any demands he may make, short of the presidential nomination, thinks this paper.

Mr. Hearst's idea, however, seems to be that the Democratic party has outlived its usefulness and that the time for a new party has come. Both the old parties have ceased to stand for any definite idea. "The word Democracy defines no doctrine," he declares, "the word Republican expresses no principle." One wing of a party stands for one thing, another for the very opposite.

"Hearst Candidacy Would Hurt Taft As Much as Any Other Nominee"

(From the St. Louis Times.)

While the Democratic leaders acting the part of wisdom are giving no sharp outward signs of anxiety over the activities of William Randolph Hearst and his Independence League, they are nevertheless giving them due heed, and are feeling much inward concern. They don't know just what Mr. Hearst is driving at, though they would give much to learn. Moreover, the party's leaders here fear that the gentleman from New York, Chicago, California and elsewhere is bent on playing into the hands of the Republican enemy.

It was charged here that the editor was acting in the interests of the election of Secretary Taft in case the Secretary should be the nominee. The truth is, and it is admitted by the thoughtful Democrats, that the Hearst candidacy would hurt Mr. Taft just as much as it would hurt the candidacy of any other Repubilcan suggested for the nomination.

"Hearst May Leave Bryan But Half of Vote He Had in 1906"

(From the New York Evening Mail.)

In each of the last three Presidential elections a slice has been cut from the Democratic party. The determination of the Hearst following to go it alone this Fall makes it certain that a fourth slice will be taken from a body politic in no condition for further carving.

If the Hearst party develops anywhere near the strength it has shown in the last three years in State and municipal elections—it cast 250,000 votes in New York, Massachusetts and California last Fall—it may leave Bryan little more than half the popular vote he had in 1896. It has already put his party in third place in Massachusetts.

Progressive and cumulative blood-letting seems to be the fate of the Democratic party under Bryanism. It has excommunicated its conservative elements, and its radical elements have been affected by the centrifugal influence of outside parties. The history of the Democratic party may well lead thoughtful Democrats to raise the question, "Whither?"

"HEARST PLANS SHOULD BE FULLY ESTIMATED"

(From the Omaha Bee.)

William Randolph Hearst has at least relieved anxiety and put an end to speculation as to the course he and his Independence Party are to pursue in the coming campaign. Since the [illegible] Hearst [illegible] Independence League and give it a national [illegible] the story was to the effect that Hearst would [illegible] Bryan [illegible] Roosevelt [illegible] Johnson of Minnesota [illegible] editorial [illegible] Mr. Hearst sets all these [illegible] at rest.

The effect of the Hearst programme, if carried out, on the political prospects of the Democratic party should not be underestimated. Hearst came within 4,000 votes of being elected Mayor of New York in 1905 on the Independence League ticket, even though the counting was in the hands of the Tammany organization. Under its own [illegible] Hearst [illegible] votes [illegible] of New York in 1906, and [illegible] the election of the entire Democratic State ticket, with which he was fused, with the exception of the [illegible]. The Independence party polled 120,000 votes in New York in 1907 for its candidates for judges, and in the same year polled 75,000 votes for its candidate for Governor of Massachusetts, pushing the Democratic party into third place in that State. It polled 4,000 votes at the California State election and has developed a considerable strength in municipal affairs in Chicago.

'LEAGUE MAY SUPPLANT DEMOCRATIC PARTY'

(From the Nashville Banner.)

The indications now are that there will be three Presidential candidates in the contest this year—three commanding a respectable following, and all of them more or less radical. These candidates, too, will each stand more as the representative of a personal following than as a party routine. Their names will be most likely William J. Bryan, William H. Taft and William R. Hearst. Mr. Bryan and Mr. Hearst will represent chiefly themselves and Mr. Taft, standing nominally as the Republican candidate, will be really the representative of Mr. Roosevelt and what Mr. Roosevelt has come to represent independently of his party's past record.

It is presumed that the Independence League will make Mr. Hearst its candidate. If it doesn't, whoever it nominates will be even more representative of Mr. Hearst [illegible] Secretary Taft of President Roosevelt.

It is a fact [illegible] the country is pretty well divided [illegible] followers of three [illegible] Roosevelt and Hearst [illegible] Mr. Roosevelt's [illegible] his party to the [illegible] the Independence [illegible] strength as to [illegible] the Republican candidate [illegible] overwhelming [illegible] largely [illegible] Independence League [illegible] the election of 1912 and [illegible] between radical and conservative candidates.

'LIKELY TO CHANGE VOTING RESULTS'

"Platform More Conservative Than Roosevelt or Nebraska Platform."

(From the Denver News.)

Politicians have been wondering what Mr. Hearst will do this year with his Independence party.

The Brooklyn Eagle, shortly after the [illegible] of the Independence party, insisted that Hearst was [illegible] to execute a spectacular [illegible] by nominating and re-electing the strenuous Roosevelt to the presidency.

Not long after that the Washington Post ventured the prediction that the Independence party was to make William Jennings Bryan its candidate, and thus [illegible] certain of his nomination and election.

[illegible] other day the New York World, which is fathering the boom of Governor Johnson of Minnesota, [illegible] and fight him should he be renominated, insisted that Hearst and his Independence party were behind the [illegible] Johnson and [illegible] the dead carcass of Nebraska's favorite son.

While the Independence party can't [illegible] a very wide swath [illegible] Fall, it is not unlikely to change the results in some of the closer States. Its personnel is chiefly made up from the socialistic elements, and these elements have been developing with considerable force in the two old parties.

We read the platform of the Independence party as promulgated by Mr. Hearst the other day and [illegible] it to be a [illegible] conservative document. It is more conservative than are the messages of President Roosevelt or is the Nebraska platform. It comes out strong for a great navy, for the workingmen's interests and for ship subsidies.

'MAYOR M'CLELLAN MUST TOE THE MARK'

"Hearst Showed Impartial Persons Mayoralty Count Was Falsified."

(From the Philadelphia Inquirer.)

In 1905 McClellan and Hearst ran for Mayor of New York city. The former was seated. The latter proceeded to show, which he did to the satisfaction of most impartial persons, that the election figures had been falsified [illegible] McClellan was in possession of stolen goods.

Ever since that election of November [illegible] Mayor McClellan has been fighting [illegible] recount. During all this time the Hearst lawyers have been struggling in the courts to get those boxes open. At last comes the victory. The Court of Appeals has decreed that the Attorney-General has the right to order the opening of any ballot box he sees fit.

This Mayoralty contest has been a [illegible] that has dragged its shameful [illegible] the highways [illegible] of New York for two years and more. A Mayor has [illegible] denying the right of any one to question his title. But the [illegible] feature of it all has been [illegible] moment of this final decision [illegible] has been [illegible] no matter how [illegible] officers may be, there is [illegible] to expose them.

[illegible] is the one great point—that [illegible] to be charged, and all offers to prove that it has been committed can be rejected.

But at last the tide has turned. It has been settled (although only by a vote of 4 to 3 think of that)—that ballot boxes can be opened, and that decision is of the utmost importance to every honest citizen of the United States of America.

Mayor McClellan must now toe the mark.

Independence Party Now Active in Utah

(From the Salt Lake City News.)

Utah from now on is to be acquainted with William R. Hearst and his "Independence League" provided J. L. Elgholtz, now at the Kautsford, is able to organize a branch of the movement here. Mr. Elgholtz declares that the movement is gaining national recognition, and that in Nevada it was recently organized, with Edward Stone of Goldfield, a miners' union president, as local organizer.

"Bryan Third in Some of the Important States"

(From the Charlotte, N. C., Observer.)

The press of the country is manifesting considerable interest, as it naturally might be expected to, in the fact, discussed in yesterday's Observer, that Mr. W. R. Hearst, the favorite of the radical elements, without regard to party, has declared his intentions at last. Either he or some one owned by him will make the race on his new national party's ticket. It seems certain that if Mr. Bryan gets himself nominated yet again, the Democratic candidate will run third in some very important States.

'FIRST REAL THREE-CORNERED FIGHT SINCE 1860.'

Record of Three Campaigns Pointed Out as Food for Political Thought.

(From the Meriden, Conn., Journal.)

The authoritative announcement yesterday by William R. Hearst that the National Independence League, of which he is the controlling spirit, will not in the approaching presidential [illegible] support Theodore Roosevelt, William J. Bryan or Governor Johnson of Minnesota, but is to go it alone, nominating its own presidential ticket, has caused quite a sensation in political circles.

The announcement is interpreted to mean that Mr. Hearst's league will not support any candidate to be named by the Republicans at Chicago, or any candidate to be named by the Democrats at Denver, but that in addition [illegible] its own presidential ticket the Independence Leagues of the different States are to name State tickets as well.

Mr. Hearst's National Independence League, according to the announcement made at Chicago on February 22, is to be known as the National party and is to have its national convention after the Republicans and Democrats have adjourned.

Mr. Hearst made this additional announcement: "The Independence party is going to nominate its own candidate for President and is going to vote for him with a strength and a heartiness of numbers that is likely to be a revelation to the older and sadder political organizations. If it does not [illegible] this [illegible] of its own [illegible] it is going to lay the solid foundation for doing so in the [illegible]."

This will be the first year since 1860 that [illegible] three-cornered fight for President. While there have been a number of small parties to dispute the day with the Republicans and Democrats at each quadrennial election and although Weaver developed a considerable strength in 1892 there has really been no party heretofore big enough to be a factor in the polling save in spots. The Hearst party has organization and influential newspapers and will have plenty of money and has a voting record [illegible] that indicates its power to confuse calculation and smash slates.

"Republican Convention Must Heed Hearstism"

(From the St. Louis Democrat.)

The Independence League, which is expected to take the name of National party in the presidential campaign, is to meet after the two big organizations have had their conventions, and is to put up a ticket and frame a platform. The time and place of the meeting has not yet been decided on but it is authoritatively announced that it will be an independent party, and will work on its own lines and by its own methods. Mr. Hearst proclaims that the National party will not support Roosevelt, Bryan or Johnson. He mentions these in particular because popular report variously attributed to the party a purpose of taking up some one of these personages. This assurance may or may not get much attention at Denver, for defeat can bring no additional embarrassment or humiliation to the Democratic party. But the men who shape the action at Chicago will need to take the Hearst diversion into account, especially because of Hearst's known strength in New York, which may turn out to be the decisive State in 1908, as it was in 1880, 1884 and 1888, and as it was several times before the Civil War.

"Perhaps Personality Is Campaign Issue"

(From the Johnstown, Pa., Journal.)

Mr. Hearst may be right in thinking there is need of a new party which having no record of consistency and past glory, can represent without embarrassment the appeal to mob discontent, to the class-labor vote, to the spirit of semi-socialism, to poverty against prosperity.

But the question arises whether this new party can inspire more confidence than either of the old parties as now organized and led.

On the basis of the Declaration of Principles it offers a refuge for the Roosevelt Democrats who are not wholly satisfied with certain Republican notions that the President persists in holding. It offers likewise a refuge to those Bryan Republicans and Populists who have no sympathy with the few Jeffersonian generalities which Democratic conventions still adhere to as a matter of form. But this advantage can be easily overestimated.

Perhaps, on the whole, the issue of personality is the dominating element, and the new party must make its final appeal to those voters who find Mr. Hearst more stable intellectually than Mr. Bryan and less violent temperamentally than Mr. Roosevelt.

'LEAGUE PROGRAM HAS DEMOCRATS ALARMED'

(From the Toledo Blade.)

Politicians are "up in the air" over the mysterious programme of the Independence League, the personal political organization of William Randolph Hearst. Rumors that the league would support Roosevelt or Johnson, or Bryan, led the editor of a Hearst newspaper to divulge the truth of the league's intentions, namely, that it would support none of the men named, but would have a candidate of its own and would conduct a campaign that would compel the old parties to sit up and take notice.

Bryan Democrats have already taken alarm and are speculating as to the probable influence the League will have on the election. Unquestionably with a candidate in the field the League would draw more largely from the Democrats than from the Republicans, and the very character of the Hearst following would indicate that he will attract men who would otherwise vote for Bryan. This would amount to a serious defection in the very Northern States that Bryan must carry to be elected. Suppose, for illustration, Mr. Hearst himself should run as the League's candidate, he would poll a vote in New York State so large that it is a question if Bryan would run better than third. And if the Nebraskan cannot carry New York it is useless to consider any other Northern State as being in the doubtful column.

Apparently it is the opinion of the League's leaders that there is no chance of Mr. Bryan's election, and that with his defeat this year the Democratic party will be hopelessly foundered.

In that case, the League will be on hand to gather up the wreckage and invite the disgusted Democrats to enlist under its banner with a view to massing strength with the Republican party in the national campaign of 1912.

"DEMOCRATS COULD TAKE HEARST PLANKS"

(From the Dubuque Telegraph-Herald.)

William R. Hearst, through his Independence League, promises another third party in the campaign of the coming Fall. On Washington's birthday Mr. Hearst held a conference with many of his supporters in Chicago and was by them authorized to call a convention after the Republican and Democratic conventions for the purpose of putting forth a declaration of principles and nominating a Presidential ticket. One feature of this action is significant. Not long ago the announced purpose of the Independence League was to put its ticket in the field before the convention of either old party. Another significant thing was that in his address to his conferees Mr. Hearst refrained from any attack upon the Democratic party, confining himself to the statement that nobody could tell what that party might do until its convention had acted. In this an observer might be justified in guessing that the Independence League was really waiting to see whether the reactionaries would control either or both of the old parties and that its position would be taken in accordance with the facts thus discovered.

It may be said with the utmost confidence that there are only two suggestions made by him (two recommendations for which he stands) that might not win place in a Democratic platform. He declares for a ship subsidy, one of the issues on which Democrats are a unit in opposition to the Republicans. And he approves, though it is true, with a certain hesitation and some apology, of the issuance of money altogether through the national banks and not by the government direct. There may be omissions from his platform of Democratic ideas but these propositions seem to be the only ones that would not find favor in a Democratic committee on resolutions. This being the case, if the purpose of the leader of the Independence League is to press principles rather than men it seems probable that he will find his vital principles in the platform to be adopted at Denver next July.

'MADE AN AMERICAN FIGHT FOR RECOUNT'

"Deserves Non-Partisans' Thanks for Claiming Right to Open Ballot Boxes."

(From the Binghamton Press.)

The reconciliation of Charles F. Murphy and Mayor George B. McClellan of New York came at a peculiarly interesting juncture. Occurring as it did on the eve of the decision announcing that William Randolph Hearst has a right to compel the opening of the ballot boxes used in the 1905 election it was significant.

Mr. Hearst has made a patient, determined, American fight for his rights. While fighting for his own rights, however, he has fought for the rights of the thousands of citizens who gave him their ballots, as against the candidates who opposed him.

Even those who may not like Mr. Hearst's political methods must agree that it is the right of a candidate to have every ballot cast for him recorded for him, whether those ballots be few or many. When such ballots are so numerous as to raise a question of the validity of an announced election result, when corruption has been proven; when all the power of a big machine is used to delay justice, the right to inspect the ballots becomes a paramount right. Mr. Hearst has vindicated his claim to his right to have the ballot boxes opened. He deserves the thanks of men, regardless of party, for his unswerving devotion to public duty. The decision of the State's highest court will meet the views of men of all parties.

National Party Will Draw from Both Parties

(Philadelphia Inquirer.)

At last something that has the appearance of Democratic opposition to Bryan is in evidence. The Democratic State Committee of Minnesota has, by a vote of 68 to 23, refused to indorse Bryan, and has offered Governor John A. Johnson to the Democratic party as a fitting and worthy candidate for President.

More to the point is the announcement made by Mr. Hearst that the third party which he has organized will not support Roosevelt, will not accept Bryan, will not indorse Johnson, but will nominate a candidate for President of its own and make a vigorous campaign. Here is a complication of which Mr Bryan will have to take notice, for the Independence League, or National Party, as it is to be called, we believe, is calculated to draw from the Democratic forces in larger proportions than from the Republican.

'CANNOT ESTIMATE THE OUTSIDE VOTE'

(From the Salt Lake City Telegram.)

The politician who is sure that his candidate will be elected next Autumn may be disappointed. No one can estimate what the outside vote is going to be this year. We mean outside the Republican and Democratic parties. The Independence League claims that in the race it will be second. In many places the labor hosts are in an angry mood, just the mood to want to smash something and no one can predict where their votes will land. The Independence League seems to be most formidable. It met in Chicago to name its national committee, and among other things put out a platform for the campaign. If it left anything out, it is not apparent at a first reading. It wants direct nominations, the referendum, the recall, drastic corrupt practices legislation, immediate public ownership of the telegraph and of other public utilities as rapidly as government shall demonstrate ability to conduct public utilities for public benefit, an emergency currency issued by the Government, the eight hour day, compulsory use of safety appliances on railroads, [illegible] good roads, parcels post and postal savings bank, penal antitrust laws, an interstate commerce court, irrigation, waterways improvement and tariff reform."

It will be seen that with many good things there is enough besides to catch almost every statesman who has a special ism or hobby and the league is a very strong organization, every indication points to a very largely increased vote of the third party this year.

Independence Party Is Working in Oregon

(From the Portland, Ore., Telegram.)

Paulinus McDonald has returned to Portland from attending a meeting of the Independence League at Chicago. The Hearst organization changed the name to the Independence party and authorized the executive committee to issue a call for a national convention for the purpose of nominating a Presidential ticket. While the sentiment of many delegates to the gathering favored Hearst, they were informed that Hearst is not over-anxious to be the candidate. The coast organizer, Edward Rainey, will be in Portland within a few days, when he will see what the prospects are for effecting a State organization of the Independence party and sending delegates to the national convention.

TWO-FAMILY HOUSE GROWS IN FAVOR

"The Investigator" Finds It Among the Best Form of Real Estate Investment.

POINTS OF SUPERIORITY

By the Investigator.

The two-family house is becoming more than ever the [illegible] of dwelling house around Boston. [illegible] and [illegible] features [illegible] a [illegible].

[illegible] today [illegible] sentiment [illegible] provide for [illegible].

[illegible] better sanitary [illegible].

[illegible] those whose [illegible] to purchase a two-family house [illegible] older [illegible] of buying [illegible] the total [illegible] saving [illegible] the pay ment for the property less burdensome.

The new two-family [illegible] process of [illegible] Harvard avenue, Allston, containing fifteen rooms with every modern improvement, renting for $85 a month, are good instances. Every detail [illegible] brought out [illegible] and are included. These [illegible] are models in every particular. They show what can be done in this direction.

Opportunities in Boston.

Boston affords a splendid opportunity for more of this type of dwelling. Within fifty miles of New York, this house being erected for $3,200.

Rather cheap, you say. So it is. [illegible] this type of house is but twenty feet wide [illegible] forty [illegible] feet six [illegible] depth [illegible] of the porches. The foundation [illegible] of brick, stone or cement [illegible].

The walls are [illegible] painted gray [illegible] and [illegible] white and the roof painted red.

The [illegible] to the left of the front door is [illegible] square, chambers adjoining [illegible] and kitchen in the rear [illegible] leading to the second story [illegible] private [illegible] to the right [illegible] with plenty of [illegible] The second story is a [illegible].

[illegible] two-family house [illegible] and in every way it provides a comfortable cosey house for a small family. The second story could be rented at a fair price, making the entire cost of the dwelling [illegible] for the purchaser.

[illegible] to give [illegible] style of a house [illegible] and wherein it is an improvement [illegible] many two-family houses [illegible] the past five years.

[illegible] of land recently sold on Commonwealth avenue, Brighton, will soon be [illegible] two-family houses [illegible] where the excellent features of [illegible] house may be put to the test. These will cost considerably more than the dwellings planned for the suburban districts of New York city.

They will be larger and more costly material and arrangements will mark their contents.

But it is a move in the right direction.

because this style of house is found to be more popular. There is something [illegible] intrinsically defective in many of the plans used heretofore to some extent. We are on the eve of seeing radical changes and architects have already solved the problem of making the most out of the space at their disposal.

W. J. McDonald of State street, a man of ripe experience and of good observation who wants to see every available spot crowned with sightly dwellings in the suburbs of Boston, lately ventured this opinion to the Investigator:

"I believe that the two-family house built in a prosperous location, will sell more readily than anything that can be built to-day.

"There is an enormous demand for these houses, particularly in Brookline and Allston. The great advantage is that when people get into a two-family house, they can rent one apartment from $400 to $600 a year, and have the other apartment for their own home.

"The two-family houses that are built to-day are so conveniently arranged that they are as convenient and homelike as a single house, and [illegible] a praiseworthy work in [illegible] more directly people's attention to this matter."

Inspected Vacant Land.

Encouraged by what he heard, the Investigator went the past week on a tour of inspection after vacant land. He wanted to discover locations where this New York project of erecting two-family houses for $3,200 was a possibility.

There is Arlington, where land can be purchased, 6,000 feet for $100, and on easy terms. Norwood, fifteen miles from Boston, a growing town, where it is difficult to rent a house, has thirty-four building lots on the electric road, 5,000 feet for $100.

He found seventeen lots in Lynn, 5,000 feet for $35, not very far from the electrics. Twenty-five dollars will buy a good-sized lot in Needham. [illegible] in Woburn, within five minutes of the railroad, 15,000 feet, can be purchased for $80. Wakefield has 5,000 feet for $30.

Most of this land is excellently adapted for homes. Wakefield has also, in a desirable locality, which is bound to build up in a few years, twenty-one and a half acres, and $300 an acre is what is here wanted.

Good land can be bought in Hyde Park in a very convenient neighborhood, 6,800 feet, for $400. Many lots in Waverley have already been sold, measuring 4,500 feet, from $200 to $1,200, and this property anticipates the coming of the Cambridge subway. Lots in Quincy and sections of Milton have already all been disposed of. J. V. MacCarthy, who has been largely instrumental in promoting sales in the above locality, and encouraging people to own their own homes, said recently:

"Boston is in better shape than any other city, better than any other city in the Union. I have traveled extensively and I feel this way. Money is here and the people generally are working and there are varied interests in and around Boston, so that people are not depending on one line of business, neither are we depending as they are in the majority of the cities of the West, upon a floating population.

"You'll see a great boom in real estate very soon. The people are awakening to their opportunity and my experience has taught me that more people are owning land to-day than ever before."

Newton Highlands, near Crystal Lake, has many desirable lots. Here there is much enthusiasm over cement dwellings. The land is offered at twenty-five cents a foot. A fine dwelling of white cement stone, containing fourteen rooms, will [illegible] one of the finest elevated spots in this neighborhood [illegible].

One of the [illegible] the nine-room dwelling now being erected in Newton. The hall will measure 20x20, with open fire places and so well arranged that the effect of the details with cement is here very noticeable. The walls are of limestone cement with stone balusters and stone steps. There is a tile floor on the piazza. The bathroom and kitchen are exquisitely finished in cement tile flooring.

The tile border in the living room with quartered oak flooring is original in design and very attractive.

The entrance [illegible] the living room twenty feet square with open fire places, heavy stone mantels and to the left a very pretty ingle nook with fancy leaded windows and an upholstered seat for a lounging place. The dining room with large colonial columns and arches on either side gives a good effect to the sight.

The stairway is finished in colonial white with mahogany rails and posts with the hall open to the roof. Looking down into the hall, the white balusters together with the mahogany rails makes a very attractive perspective.

A wide bay window lightens up the dining room and the walls are wainscotted in a panel effect with a burlap finish and a plate rail.

There are three chambers on the first floor and three on the second. Closet room abounds in every section of the house. The kitchen and bathroom are finished in white tile four feet high.

Cost of House Is $5,500.

This cement house measures fifty-four feet front and thirty-two deep. The piazza is ten feet wide on the two sides. The cost is $5,500.

Such a home could not be erected in lumber for this price, and the effect of the cement finish would be absent. The roof is made of red cement tile. It is shaped like a bungalow, with long overhanging roof of red tile, the rafters extending.

Such a house needs no repairs. It is cool in Summer and warm in Winter. The hollow walls allow a ten-inch space. It is absolutely fireproof and is doubtless the coming house in this part of the country.

Those who attempt to build cement houses should make the quality of the cement the first consideration. A practical knowledge of its properties and the proportions to be rightly used with the aid of a few simple tests will ward off failure. Those who rush in and use cement without some practical tests are likely to be disappointed. What is known as the Vicat needle is used extensively in testing the setting qualities of cement, and has succeeded the [illegible] needle used for United States government tests. Something more is needed than the pressure of the thumb for the setting properties of cement, and old fashioned methods must yield to more scientific treatment.

When care and experience characterize the uses of cement there is no doubt it will yield to the most exacting demands. But there is somewhat of an art in preparing it for dwelling houses, which comes after some well tried efforts and not from any process of guesswork.

To Owners of Bad Breath--

Foul Odor of Indigestion, Smoking, Eating or Drinking Stopped at Once With Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

Trial Package To Prove It Sent Free.

Bilious breathers, onion eaters, indigestion victims, cabbage consumers, smokers, drinkers and those with gas on the stomach are in a class all by themselves, distinguished by a powerful bad breath.

They all breathe, and as they breathe, they whiff out odor which makes those standing near turn their heads away in disgust. The pitiable part of it is that these victims do not realize what a sickening thing a bad, offensive breath is to others.

Charcoal is a wonderful absorber of gases and odors. It absorbs 100 times its own volume of gas.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will put a stop to your bad, offensive breath, and to your belchings, whatever the cause or source, because the charcoal quickly absorbs all noxious, unnatural odors and gases.

If you suffer from indigestion and belch gas as a result, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will absorb all the gas and make you stop belching.

If on getting up in the morning you have such a bad, bilious breath that you can almost smell it yourself, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will get rid of it for you quickly.

If you have been smoking or chewing, or have been eating onions or other odorous things, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will make your breath pure and sweet.

Charcoal is also the best laxative known. You can take a whole boxful and no harm will result. It is a wonderfully easy regulator.

And then, too, it filters your blood,—every particle of poison and impurity in your blood is destroyed, and you begin to notice the difference in your face first thing—your clear complexion.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made from pure willow charcoal, and just a little honey is put in to make them palatable, but not too sweet.

They will work wonders in your stomach, and make you feel fine and fresh. Your blood and breath will be purified. You will feel clean inside.

We want to prove all this to you, so just send for a free sample today. Then after you get it and use it, you will like them so well that you will go to your druggist and get a 25c box of these Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 200 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Kokomo Woman Gives A Fortune

Receives Hundreds of Requests Daily.

In the past few years Mrs. Cora B. Miller has spent [illegible] in giving medical treatment to afflicted women.

Some time ago we announced in the columns of this paper that she would send free treatment to every woman who suffered from female diseases or piles.

More than a million women have accepted this generous offer, and as Mrs. Miller is still receiving requests from thousands of women from all parts of the world, who have not yet used the remedy, she has decided to continue the offer for awhile longer, at least.

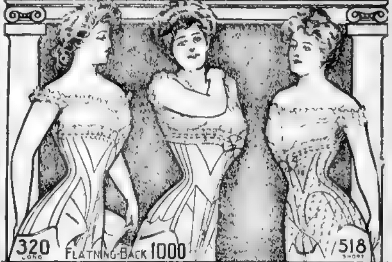
This is the simple, mild and harmless preparation that has cured so many women in the privacy of their own homes after doctors and other remedies failed.

It is especially prepared for the speedy and permanent cure of leucorrhoea or whitish discharges, ulceration, displacement or falling of the womb, profuse, scanty or painful periods, uterine or ovarian tumors or growths; also [illegible] bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, desire to cry, hot flashes, weariness and piles from any cause, or no matter of how long standing.

Every woman sufferer, unable to find relief, who will write Mrs. Miller now, without delay, will receive by mail free of charge, a 50-cent box of this simple home remedy, also a book with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer and how they can easily cure themselves at home without the aid of a physician.

Don't suffer another day, but write at once to Mrs. Cora B. Miller, 5504 Miller Building, Kokomo, Indiana.

A Nemo SELF-REDUCING CORSET FOR EVERY STOUT WOMAN



MORE than a million stout women know that the Nemo Self-Reducing is the only corset that will reduce the abdomen with perfect comfort and hygienic safety.

EVERY woman who has worn it knows that the Nemo Self-Reducing Corset is superior to all others in comfort, style and durability—that it is an extraordinary value simply as a corset, saying nothing about its invaluable and exclusive special features.

FOR 1908 we have nine handsome models (three pictured above): a model for every stout woman—tall and stout, short and stout, or just "fat." And there's a price to suit every purse.

At $3.00 The old favorites, Nos. 312 and 314, of which nearly a million pairs were sold in 1907; and for women who want the new "slender-hip" effect are the two new "Flatning-Back" models, Nos. 318 and 320, at the same price, $3.00.

At $5.00 Somewhat finer are the Mercerized Brocaded Corsets, Nos. 516 and 518, the French Coutil Corsets with bust supporters, No. 515; and the beautiful new "Flatning-Back" model, No. 517.

At $10 For women of luxurious tastes, who have paid $15 to $25 for imported corsets, is the superb No. 1000, with "Flatning-Back" and the new "Duplex Straps," at $10. This is the finest corset that can be made, superior in every respect to the best that come from France. It will do wonders for any stout figure, giving it the graceful lines of youth.

[illegible] that a conspiracy exists, aimed to [illegible] our married happiness.

Who is responsible remains to be seen. Efforts are being made to uncover the whole scheme, for scheme I believe it is.

Trace Mysterious Note.

Detectives have been hired to trace to their [illegible] the origin of the anonymous letters which are said to have come from Davenport and Kansas City.

I've nothing at all to say [illegible] Lester N. Godfrey at the offices of the Godfrey [illegible] Company, No. 10 Ex[illegible] place, when asked about the estrangement of his son and his beautiful daughter-in-law.

Mr. Godfrey, Sr., is a tall [illegible] silvery-haired man. His [illegible] florid and his action [illegible] decision.

Your daughter-in-law intimates that you have caused detectives to trail her and [illegible]

"Not a word to say," cried Mr. Godfrey, [illegible] up and down his office. "[illegible] concerns no one [illegible]

But the detectives watching her [illegible] asked the reporter.

Met at Harvard Class Day.

Arthur Godfrey, of the class of 1904, Harvard, and his wife met on a Harvard Class Day over a year ago. The girl from the West was studying music in the Conservatory. They were made acquainted by Carl and Horace Ingram of Chicago, mutual friends. Affection, almost love at first sight, resulted and a few months later their engagement was announced.

In three months they decided, instead of waiting until next January to be married, to slip away [illegible] Mrs. Godfrey was [illegible] Mrs. Snell, living in Chicago. Thither they travelled, and there they were married on September 2[illegible] last.

The wedding was almost entirely a Harvard affair, for it was performed by the Rev. Dr. Page of the Harvard class of '88. He is the Episcopal rector of Kenwood. At the supper following nothing but Harvard decorations were used.

The happy couple started back to Boston to brave the Godfrey parents. Handsome apartments in the Tuileries in Commonwealth avenue had been fitted up for the bride, and there they lived for some months happily. Paternal opposition on the part of the elder Godfrey was [illegible] but it was not made public, at least. The bride was repeatedly entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lester N. Godfrey, No. 171 Bay State road, Back Bay.

Jealous Woman in Case.

Then the mysterious woman, some say she is a jealous society beauty living in the West, others say she used the mails from there, [illegible] work of wrecking the loves of Arthur Godfrey and Beatrice Brown.

Two anonymous letters were sent to the elder Godfrey. Their contents [illegible] been divulged, but it was not long [illegible] coolness grew between the former [illegible] struggled [illegible] hurried business trip [illegible]

She is scarcely past nineteen years of age and plays and sings beautifully. [illegible] of young Godfrey [illegible] asking her to forgive his [illegible] It is believed [illegible] that if the father of Godfrey [illegible] they would be living together to-day, [illegible] letters.

Who can imagine what this dear little girl has suffered? Detectives [illegible] followed her every day since her [illegible] the Back Bay millionaire. Her [illegible] would come to her home and order her to leave the man she loved in her beautiful home with everything that money can buy to make [illegible] happy. She has been one of the [illegible] little girls living. [illegible] out in her auto she could always see another following her [illegible] movements she would [illegible] is to be pitied and that scandal [illegible] squelched.

How it will end no one knows, as yet. The young wife is determined to show that she is the victim of a jealous woman and that her unhappiness is all the result of the plot of a disappointed person who at one time must have thought she had a chance for the affections of Arthur Wilbur Godfrey.

RINGMASTER LODGE PLAN TOWN MEETING

Chosen Moderator at Nahant He Easily Proves the Ruling Spirit.

KILLS ENGINE HOUSE PLAN

License People Are Once More Victorious by 110 Votes.

Nahant held an annual town meeting yesterday [illegible] circus.

United States Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, a well known citizen of the town, was moderator.

By a masterly speech he [illegible] out of an article calling for a $7,000 engine house. He showed how it would increase the tax rate, already nine dollars on every thousand. He pointed out that wealthy residents might leave the town. He is worth about $3,000,000.

License Wins Again

The town went for license again. This means that two or three [illegible] at Bass Point will be able to [illegible] as before. The no-license element had scared [illegible] Nahant might go dry this year. [illegible] Yes [illegible]

The [illegible] and Bass Point, a part [illegible] went home and [illegible] Demon Rum.

The meeting was [illegible] and everybody made a great fuss over the presence of Senator Lodge. He was [illegible] privileges, and even [illegible] hand and was generally [illegible] a favorite son.

The mere fact that he was moderator was an event in [illegible] Judge [illegible] F. Wilson, who is known [illegible] in the town by his first name, has been moderator for twenty-seven years. But the Judge is "poorly," as they say, and is now traveling in the South for his health.

Lodge Chosen Moderator.

So the moderator's mantle fell on Senator Lodge. As soon as the meeting was called to order Representative Cabot Johnson moved that Senator Lodge [illegible] moderator, which was unanimously [illegible] The Senator thanked [illegible] and how glad he was to [illegible] back home among the folks and then [illegible] his sorrow at the [illegible] Gould. At [illegible] condolence was [illegible] Mrs. [illegible]

[illegible] began balloting for town officers at 11 o'clock, the polls remaining open till [illegible] The [illegible] following officers were elected:

[illegible] Henry [illegible] Wilson

[illegible] Walter F. Waters

Town treasurer—Charles Cabot Johnson

[illegible] trustee—Henry Cabot Lodge

Highway surveyor—C. W. Sta[illegible]

[illegible] warden—Thomas Devere

[illegible] committee—Otis A. Johnson

Auditors—Frank W. T[illegible], [illegible] H. [illegible] Edward J. Hyde

*Re-elected.

Warns Against Expenditure.

As the articles in the call went through swimmingly except two. An article providing $200 to be appropriated to repair [illegible] town [illegible] was postponed to the [illegible] town meeting.

The other was [illegible] one appropriating $7,000 [illegible]

Defeats Engine House Plan.

I myself [illegible] as trustee for several estates would be compelled to turn over my trusteeships to my co-trustees in order that the estate might not be over-taxed by reason of an increase of taxation in Nahant.

[illegible] estates being taxed where the trustees live, of course this would [illegible] that the town would lose some fat taxation.

Senator Lodge talked the engine house clean off [illegible] and when the question was put there was a roar of "No!" that drowned the "Yeas."

GIRL PLEADS IN VAIN FOR COUSIN

Clara Bowers Seeks to Free Boy Held by Immigration Officials; Her Efforts Vain.

Miss Clara Bowers of New Bedford came to Boston yesterday to attempt to rescue from the hands of the immigration officials her cousin, Colin Hatton, an 18-year-old English boy who landed here Thursday on the Cunard liner Ivernia, and has been detained since then pending the result of efforts to locate his father.

Miss Bowers is an attractive looking young woman of thirty years. She lives with her father, a retired mill owner in a [illegible] mansion at No. 10[illegible] Hazard street, in one of the most [illegible] sections of New Bedford.

To a Boston Sunday American reporter she declared she loved Colin, who is 18 years old, as a brother, and that she was going to [illegible] her utmost to free him.

She said: "I have just returned from Boston and I am completely tired out and heartsick. The immigration officials wouldn't allow me to speak to Colin.

"The first I heard of his arrival was by means of a telegram sent me from Boston. I rushed to Boston on the very first train Friday and tried my hardest to get permission to see the boy.

"I found that I had arrived in Boston too late, and went to Atlantic, where I spent the night with friends.

"Yesterday I again went to see the immigration authorities at Long Wharf. They told me that they were trying to locate the boy's father, but that they had not been able to trace him. I then told the officials that I would take the boy to our home in New Bedford, but they refused to allow me to care for him."

FALL RIVER WEAVER IN DEATH MYSTERY

Willimantic, Conn., March 21.—The medical examiner of Coventry is investigating the death of Thomas Rafters, aged 74, a tramp weaver, said to come from Fall River, Mass., who was found dead beside the railroad tracks between here and Hartford early to-day. There was no wound on the body but a slight cut on the lip.

[illegible] did not give their names came along and told him they were walking with Rafters [illegible] several of work last night and that they had a dispute over the right road and separated. The men are being sought.

STEAL $5,000 AUTO IN FRONT OF THEATRE

Chicago, March 21.—Central station detectives are searching for two well dressed men who stole an automobile valued at $5,000 which belonged to the Western Motor Car Company, No. 1412 Michigan avenue, from in front of the Illinois Theatre last night. The chauffeur saw the men turning the corner and shouted to South Park Policeman O'Toole, but the fugitives escaped.

ALIO TO BE HANGED WEEK OF JULY 12

Denver, Col., March 21.—Judge Whitford to-day denied a new trial for Guiseppe Alio, murderer of Father Leo Heinrichs. The prisoner was sentenced to be hanged at Canyon City during the week beginning July 12.

'PLUNGERS' REAP BIG HARVEST IN OPTIMISTIC 'BULL' MARKET

SUGAR TRADERS TRAP BIG SHORT

Steel and Coppers Advance on Receipt of News of Cheering Business Boom.

After [illegible] the New York stock market held its strength until the very end, when a profit-taking movement caused prices to slide off slightly.

There were [illegible] a few developments which influenced the market. Politics play a very important part in the stock market and the presidential [illegible] has lately caused some unsettlement.

The high prices reached during the morning were a tempting bait for some holders of stocks which they obtained at bargain prices and in the last few minutes there was a general dumping.

Union Pacific, with over 80,000 shares was the leader yesterday. The price advanced from an opening of 124½ until [illegible] It was one of the stocks which was hardest hit by the [illegible] reaction and the price was sent down to 125⅜. It is believed that there is quite a large number of "shorts" interested in this stock and it was thought that part of the upward movement could be traced to this source.

Steel Boomed by Bulls.

The excellent report of the United States Steel Corporation, which was issued Friday, was not completely shorn of its value on that day, and yesterday it was taken as a prop on which to force prices up. United States Steel was one of the market's chief standbys, and over [illegible] shares changed hands. The stock jumped almost a full point at the start, and held the advance well.

Smelters advanced over a point on talk of an advance in copper, and for the first time in many days the stock crossed [illegible] Amalgamated did not show any great [illegible] of strength and rested at 58[illegible] National Lead was a feature, and on fairly good trading advanced 2⅛ points during the day.

After a week which was rather mixed as to gains and losses the local market yesterday showed signs of strength and there was a steady upward swing, noticeable throughout the two hours. At the close there was an attempt made to depress prices, but this did not meet with [illegible] appreciable success and the close found prices within a fraction of the highest.

Boston Prices Up.

[illegible] coppers monopolized the major part of the business, but in the general [illegible] there were one or two stocks that participated in the trading to a small degree and gains in these stocks were features in the Boston market.

As is usual Amalgamated led all the rest. On account of its prominence this stock is generally the target for any attacks on coppers in general, and as is natural comes [illegible] for the largest gains when a movement [illegible] prices is on. Yesterday the trading was large, but the price was inclined to be firm and the fluctuations were comparatively small. The starting price for this stock was 57⅝, and after a slight reaction to [illegible] it started to climb upward, stepping [illegible] at 58⅛. The [illegible] was registered.

The spot light was shifted yesterday from the stocks which generally bask under its rays and Utah Consolidated, which is a stock which usually occupies a position in the background as far as coppers are concerned, was thrust to the front. There was some fairly good trading in this stock and the price crossed 40 as a result. The gain in price was not pronounced.

After Sugar "Shorts."

Parrot enjoyed activity yesterday and the price gained ⅝ of a point on the trading accorded it. North Butte was not as active as it was during the week, and the price did not show any signs of sensational rises. American Sugar was one of the features of the market and jumped [illegible] points from the opening of 120⅛. At the end 124 was quoted, and there was very little stock in sight even at this [illegible] The activity was considered due to attempts to catch "short" a large operator, who is believed to be carrying a large quantity of this stock lately. United Fruit was strong at 122 and thereabouts.

[illegible] improvement in the copper metal market [illegible] not show the least signs of abating and this is one of the most cheerful factors that is at the command of the local market. There is only one feature [illegible] does not insure confidence, and that is the report that is prevalent lately that the buying and selling of this commodity is not as bona fide as it might be.

Report that the price of the metal had advanced to 13¼ cents is rather discredited when a large copper producer reports that he has a large quantity on hand which he would [illegible] to dispose of at 13 cents, and the same condition is found when a demand of no large proportions is spoken of. There is a great deal of cleaning up yet to be done in the copper metal situation before the market will start on any great [illegible], and the recent shut down of mines [illegible] the cutting of dividends is not [illegible]

Plenty of Money Now.

It is clearly shown by the statement of the New York banks, issued yesterday that there is not a particle of doubt but what the banks are in a position to loan money at the rates which are now ruling, and [illegible] the only thing that is needed is a revival in the business world and a return of confidence.

[illegible] the most striking illustrations of this is the loan item which shows an increase of only $634,100. This compares [illegible] with the increase in the deposits which showed a gain for the week of over $[illegible]. These two items show that money is returning to the banks in greater supply than they need and that a lack of borrowers is causing the banks' surplus to attain extremely large figures. The surplus of the New York banks at the present time is $37,424,450, which is a gain of over $6,000,000 from last week.

The rates for money in Boston are appreciably [illegible] than was the case the [illegible] Money is piling up in the banks [illegible] and the result is that even at the low figures which are quoted there is a decided lack of borrowers.

There is some difficulty found by bankers to place time loans. Borrowers are willing enough to take the money on call, but when it comes to taking it for a definite period there is a most noticeable hesitation.

Foreign Situation Settled.

The reduction in the rate of discount by the Bank of England last week is an action that should not be lost sight of, and shows that the situation is not considered to be serious, and there are no precautions being taken by foreign institutions to stop the flow of money from the vaults.

There is hope now that Congress may take some action to relieve the currency question. The Aldrich bill, which up to a short time ago seemed to have a very dark future, showed signs of life last week, and there is a possibility of its going through before Congress adjourns.

FIRM UNDERTONE IN THE MARKET.

By Thomas C. Shotwell.

NEW YORK, March 21.—Forced purchases of stocks by the short interest caused a further advance in the stock market to-day. Activity was maintained up to the close, although the final prices were somewhat under the best of the day. About all the active issues showed net gains. Steel made a new high record for the year. Union Pacific sold at the highest prices in a week. All Sugar stock were strong. Lead made another sharp advance and Smelters touched a new high figure. Even though the last prices were sealed, there was a firm undertone to the market, and the close gave every indication that the advance would be continued on Monday.

Several firms in Wall Street pretend to have the President's message, but as he had not finished writing it at 12 o'clock to-day these forecasts were not terrifying. The message is not expected before Thursday.

The bank statement was very favorable, but had little influence, because money has ceased to be any argument in Wall Street. The Copper Trust has renewed its old fight against the metal exchange. Rumors of early organization of a great copper corporation persist, but nothing definite can be learned regarding the plans.

COUNT LEO TOLSTOI SUFFERS RELAPSE

St. Petersburg, March 21.—A despatch received from Yasnaya Poliana says that Count Tolstoi, who is [illegible] influenza, has suffered a relapse. Yesterday he was better and worked on a book of readings for the peasantry, but to-day his condition was not so good. It is said that he suffers from lack of strength, arising from the continued strain of his work. He refuses, as always, to follow the advice of his doctors.

McGann only played five innings in the game at Augusta yesterday, and had little to do. He failed to shine at the bat Kelley took his place on first sack in the sixth. McGann is known as a scrapper, and has had many rows with umpires, so South End fans may see some lively times if things dont go as Big Dan thinks they should.

He is the ex Giant who will take Tenney's place at first base. He is always in the game and should be popular with the fans

FAST, CLEVER BOYS IN MAIN BOUT

Robson and Baldwin Should Furnish Fine Sport at Armory A. A. Wednesday.

Without question, the intense interest in the international boxing contest between Matty Baldwin of Charlestown and Spike Robson of England, which will be decided at the Armory Athletic Association Wednesday evening, has been caused more by the [illegible] that the lads [illegible] from any other cause. As they are to weigh in at 128 pounds, and as they are about the same height and build, the match appears a very even one physically.

Baldwin is the stronger of the pair, and [illegible] against this manifest advantage Baldwin will be handicapped by the superior cleverness of the Briton, his [illegible] who hopes to [illegible] a de[illegible]

SPRINGFIELD GETS NATIONAL REGETTA

New York, March 21.—At the meeting of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen of America, held at the New York A. C. tonight, the privilege of holding the national regetta on August 14 and 15 this year, was awarded to Springfield, Mass.

The only other applicants for the regetta were the Harlem Rowing Association of this city and the Saratoga Association.

Other matters were discussed, including the sending of a crew to the Olympic games in London, but no action was taken.

Angelus Wins Rich City Park Derby in Fast Time

New Orleans, March 21.—Angelus, [illegible] clever Sandri[illegible] ors of the [illegible] turned the [illegible] [illegible] the $10,000 City Park Derby this afternoon [illegible] of 2:04 3-5. [illegible] ner was Chapultepec, the [illegible] Angelus, and bringing up the rear of the money division was Meelick, two lengths behind Chapultepec.

The victory was a stunner to the thousands that crowded the stand and lawn of the new course. The [illegible] that faced the barrier in the [illegible] classic wore colors in this afternoon's rich event.

Delay at the Post.

When they were lined up at the webbing Chapultepec displayed his usual nervousness and caused a delay of three minutes. McDaniel managed to get him around in a nice position, when Starter Dade pressed the button and sent the quartette on their great struggle.

[illegible] was the first to show, with [illegible] away [illegible] length [illegible] passed [illegible] this color [illegible] After going a quarter [illegible] and M[illegible] breaking pace. When he had stopped the first half some clocks caught 47 2-5 as the time. This started the experts and they knew that a hard race was in progress. Chapultepec kept up this terrific pace, and the six furlongs was timed in 1:12 3-5.

After [illegible] mark Notter let loose a bit on Angelus and the Whitney cast off began to catch up on the leaders. At the mile post Angelus had poked his nose in front in the great time of 1:39 1-5. Chapultepec was in second place and Meelick left in third position.

Meelick in Trouble.

As they swung out of the back stretch it was seen that Meelick was in trouble. Dugan was riding to his limit and was plying the whip furiously. When they swung into the stretch Angelus had opened a gap of two lengths, [illegible] was running the easiest of the [illegible] Straightening [illegible] out for [illegible] Notter gave him his head and he [illegible] away from the field. As he neared the wire the spectators yelled as one and he crossed the line to victory full of running. Chapultepec and Meelick were staggering at the finish, and if the race had been a little further Angelus would have had an easier victory.

The Results.

NO REASON WHY BIG CUP RACE SHOULD BE CALLED OFF

If Long Island Course Isn't Ready, Savannah Can Well Take Care of the Vanderbilt.

By J. C. Kerrison.

The admirable manner in which the race course at Savannah was guarded during the recent contests there speaks volumes in favor of the management of the local automobile association, and likewise of the painstaking work of the officers of the American Automobile Association, who were in no small measure responsible for the contest and its control.

So satisfactory were the arrangements and the manner of conducting the events that Savannah must now be considered as a formidable claimant for the next Vanderbilt road race. Of course, if the Long Island parkway is completed in season to hold the next international in this country, then Long Island is entitled to the event, but there should be no foregoing the Vanderbilt this year, as there was a year ago. Instead, the race can and should be held at Savannah, as there is no reason under the sun why the race should be abandoned for the second time.

Course in Fine Shape.

The southern course was admittedly in the very best of condition, all arrangements were perfect and complete and the patrolling and guarding of the course could not have been improved upon. The guardians of the course were posted in their several positions with expert instructions, and so well did they carry out these orders that one of the naval reserve fired two shots and prevented individuals from crossing the course. They were arrested, and in court the following day were fined for trespass.

Nothing of that kind could possibly have happened in the North. The way in which the Southerners took hold of this event proves conclusively that when it comes to selecting a course for big events like the Vanderbilt they have certain rights to consideration.

It would hardly be fair to compare the Ormond tournament with that at Savannah. They were of two entirely different characters, and yet, from what one can hear, the management of the latter was all but perfect. The A. A. A. authorities handled the Savannah race; the A. C. A. officials had charge of the former.

The results at Savannah prove that, while the A. C. A., which has but recently severed its official connection with the A. A. A., may have certain ideas of its own greatness and ability in the handling of motor races, there are other organizations in the country which can do fully as good, if not better, work than the so-called experts from New York city. In fact, the A. C. A. record as a race promoting organization in the past has not been the most brilliant, as is recalled by the fiasco connected with the trials for the Gordon-Bennett event of some few years ago, and likewise by more recent happening. The A. C. A. is a good organization, but when it starts out to control the entire sport, as it is said it proposes to do in the very near future, it will find itself greatly handicapped.

May Be No Local Racing.

Although no official announcement has yet been made by the members of the racing committee of the Bay State Automobile Association the possibilities of a race meet in this section on May 30 are somewhat problematical. Nothing official or unofficial regarding such a tournament can be secured from any member of the committee, and it would not be surprising if racing is permitted to go by the board this year. This, however, is only the personal opinion of the writer. In order to be successful a meet must have some attractive propositions in the way of races and attractions in the way of racing men. As things now look it is pretty difficult to see where any club can secure the presence of a recognized crack or world beater.

Cedrino, who now looms up as one of the best road drivers in the country, has been here on several occasions and would hardly prove the drawing card desired. The idea of a twenty-four hour race is not such a bad one, but those who control the Readville track would be decidedly opposed to permitting four or more motor vehicles to drive around the circuit for twenty-four hours at a time. Such work has caused havoc on horse tracks where the races have been held, and then again there are many who do not believe that such a lengthy race would prove profitable to the organization, considering the figure which has to be paid for the track and its appointments. Stock car racing is interesting, but, from a financial point of view it has not, in this section, at least, produced sufficient revenue as to, in the opinion of many, warrant running the risk of large deficits.

The committee realizes, however, that the club must this year get into activity and it is possible that it may be determined to run a race meet, or, perhaps, as has been unofficially suggested, to hold a series of gymkhana races, or else a hill climbing contest.

Interest in Next Glidden.

The interest in the forthcoming Glidden tour grows perceptibly as the time for the holding of the same approaches. Considerable impetus was given to the tour by the visit of Chairman Hower to this city during the last days of the motor show. He met many of the leading local motorists, talked matters over with them, and in a general way did considerable toward securing local support. There is a strong possibility of a Boston team being represented in this tour, the first entry of which is that of J. W. Maguire with a Pierce Arrow tourabout, who will be accompanied by the Boston American representative. This will be Mr. Maguire's first entry in a Glidden tour, but from what is known of him it can be taken for granted that he will be in at the finish.

Another entry is that of Frank E. Wing, with a Marmon, who two years ago made a perfect score, his party comprising what might be termed a real touring party. Watson Coleman, with a White, will be another entrant, while it is possible that Jack Snow, with a Peerless, will endeavor to eclipse his record made on the journey to Quebec. Lucius Tyler, whose Maxwell made such an excellent score in the last A. A. A. tour, will elect to remain at home and read about the doings of the tourists, rather than go into the battle once again. He has had glory and now is looking for real business.

Want Auto Manufacturers To Settle in the Hub

The recent automobile show, with its record-breaking attendance and large sales, has awakened the interest of many of our local business men in Boston's possibilities as an automobile manufacturing centre. It certainly seems a bit odd that Boston should figure so prominently as an automobile-using community and be able to get up an exhibit that even New York cannot excel, while at the same time it should make such a comparatively poor showing as a field for manufacturing the machines.

In connection with this apparent unimproved industrial opportunity Manager Thomas F. Anderson of the city's Publicity Bureau is sending the following letter to various persons interested in the automobile business, the bureau having looked into the subject in a general way some time ago:

Dear Sir,—Boston has recently had an automobile show, said to be the most successful ever held in the United States, and at which something like half a million dollars' worth of cars were sold by exhibiting companies and agents.

This is a splendid thing for our city, which is [illegible] of one of the [illegible] "good roads" outing sections of the country and the objective point of hundreds of automobile touring parties.

If Boston can support such a successful exhibit as the one just held at Mechanics building and maintain such a large number of selling agencies why could it not also be made an important automobile manufacturing centre? I am informed that about 25 per cent. of the automobiles sold east of the Mississippi river are purchased in New England, and that about one-fifth of the cars produced during the past three years have found owners in this section.

We have in Boston an abundance of available sites for manufactories, good facilities for the transportation of raw materials and finished products, and a local New England market made up of 6,000,000 people. If, as some have stated to this bureau, we do not possess the skilled labor necessary to the successful conduct of automobile plants, surely we can easily attract it hither.

As you are personally interested in this important branch of modern industry, will you not kindly take up this question with others of your acquaintance who are likewise interested, and see if some definite move cannot be made in this direction? Boston certainly needs a few large automobile manufacturing establishments, and it seems to us they could be made to pay.

We would appreciate it very much if you would let us have your personal views on this subject together with any suggestions you may care to make as to the best way to interest capital in the establishing of automobile factories, or branches.

Frank Tyler Says Hub Show Stimulated Trade

In spite of the bad weather during the past week the local automobile dealers have been hustling chasing up prospective customers that they found their car interested at the show.

A trip around the agencies and branch houses finds nearly every one who had an exhibit in the show well satisfied with the results obtained in spite of the fact that one who did not exhibit has been casting reflections on all automobile shows during the past week.

"We certainly believe in a show heart and soul," said Frank J. Tyler of the Maxwell-Briscoe Boston Company yesterday. "A show like that held in Boston a week ago is a great thing for the trade and is responsible for a great amount of the business that will be done for the remainder of the season. It rouses enthusiasm and stimulates trade. It brings people to the city from all parts of New England and is a good thing for other merchants and business men in Boston besides automobile men. We got a line on a number of new customers that we might not have reached in any other way and there are probably many more exhibitors that will tell you the same thing. By all means I vote the Boston show a success for the exhibitor and predict it will be a success for many seasons to come."

A. A. A. MEMBERSHIP.

In his report made at the annual meeting of the American Automobile Association, President Hotchkiss advocated a new specific campaign for individual memberships. The appeal is based on the fact that the benefits bestowed upon motorists generally by the work of the national organization are so great that a sense of justice will impel them to take out a personal card when the matter is properly presented. The cost of an individual membership is only $2 a year.

KELLIHER WITH AJAX CO.

J. J. Kelliher, for several years connected with the motor department of the Iver Johnson's Sporting Goods Company, has become identified with the local affairs of the Ajax Rubber Company. He will assist Manager Cooper, paying particular attention to the sole and heel department of the company.

BIG INTEREST IN BRIARCLIFF RACE

Touring Car Records Likely to Be Made Over the Westchester Course.

In the Briarcliff race to be held in April over the Westchester course, and which is as accessible from New York as the Vanderbilt course, the cars are limited to the use of stock chassis only, racing cars being debarred from the race. Hence the importance of the Briarcliff race to the industry at large, and to the purchasers and users of automobiles. Nobody expects, of course, that any of the cars will in any way approach the marvelous world's record of 77 miles an hour for 300 miles. But everybody does expect that some wonderful touring car records will be made over the Westchester course, winding, rolling and tortuous as it is. Because the course will serve to bring out the best endurance and running elements of the cars themselves and show the skill of the drivers as well.

American makers have come very bravely to the front with their entries in this great race, but they will find against them a strenuous and large contingent of foreign cars, and, while we have no really great American drivers, we have been breeding some real good American operators.

The nearness of the Westchester course to New York and the great publicity it has had all over the country should result in drawing a crowd of spectators second only in number to the great crowd that attended the last Vanderbilt race and which was conservatively estimated at 300,000.

The race itself, although it is for stock chassis only, should rank scarcely second in sporting importance to the Vanderbilt race, and, as a matter of fact, being the first great road race for stock cars held in the East, it should rank very much higher in the minds of discriminating purchasers of cars than any race run heretofore in which racing cars only participated.

The start of the Briarcliff Cup race has been fixed for 4.45 A. M., Friday, April 24, the cars being sent away from a point opposite the Briarcliff manor.

BOSTON SHOW BEST OF YEAR

The success of the Boston show is an argument in favor of holding automobile shows in the early Spring, in the opinion of F. R. Bump, sales manager for the H. H. Franklin Manufacturing Company.

"The Boston show was probably the best show of the year," said Mr. Bump, "and the Boston dealers ought certainly to do a good business this Spring as a result of it. It is a mistake to hold local shows in the Winter. The early Spring is the time when people begin to think about buying automobiles, and that is the time to reach them.

"The New York show, of course, is a dealers' show, and has to be held a good deal earlier, but from the standpoint of sales I believe every one will agree that the Fall show hurts Fall buying, and it is too early to influence Spring buying. We are well pleased with the results of the Boston show, and also of the Brooklyn show that followed it."

AUTO VEHICLES ARE COMPARED

Discussing the inclination of horse users to inquire if gasoline machines are now superior to electrics, or vice versa, Hayden Eames, general manager of the Studebaker Automobile Company, sagely observes:

"Now that the great majority of large scale wagon users are satisfied that the horse has to be superseded by the power wagon, we are continually hearing them inquire if they shall adopt gasoline or electric machines. The two are not necessarily competitive. In a field to accomplish a given amount of work, fewer drivers are required for a gasoline installation than electric, while on the other hand the maintenance and station charges are in favor of the electric. This is, of course, a rule of the most general character, from which there are infinite departures to meet the multitude of varying conditions. In the majority of cases the limitations of traffic in cities throws the advantage in economy to the electric on all installations of any considerable size. In some cities of peculiar topography, it is expedient to use both types in the same installation."

BRISCOE ANNOUNCES MOTOR CYCLISTS' NEW COMMITTEES. RUN TO WORCESTER

H. O. Smith of Premier Co. Will Again Be at Head of Show Managers.

Committees for 1908 were announced yesterday by Benjamin Briscoe, chairman of the committee of management of the American Motor Car Manufacturers' association. There are few changes in the committees over last year.

The show committee, which is always an active one, will again have H. O. Smith, president of the Premier Motor Manufacturing Company, as its chairman. Associated with him will be S. H. Mora of the Mora Motor Car Company and R. M. Owen of the Reo Motor Car Company. Following are the committees:

Show Committee—H. O. Smith, Premier Motor Manufacturing Company, chairman; S. H. Mora, Mora Motor Car Company; R. M. Owen, Reo Motor Car Company.

Tours and Races—W. C. Marmon, Nordyke & Marmon Company, chairman; H. O. Smith, Premier Manufacturing Company; A. C. Newby, National Motor Vehicle Company.

Good Roads—Chas. E. Lewis, Jackson Automobile Co., Chairman; James Couzens, Ford Motor Co.; R. E. Olds, Reo Motor Car Co.; H. B. Krening, Dorris Motor Car Co.

Legislation—R. E. Olds, Reo Motor Car Co., Chairman; C. G. Stoddard, Dayton Motor Car Co.; A. C. Newby, National Motor Vehicle Co.; R. A. Palmer, Motor-car Co., R. E. Graham, Acme Motor Car Co.

Membership—W. H. Van Dervoort, Moline Automobile Co., Chairman; Morris Grabowsky, Rapid Motor Vehicle Co.; E. K. Burroughs, Abendroth & Root Manufacturing Co.

Advertising and Publicity—Barney F. Everett, Wayne Automobile Co., chairman; Harry Fosdick, Moon Motor Car Co.; G. B. Louderback, Buckeye Manufacturing Co.; Theo. P. Bailey, St. Louis Car Co.; Leon Myron Bradley, New York Office; Charles E. Duryea, New York Office.

Finance—James Couzens, Ford Motor Co., Chairman; W. G. Morse, Atlas Motor Car Co.; J. B. Bartholomew, The Bartholomew Co.

Standardization and Technical—John D. Maxwell, Maxwell Briscoe Motor Co., chairman; Henry Ford, Ford Motor Co.; R. S. Crawford, Crawford Automobile Co.; J. F. Moores, Moon Motor Car Co.; R. E. Olds, Reo Motor Car Co.

PULLMAN CLAIMS RACE.

The F. F. Randall Company announces that the Pullman car arrived at Savannah at 1.35, March 19, having left Philadelphia, March 4. The Pullman driver contends that the Studebaker car, which left Philadelphia at the same time, had cut the course some 200 miles, and that otherwise the Pullman would have been the first in the Southern city. The Pullman, therefore, claims the race.

Competition on Patriots' Day Will Surely Be a Great Success.

Patriots' Day will certainly witness the largest gathering of live motorcyclists ever seen in this city, and likewise a competition that will certainly be worth the witnessing. In fact, it looks as though the motorcycle endurance contest will assume as great proportions as did the Dedham road race in the days when one was wont to tour on most any old bicycles of what are now considered old days.

The interest in the proposed run and in the formation of a motorcycle club in Boston has reached fever heat and within the next few days there is bound to be something doing in this line.

Mr. Marsh of the American Motor Car Company, who seems to be the head of this movement, has received a letter from President Estes of the Waltham club, congratulating the local motorists on their determination to organize and also on the prospects for the run. He suggests having a run along the lines of the Marathon race, and [illegible] to Worcester, [illegible] the Worcester Motorcycle Club. The latter will be pleased to act the part of host, taking the visitors for a run into the suburbs, where lunch and a good time can be enjoyed. The return to Boston being over virtually the same course to Boston, where [illegible].

In the matter of clubhouse the special committee is now at work and anticipates making a selection within a very few days.

V. A. CHARLES AT NEW HAVEN SHOW

Manager V. A. Charles of the local branch of Thomas B. Jeffery Company leaves Boston this morning for New Haven, where he will attend the automobile show there during the present week. He was accompanied by Mr. Williams, whose work in the Bay State endurance test won for him the hearty approbation of hundreds. In speaking of local automobile shows, and especially the one recently held in this city, Manager Charles said:

"They do an inestimable amount of good for the industry at large. Their value is hardly appreciated at first, but as the weeks go by and the interest aroused at the show is seen, the trade really appreciates the [illegible] show. We have done a [illegible] business [illegible] and since the show, the excellency of our line speaking for itself. The Model 34 is winning its way into popular favor and well it might considering it is a high-class proposition at a price that is attractive."

RACING HELPS SALES.

"Although some manufacturers do not believe that motor car racing stimulates sales," said F. W. Libby, sales manager of the Michelin Tire Company, yesterday, "we have found the opposite to be the case. The mere announcement that Bernin had absolutely no trouble with the Michelin compressed tread tires on his Renault when he made the new world's record for 100 miles at Ormond has brought us hundreds of requests for descriptive matter on this type, which is an exclusively Michelin product. We believe thoroughly in the healthful tendencies of the racing game."

The cure for the blues—Cascarets. A million boxes go out every month to carry a world of sunshine. Are you getting your share?

Cascarets act as a bowel tonic, not as an irritant.

They are vegetable. Their action is natural. Their effect is the same as the effect of some foods.

They are gentle; no griping.

They are pleasant; no dreading.

They are convenient; no waiting.

One old way was castor oil.

The effect was to grease the bowels, and for a single day. Oil never causes the bowel muscles to act.

Other ways were pills, salts and cathartics. The effect was the same as pepper has in the nostrils. They flooded the bowels with fluid.

Those fluids were digestive juices. And the waste today means a lack tomorrow.

We knew that the method was wrong. That the after-effects only weakened the bowels.

But we had no gentle laxatives in the old days. So we waited as long as we could, then took a big dose of physic.

The method today is to take one Cascaret at a time—just as soon as you need it. Then the bowels are always clean.

Cascarets are candy tablets. They are sold by all druggists, but never in bulk. Be sure you get the genuine, with CCC on every tablet. The price is 50c, 25c and

VINCENT CLUB GIRL LEADER IN PERIL OF POVERTY

Anita Calef's Fortune Is Involved in Shaw Financial Tangle.

BEAUTIFUL AND TALENTED

Physician Declares Trustee Is Doomed to Death by Hopeless Disease.

THE fortunes of a beautiful and talented young society girl, none less than Miss Anita Calef, of the exclusive Vincent Club, as well as those of dozens of other people in Boston's Back Bay coterie, are now known to be involved in the tangle which has snarled the financial affairs of John O. Shaw, Jr., who is slowly dying at his luxurious home, No. 246 Marlboro street.

The report that Shaw was incurably ill crystallized last night into this official statement by his attending physician, Dr. Herman F. Vickery of No. 263 Beacon street:

"Mr. Shaw is daily growing weaker from a hopeless disease.

This puts an added complication in the effort to find out how much is left of about two million dollars' worth of properties for which Shaw has long been trustee, either singly or with co-trustees.

Public interest in the purely legal side of the Shaw case has shifted to the society end involved.

Vincent Club girls are now saying "Did you know that Anita's money was in Mr. Shaw's hands?"

"Anita," in the Vincent Club means Miss Anita Calef, the brilliant composer, author of lyrics at the last club theatricals, and one of the leading spirits in the organization.

It was through petition of Miss Calef's mother, Mrs. Annie Calef, of No. 381 Marlboro street, that Shaw was thrown into the bankruptcy court Friday. Mrs. Calef's husband, the late Benjamin Calef, an insurance man, left his estate to his wife and daughter in Shaw's trust. Mrs. Calef now seeks an accounting on two promissory notes given her by Shaw, aggregating $13,000. How much more of the Calef property is involved in the Shaw crash is not definitely known.

Relatives Fear Losses.

Shaw's only sister, Miss Josephine D. Shaw of Newbury street, fears she has lost $50,000 left her by her father in Shaw's trust. She is sixty years old and a cripple.

Shaw's aunt, Mrs. J. McLean Haywood, his mother's only sister, who is an inmate of an asylum at Waverly, and who has been mildly insane for over a dozen years is in danger of losing her little fortune of $40,000, which was another of the Shaw trusteeships. It has secured her a more personal and solicitious care than is possible in a pauper institution.

By a grim turn of fate Shaw now is succumbing to a mental ailment, but his death will not answer the problem of providing for his afflicted aunt.

The sadness of the situation reaches also across the Atlantic. Shaw's first cousin, Miss Mary Cobb, is stranded in Europe, unable to come home on account of lack of funds. Shaw is trustee for over $30,000 of her money. Of late he had not sent her the expected remittances. She has cabled her attorney to see what he can do about straightening out her interests.

It is rumored that Mrs. Harriet S. Winslow, wife of the Rev. William C. Winslow of No. 525 Beacon street, stands to lose $35,000 in the financial mess. She is a first cousin of Shaw and, like several other confiding relatives, knew Shaw as her trustee. Her husband, the Rev. Mr. Winslow, seems to have no illusions concerning the cause of Shaw's entanglement.

"High living and extravagance did it," says the clergyman succinctly.

Dr. and Mrs. Winslow have secured an order from the court restraining Shaw, Anna Porter Shaw, and Sidney K. Singer, recently named as conservator for Shaw, from paying out any money left to the Winslow trust. They have also had Henry P. Binner appointed trustee for them in place of Shaw.

Another woman seeking legal aid to save her property is Mrs. Katherine D. Savage of No. 321 Beacon street. She is also one of Shaw's relatives, a first cousin, to be specific. Her husband, the late Samuel H. Savage, named Shaw trustee for his widow. The Savage trust is at least $30,000. Mrs. Savage frankly said last night: "I don't know how my affairs stand." She has petitioned the courts to have the Shaw trusteeship vacated and her property put in trust of Rear Admiral Francis T. Bowles, president of the Fore River Ship building Company, so that he may in turn transfer it to her.

All these people and many others are terribly worried to-day over their prospective losses, aggravated by the fact that they can't find out just yet where they do stand.

Henry M. Rogers, whom Judge Dodge appointed receiver in bankruptcy for Shaw, admitted yesterday that he could not tell as yet what condition the affairs are in.

Mr. Rogers said yesterday that he had not seen Sidney K. Singer, Shaw's conservator, and that he did not know just when he would see him. It was supposed by many that Mr. Singer would confer with Mr. Rogers yesterday, and that Mr. Rogers would secure a statement as to Shaw's financial condition.

Had Very Large Income.

The most that Mr. Rogers would prophesy concerning the case was that it would "take time."

Estates in which Shaw was co-trustee are said to be intact. An important instance of these co-trusteeships is one of $500,000 belonging to Mrs. Henry J. Kidder, wife of the banker.

John Oakes Shaw, Jr., is fifty-seven years old. He is a grandson of the late Chief Justice Shaw of the Massachusetts Supreme Court. Lucrative trusteeships were passed on to him from his father. Others came to him, practically all being those in the so-called "society set." He maintained elegant offices at No. 82 State street. He lived expensively, belonged to the best clubs, affected steam yachting, motoring and similar aristocratic diversions.

His income from trusteeships alone was said to be nearly $20,000 a year, but that apparently was insufficient.

Rich Talented Society Girl Who Is Victim of Shaw Crash

Must Realize Value of Mohammedanism, Declares Fleisher

Religion of the Prophet Likely to Outlive Christianity, Says Rabbi.

"The Western world has not as yet developed or evolved a religion of its own, and it is time that we, of this progressive Western world, began to realize and appreciate the value of the great religion of the Eastern world—Mohammedanism and its founder, the great prophet, Mohammed."

This was the thought presented by Rabbi Charles Fleischer in Temple Israel, Commonwealth avenue, yesterday, in the course of his Bible talk on "Hagar and Ishmael." The rabbi said that the story of Hagar and Ishmael in the Bible was simply an ethnological record of the career of the ancient Jews.

He said in part:

"We still seem to take for granted that the decendants of the Ishmaelites, the Arabians and the other peoples of the East are inferior to the residents of the Western world.

"The Christians believe that in time they will succeed in converting all the Mohammedans to their belief. But, if I may pose as a prophet, I would predict the earlier demise of Christianity. The followers of Mohammed are noted for their religious fervor, which we of the West sorely need. They are fanatical in their faith, and they do not dream of conversion. The Mohammedans, who greatly outnumber the Christians in the world to-day, are not yielding to conversion to Christianity.

"It is time that we got beyond the foolish belief that one group of people is superior to some other group. All of the prophets have preached cosmopolitanism. It behooves us to remember that the peoples of the East are educated, broad-minded and that they are fast becoming one of the leading races of the world."

At the regular services in Temple Israel at 11.15 o'clock to-day Rabbi Fleischer will deliver an address on "God in Nature."

Mother Threatens to Shatter Romance of Jew and Gentile

Declares She Will Seek the Aid of Courts to Dissolve Marriage

The runaway marriage of William Killion and Miss Eva Hacker, a beautiful sixteen-year-old Jewess of Roxbury, is due to come to a sudden termination if the young woman's irate mother can succeed in securing the assistance of the courts.

"I object to the marriage of my daughter to young Killion on religious grounds," says Mrs. Hacker.

While the mother is attempting to start the wheels of justice to separate the pair, they are enjoying their marital bliss.

The young bride up to last Thursday lived with her parents at No. 230 Centre street, Roxbury, and young Killion, who is but twenty years old, resides with his parents on Highland street. In spite of the fact that both are immensely popular with the younger set in Roxbury none of their friends have yet been notified of the wedding, and the only people to know of it are the relatives of the couple.

Miss Hacker is employed in a cigar manufactory in Boston. On Thursday last when she started for work, she dressed in her best street attire and instead of reporting at the factory at the regular time met her sweetheart at the South station. Together they proceeded to Providence where they were made man and wife, and from that city they sent telegrams to their parents.

The young man's family are not inclined to take the affair very much to heart, but the mother of the young bride is greatly distressed and very angry over the action of her daughter and threatens all kinds of difficulties for the pair unless the annulment is secured.

ITALIAN RACING CAR REACHES OGDEN

Denver, Col., March 21.—The Italian car in the New York-Paris auto race is reported to have reached Ogden, Utah, at 4 o'clock this afternoon. RUNNING from the sidewalk to the middle of the street after her pet dog, which had strayed from her side, little Mary Corkery, aged two years and ten months, daughter of John J. Corkery of No. 48 North Harvard street, was run down by a big touring car owned by Robert Morse of No. 60 Burroughs street, Jamaica Plain, and almost instantly killed in North Harvard street, Allston, within a stone throw of her home, at 2.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The child's sister, Catherine, aged [illegible] and Helen Powers, a playmate [illegible] after living at No. [illegible] North Harvard street, who were following little Mary had a narrow escape [illegible] struck.

Swerving from his course to avoid running down the children, the chauffeur, [illegible] Lowcock, turned the nose of his big machine straight into Mary's body, hurling her high in the air and dashing [illegible] out on the pavement.

The three children, accompanied by the shaggy little dog that had been Mary's since she was a toddler, walked across the street and down North Harvard street to the store. They spent one of the pennies. Dividing the candy, they started back home. The children recrossed the street in front of the store and were in front of the house at No. 132 when the dog strayed into the road.

Mary called him to return, but instead he kept going the other way.

Feared for Doggie.

"I'll lose my doggie," the child ex[illegible] and she started after him.

The other children followed. They were [illegible] only by a few feet. None of the children saw the ponderous touring car, No. 5521, coming swiftly down North Harvard street headed toward Cambridge. Mary, calling to the dog, and the other little ones, calling to Mary to hurry, were running at almost top speed.

[illegible] Lowcock, who is thirty-two [illegible] lives at No. [illegible] street, Brookline, [illegible] were Mrs. Mo[illegible] a Miss Jen[illegible] and the latter's son, Master Fred. [illegible] was driving them homeward.

Lowcock says he saw the children playing on the sidewalk and then a moment afterward, saw them running across the road. They were so close together and his car was in such close proximity to them that he feared at first the machine would strike all three. It was impossible, Lowcock declares, to stop in time to escape them.

Swerves From Course

Suddenly shifting the course of the machine, Lowcock endeavored to swerve quickly enough to the opposite side to head the children off and get ahead of them. In a twinkling almost, the machine struck little Mary. Shrieking loudly the child was hurled high in the air. When she landed on the pavement her skull was crushed, and, without uttering a word, she lapsed into unconsciousness.

Horror stricken at the sight, Mary's companions stood stock still in their tracks. For a moment they were paralysed with fear. The women in the machine screamed. Lowcock, frenzied with fear, was yelling to the children at the top of his voice. Bystanders turned aside, ex[illegible] a catastrophe would result.

Plowing over the curb and across the sidewalk, the big machine made straight for the board fence, and had it not been for the chauffeur's cool headedness and a combination of circumstances, five other souls might have been plunged into eternity. Lowcock had his brakes on, but the momentum carried the car onward. It

BAPTIST CHURCH AT WALTHAM BURNED

Chief Hurt by Glass at General Alarm Fire Early This Morning.

A general fire alarm was turned in at Waltham at 12.1[illegible] this morning, when flames were discovered in the basement of the Bethlehem Baptist Church, on Maple street. Desperate work on the part of the [illegible] who were led by Chief [illegible] resulted in confining the flames to [illegible]. When the flames were subdued an hour later the damage was estimated at about $10,000.

James H[illegible] and Vincent Cross discovered the flames. Box No. 12 was struck and was followed by a general alarm a few moments later, when the extent of the blaze was seen. Chief [illegible] received serious cuts on his hands when trying to [illegible] window of the church [illegible]

The entire rear of the church was destroyed and the [illegible] damaged by fire, smoke and water. The basement was gutted. The flames broke out in the boiler room.

The church was erected eighteen years ago at a cost of $3[illegible]000. It carried a 46 per cent insurance. Rev. W. H. Dyas is pastor.

Eben M[illegible]son, the janitor, carefully fixed the fires under the steam heater and left the building at 7 o'clock last evening. The church choir rehearsed until 9 o'clock and when they left everything was as it should be. It is thought that the flames were caused by an overheated flue.

Way, of the Kimball building, living at No. [illegible] street, Roxbury, gives promise [illegible] to agitate pro[illegible] society [illegible] life extending [illegible] fashionable circles of Washington, according to a statement last night by Mr. Way.

Mrs. Way [illegible] stately woman of splendid [illegible] beauty, alleges cruel and abusive [illegible] her husband.

Mr. Way [illegible] good-natured appearing man, doesn't [illegible] worried by the suit. He even admits [illegible] may not contest it, but he does say significantly:

"I don't ever know that I shall enter a contest at all. But if I did I could make a lot of people [illegible] up who occupy pretty high positions."

Pressed for [illegible] Mr. Way [illegible] to go into details [illegible] his wife's cruelty charges [illegible] saying:

"Mrs. Way [illegible] what she pleases. My [illegible] know how much stock to take [illegible] charges."

Way is the plaintiff's second husband. Her maiden name was Augusta A. Shaw and she was born in Plympton. She is about thirty years old and at the height of blooming [illegible].

Her first husband was George Bassett of California, where [illegible] died. She [illegible] to Plympton, where she met Law[illegible] Way. She [illegible] Mrs. Way November [illegible] 1894 [illegible] Brookline and Boston. Two years [illegible] Mrs. Way separated [illegible] home in Plympton.

Mrs. Way charges in her bill of complaint that the alleged cruelty dates from January, 1897.

BRIDE QUARRELS; TAKES MORPHINE

Providence, R. I., March 21.—Despondent because she was unable to live happily with her mother-in-law, Mrs. Carrie Hall, aged twenty-six, well known and in good circumstances and living at No. 288 Wickenden street, late to-night took twenty-five grains of morphine.

For several months, so her friends say, Mrs. Hall has had quarrels with her mother-in-law and they have not been reconciled despite the [illegible] of the young husband to bring about domestic tranquility.

Shortly after nine o'clock Mrs. Hall went to a nearby drug store and purchased a box of 2½ grain morphine powders and upon her return home swallowed ten of them. The doctors say that the woman will probably recover.

FINDS HUSBAND WITH THROAT CUT

When Mrs. Thomas A. Jackson returned from work last night to her home, No. 905 Washington street, she found her husband [illegible] in a pool of blood on the kitchen [illegible] with his throat [illegible]. From the fact [illegible] his razor was found close by and that he has been subject to mental illness at times it is [illegible] attempted self [illegible]. He is now [illegible] at City Hospital.

Shortening and Discontinuing of Transit Facilities Arouses Great Indignation.

PETITIONS ARE IGNORED

Will Wage Active Fight to Have Conditions Remedied by Road at Once.

PLAN RADICAL MEASURES

Fear District Will Be Killed As a Very Desirable Residential Section.

RESIDENTS of Dorchester, particularly those of Meeting House Hill, are wondering whether or not the Elevated officials are contemplating removing this section of the district from their road map.

Four times within the past three months the "L" officials have issued orders shortening and discontinuing the transit facilities of lines of cars patronized by residents of Upham's Corner, Meeting House Hill, Geneva avenue, Bowdoin street, etc.

At each succeeding change the people have loudly remonstrated and by lengthy petitions to the road endeavored to show their disapproval of the decreased transit facilities.

Residents Are Indignant.

To say that the residents are indignant is putting it mildly.

"The Elevated will simply kill this section of the district as a desirable residential location unless the street car service is improved," says Joseph [illegible] a prominent real estate dealer of the district.

"I have had any number of people come here looking for apartments and invariably they inquire about the street car service as a preliminary to their investigation."

The shortening of the Meeting House Hill-Dorchester line to the North Station has caused the latest outcry. By the new order these cars will run only to [illegible] street, instead of to the North Station after 8.15 p. m. After that hour [illegible] impossible to go to or from the North Station by way of Meeting House Hill without transfer[illegible] It has been customary to run through cars until nearly [illegible]

The [illegible] line running from Meeting House Hill via Harrison avenue [illegible] discontinued [illegible] street, under the new schedule now runs [illegible] and the night car service to Meeting House Hill has been discontinued after 2 [illegible] m.

MONEY INTERESTS TO SUPPORT BRYAN

—Col. Watterson.

Taft to Be Opposing Candidate for National Fight, Says Editor in Prophecy.

Havana, March 21.—Bryan and Taft will be the rival nominees for President of the United States, and the issue will hang in doubt. Eventually the money interests will come to the support of Bryan in the hope of administering a rebuff to President Roosevelt.

These are the prophecies made by Col. Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, in a remarkable interview [illegible] here tonight.

"Who will be the Democratic nominee," was asked.

"Bryan," [illegible] the unhesitating reply.

"Who will be the Republican nominee?"

"Secretary Taft," was the equally firm answer.

"Who will be elected?"

"Anything is possible with God," came the reply. "If hard times continue Bryan will be the next President. No party can stand against hard times. Secretary Taft is one of the best of men, but that issue is unbeatable in American politics."

"What about the great capitalistic interests? Who will they favor?"

"In my opinion the great capitalistic interests in the end will be for Bryan. Why? Because if Taft is elected he will stand charged with carrying out Roosevelt's policies and the Republican Senate will be reduced to obedience to him.

"The corporations will then have nothing to hope for. But if Bryan is successful his election will be a rebuke to Roosevelt and all that the President stands for. That is to say it will be a vindication of conservative Republicanism. The Republican party will then reorganize in the Senate and Bryan will be helpless. In my judgment the whole money interests will eventually support Bryan as a 'choice of evils.'"

Women Flee from Homes In $30,000 Woburn Fire

Thrilling Early Morning Blaze Destroys Big Storehouses and Dwellings---Outside Aid Summoned.

Fire which broke out in the grain storehouse of J[illegible] & Company, High and Prospect streets, Woburn, at 1.45 o'clock this morning spread to the leather storehouses of the Ballard Leather Company adjoining, and in a short time destroyed both of these two-story frame structures with all their contents. Two dwellings nearby were soon in flames and the occupants fled in their night clothes. The loss on the storehouses is at least $30,000.

Patrolman John A. Walsh discovered the flames at a quarter of 2 o'clock this morning, but at that time both buildings were in flames. One alarm was sounded. In a short time two others were rung and then help from Winchester and Stoneham summoned.

The two departments called for relief [illegible] and by the time they got to the scene the storehouses were in ruins and the dwellings fast burning.

Sparks from the burning buildings threatened the destruction of the Barker Lumber Company's saw mill and lumber yards and the shoe leather factory of the [illegible] Walter Marion Company.

The firemen made a great fight to save these two valuable properties while the Stoneham and Winchester departments turned streams of water on other dwellings which were threatened.

When the first alarm was sounded and the two dwellings caught fire, men, women and children rushed to safety and out into the cold. The women, some of whom carried children in their arms, were soon turned to the homes of neighbors beyond the danger line where they received tender care.

The two frame storehouses where the fire started were formerly owned by the Joseph H. McDonald estate. How the fire originated is not known at this time. An investigation will be made.

The Aldermen's committee on ordinances will report favorably upon Alderman [illegible] order [illegible] the salaries of the five transit commissioners at $2,500 [illegible] commissioners are George G. Crocker and Horace G. Allen, appointed by the Governor, and [illegible] George F. Swift and [illegible] Mayor [illegible] appointed by the Mayor.

[illegible] report will be made upon [illegible] order [illegible] the statistics department [illegible] Alderman [illegible] order was offered to help out the Mayor in his [illegible] the statistics department [illegible] city $12,000 a year and [illegible] of little if any actual value to the city. Edward M. Hartwell is secretary of the department and receives a salary of $4000 a year.

Alderman Brand's order providing for the consolidation of the park and public grounds departments will also be reported favorably by the Ordinance Committee.

Salaries Under Fire

The Ordinance Committee still has before it for action the Mayor's orders providing for the reduction of the salary of the city auditor from $7500 to $5,000, that of the superintendent of public grounds from $4000 to $3,000, that of the city messenger from $4000 to $3000, that of the clerk of committees from $4000 to $3,000, that of the assistant city clerk from $[illegible] to $3000, that of the superintendent of bridges from $4000 to $3,000 and that of the Soldiers' Relief Commissioner from $3500 to $3,000.

The assistant city clerk, the clerk of committees and the city messenger are directly employed by the city council and it is believed that the attempt to cut their salaries will be defeated.

City Auditor Mitchell's salary it is believed will also remain at its present figure. The consolidation of the park and public grounds departments will make any [illegible] in the order [illegible] the salary of the superintendent of public grounds unnecessary.

BEGINS FIGHT ON WOMAN FINANCIER

In [illegible] details of the career of a woman Napoleon of Finance may soon be made public as a result of the temporary injunction granted by Judge Fox [illegible] Supreme Court yesterday restraining Miss [illegible] Moore of this city and her attorneys from transferring any of the property [illegible] stock certificates of the Tennessee [illegible] & Lumber Company. A hearing in the case will be held March 26.

[illegible] petition for the injunction [illegible] a [illegible] this remarkable woman who started life as a clerk in the offices of a New York advertising agency, not only sold a large amount of stock in the Tennessee Coal & Lumber Company but that she served as secretary and treasurer of the corporation from 1[illegible] to 1905. Upon her retirement from this office, it is further alleged, she retained a deed of the company's property in Tennessee, together with stocks, bonds and account books of great value.

Says She Holds Key.

According to the papers submitted to the court, the woman financier has in her possession the key of one of the International Trust Company's strong boxes in which are deposited securities for 22,588 shares of the company's treasury stock and 18,500 shares of [illegible] stock.

The president of the plaintiff company is Charles E. B[illegible], the inventor of the new [illegible] now being used by the United States government. He has offices at No. [illegible] High street.

One of the interesting incidents which may be related when the case comes to trial has to do with Miss Moore's successful fight for possession of a desk in which valuable papers were kept. When Mr. Claflin sent four laborers to remove the desk from Miss Moore's office, it is said, she defied them. When they insisted on taking the desk she sat upon the top. It and was carried out of the office with it.

HOT SENATE FIGHT IN EAST BOSTON

With three candidates already announced for the Senate from the First Suffolk District, and others to follow, the campaign will be one of the hottest political battles ever waged in the district.

The candidates now in the field are Robert J. Gove, Lewis Burnham and Lewis McKie, all residents of East Boston.

East Boston's Turn.

It is generally conceded that the office next year should be occupied by an East Boston man, that section of the district not having had a representative in the upper branch of the Legislature since 1902.

Many of the politicians of East Boston regret that the candidates from that section cannot agree, because, it is pointed out, with the East Boston aspirants fighting among themselves it would be an easy matter for a candidate from Chelsea to step in and capture the nomination and then the election. Ex-Mayor Edward E. Willard was named as the possible Chelsea candidate, but he has announced that he will not stand this year, but it is figured that if ex-Representative George Sleeper of Winthrop entered the contest, with the support he would receive from his home town and the remainder of the district, he might capture the nomination.

Realizing the possible defeat with the East Boston men combating and the possible election of Mr. Sleeper, Mr. Burnham suggests that the political leaders in Ward 1 hold a meeting and decide which one of the three already announced should be the one candidate of East Boston.

Committee to Decide.

In his letter to the other candidates Mr. Burnham suggests "that a committee of well known Republicans of our ward be selected, one by each candidate, and the gentlemen so selected shall choose other Republicans to act with them.

"The several candidates shall come before this committee and present their claims for the nomination and a majority vote of the committee, all to be present and voting, shall decide which one of the candidates shall be its choice."

CITIZENS IN ARMS RENEW DEMANDS TO NEW HAVEN FOR NEW STATION.

Conditions at Dudley Street No Longer Bearable, Declare Long Suffering Patrons.

PROMISE IS UNFULFILLED

Unaccountable Delay on Part of Railroad to Start Work, As Planned.

COMMITTEE IS AROUSED

Improvement Societies Were Given to Understand Officials Had Acquiesced.

WHEN will the much-needed new station at the Dudley street depot of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad be erected, and when will the ramshackle old structure which serves as such now be razed, are questions which are agitating the people of both Dorchester and Roxbury, thousands of whom daily patronize the railroad at this station.

Over six months ago the Railroad Commission gave a hearing to a committee of forty prominent business and professional men of the district, representing the local improvement societies and business interests, the ultimate outcome of which was to be the erection of a more modern station, to be constructed from plans which the railroad agreed to submit to a subcommittee appointed by the petitioners.

Monument to Red Tape.

The old station, inadequate and dilapidated, still remains. There are no outward signs to show that the residents are any nearer to having better station accommodations than they were six months ago, though continually those who inquire of the station agent are informed that the work was soon to be started.

The sub-committee of Dorchester residents who were to approve the plans submitted by the railroad company have had one set of blue prints submitted to them, showing the new station which the company proposed to erect. The plans did not suit the committee in some details, and were returned with improvements recommended. Since that time, several months ago, the sub-committee has had no meeting.

No new plans have been presented for their consideration and the residents are fast beginning to look upon the old station as a monument to red tape.

The work of eliminating the old grade crossing, which extended over a year and entailed the expenditure of several hundred thousands of dollars, was completed several months ago, but the new station, which it was expected would be built simultaneously and would cost several thousand dollars, has not even been started.

While the patrons await the road's pleasure they are compelled to wade through mud and slush to reach their trains. There is not enough shelter to protect all of the patrons during inclement weather.

"I am glad that the Boston American is taking this matter up," said a prominent Dudley street merchant to a Boston Sunday American reporter. "I know that since this grade crossing has been eliminated and such poor accommodations furnished for the patrons of the Dudley street station that the number of persons who use the trains has fallen off nearly 50 per cent. People simply will not take the train and submit to such accommodations, and I know that my business has been hurt through the road's failure to erect the new station and to provide for the passengers."

William H. Sayward, secretary of the Master Builders' Association; James H. McCabe, a millionaire property owner of Roxbury; Representative Herbert B. Frost, and Raymond P. Delano, a prominent real estate dealer of the district, are the subcommittee which was appointed by the Railroad Commission to confer with the railroad officials.

Springtime Hopes.

The commission agreed to act as arbitrator in any differences which might arise between the road officials and the committee, but up to date the commission has not been called upon to extend its conciliatory offices in settling any difficulties. The railroad authorities have the revised plans as submitted by the committee, and the people are daily querying "When will they start it?"

Raymond P. Delano, of the committee, says: "The sub-committee has not had any meeting for some months. I have been expecting the work to begin any time, but for some reason it has been delayed. I am now informed that work will begin in the Spring. The road must realize that patronage at the station has fallen off. The people take street cars rather than submit to such poor accommodations. However, if the work is not started shortly, the agitation will be resumed."

ST. JEAN BAPTISTE CONCERT PLANNED

Plans are being formulated by the members of Evangeline Council No. 220, Union of St. Jean Baptiste Amerique, for a concert and dance to be held in Armory Hall, East Boston, Friday evening, April 24.

At the last regular meeting gratifying reports of the officers were submitted and acted upon. It was proposed that a dance be held, interspersed with a concert, and the following committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangements:

John W. Sampson, chairman; Charles P. Marrell, Joseph K. McDonald, Lorenzo Parrier and Edward McDonald.

HEADS FATHERS' AND MOTHERS' CLUB

Benjamin Hunt, Jr., a prominent Dorchester resident, has been elected president of the Fathers' and Mothers' Club of the district. Mrs. C. A. Towle was elected vice-president, Mrs. G. A. Rogers, secretary, and Fred Cotterham, treasurer.

BOODLE FLOWS IN CONTEST FOR ESSEX COUNTY.

Unlimited Cash Greets Politicians in Sixth Congressional District

BATTLE ON FOR DELEGATES

Congressman Gardner and Shoe Machinery Trust Head Wage Bitter War.

THAT barrels of political money are to be spent in the Sixth Congressional District and this time without such a thing as the rude hindrance of fear of the law—is the cheering promise held out to Republicans of the five cities and twenty-one towns in Essex county that Congressman Augustus P. Gardner, son-in-law of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, represents in Congress.

That the influence of something more potent in politics than reason and argument is being already resorted to, and that there is the prospect of plenty more of this kind of "influence" before the canvass of March 31 is the news sweet to the ears of the political workers of the Sixth District who look upon the coming of Republican [illegible] struggles as the strained [illegible] afar looks for a check from home.

"Beer, Boodle and Barrels"

Six years ago when Congressman Gardner and [illegible] contested for the [illegible] of a Sixth District Congressional [illegible] money was a power [illegible]

[illegible] essayed to [illegible] president of the [illegible] and near towns, money again was plenty used.

The [illegible] now on for State and district delegates [illegible] is beginning [illegible]

[illegible] are before the voters of every city and town in the district [illegible] burdened [illegible] whether [illegible] Hoyt of [illegible] United States [illegible] of Congress [illegible] on June [illegible]

It is [illegible] control brought [illegible] district [illegible] to be the [illegible] manager.

[illegible] "Gussie" Gardner [illegible] President Winslow of the United Shoe Machinery Company [illegible] "take a dive" [illegible]

And when the Shoe Machinery president secured [illegible] of the most popular Republicans of Essex county on a [illegible] Taft ticket with [illegible] self Congressman Gardner [illegible] was [illegible] busy doings. And the [illegible] doings are [illegible]

The Sixth Congressional District is made up of the cities of Beverly, Gloucester, Haverhill, Newburyport, [illegible] Salem and twenty-one [illegible] towns. It has a larger voting population than any of the Boston districts and in it, besides the cities and towns, the ultra fashionable resorts along the North Shore.

Congressman Gardner is on the ground himself, and yesterday was joined by his private secretary, W. W. Lufkin, who had been hurriedly summoned from Washington.

"Money? Bless You; No!"

"We will not spend a cent of money," said Secretary Lufkin soon after his arrival yesterday in Salem. For Salem is headquarters of both camps. "The other side may be doing it and may keep it up but not a dollar will be spent by the Taft supporters."

President Winslow of the Shoe Machinery Company is [illegible] The Taft supporters make the charge against him that he has not even voted for six years, but [illegible] factor in politics if possible and is getting [illegible] such a [illegible] politician as Congressman Gardner.

Office holders in cities and towns of the district are [illegible] Taft delegates but [illegible] for Winslow and [illegible]

In Salem the Taft [illegible] are looked out for by an organization headed by Representative William T. Jeffrey as president and Ernest [illegible] as secretary.

The more regular organization with the political workers is that conducted under the eye of President Winslow [illegible] Charles Odell, real estate [illegible] P. A. McSweeney, [illegible] they [illegible] after [illegible] offices are [illegible] supporters of the "unpledged" [illegible] all over the county.

Very convincing at times it seems, for note John H. Dow of Danvers. His ele[illegible]cent speech [illegible] Senator Greeley [illegible] vote against [illegible]

WILL BRING SUIT TO STOP MERGER

Hampden County Traffic Association Contemplates Legal Action.

Springfield, March 21.—Incensed by the report of the State Commission on Commerce and Industry favoring the merger of the Boston & Maine and the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroads, the Hampden County Traffic Association contemplates legal action to prevent it if possible.

At a meeting of the association, [illegible] April 6, [illegible] to investigate into the [illegible]

Report Biased"

[illegible] association [illegible] to [illegible] to secure fair deal [illegible] roads and express [illegible] of the large manufac[illegible] with [illegible] in this city and [illegible]

[illegible] intention of the Hampden County Traffic Association to [illegible] Mr. [illegible] said to a reporter [illegible] Sunday American tonight [illegible] the New Haven [illegible] Boston & Maine roads from entering [illegible] will be detrimental [illegible] damage to [illegible] of the association. The [illegible] under the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

We [illegible] that the committee of investigation has not presented a fair and [illegible] report to the Legislature of the existing conditions. Messrs. Joseph B. Warner and George G. Crocker of that committee are stockholders in the New Haven road and Mr. Charles T. Adams, 2d, is the trustee for several stockholders. Under these circumstances we shall present to the courts that the committee could not represent the best interests of the public.

In Earnest Fight.

"Mr. James Crosier and Mr. William L. Douglas who were on the committee, were opposed to the merger but were in the minority. We shall base our suit on the unfairness of this report and ask the court to restrain the railroad companies from entering into such a merger.

"Just what method of procedure will be adopted we cannot say until after the meeting. The Hampden County Traffic Association has entered into the fight against the merger in earnest, and is not in the least frightened by the biased report submitted to the Legislature this week."

JEWELLED RELIC OF HORROR

Pottstown, Pa., March 21.—While Henry Moyer of Engelsville and Dr. Thomas J. B. Rhoads, owner of Boyertown's burned opera house, were passing the ruins they noticed sticking from a pile of debris a bone, which on examination proved to be an entire human hand, ornamented with a gold ring and a diamond set bracelet.

POLICE WILL STOP BERKMAN MEETING

Noted Anarchist Will Not Be Permitted to Speak Tomorrow Night

PHOENIX HALL [illegible]RED

Man Who Shot [illegible] Says Government Breeds Violence and Cr[illegible]

[illegible] Captain Lawrence [illegible] of the [illegible] street station said [illegible] that Alexander Berkman, [illegible] arrived in Boston yesterday, would not be allowed to [illegible] at No. 724 Washington [illegible] evening.

A short time previous [illegible] Berkman himself in an interview at the home of a friend on [illegible] said to a reporter:

"In Worcester they prevented me from speaking, but I do not [illegible] to encounter any such opposition [illegible] B[illegible]

Police W... Stop Him

The "opposition" [illegible] however, in the flat declaration [illegible] that Berkman shall [illegible] speak in public even if it takes a squad of police to stop him.

Berkman is the man who shot and wounded H. C. Frick, the [illegible] steel magnate, in Frick's office [illegible] years ago and was given fourteen years in State prison for the crime.

The Boston admirers of [illegible] the so-called "reds," had planned a public meeting at Phoenix Hall, No. [illegible]4 Washington street, where Berkman was to expound his anarchistic doctrines. [illegible] was engaged for a workingmen's meeting. But this meeting has not saved [illegible] for [illegible]

The anarchist, Berkman, will not be permitted to talk in Phoenix Hall next Monday night. John [illegible] of the Mayor's office [illegible] understand that Berkman has not applied for a license [illegible] that the hall has been [illegible] at night for a workingmen's meeting. But Berkman will not be allowed to speak here any more than he was allowed to in Worcester. I will send a squad of police [illegible] there if necessary.

Berkman is also scheduled to speak in Lynn [illegible] if the authorities of [illegible] do not interfere.

"Roosevelt a Dangerous Man"

Berkman arrived in Boston yesterday. His allusion to his opposition in Worcester refers to his being prevented [illegible] from holding a meeting. [illegible] sensational arrest of [illegible] of Worcester [illegible] and the fining of [illegible] the next day for disturbing the peace [illegible] Worcester that [illegible]

In [illegible] yesterday Berkman [illegible]

[illegible]

My impression of Massachusetts [illegible] situation. Massachusetts is a good field for our [illegible] are fast approaching the time when [illegible] realize that anarchism does [illegible] mean violence and murder [illegible] of [illegible] order [illegible] against and opposed to the present disorder with government.

Free Speech Is Suppressed

It is foolish to blame anarchy for the murder of Father Leo Heinrichs at Denver for it has never yet been shown that the man who took his life was a follower of [illegible] cause. It is foolish to [illegible] the results which naturally [illegible] from the oppression and exploitation of [illegible] Anarchists neither justify nor condemn such action. We do not judge [illegible] but rather prefer to understand and expound the situation with the [illegible] view that society may learn the [illegible] cause of social misery which [illegible] directly [illegible] for all crime.

The suppression in that city and all other [illegible] tend to make for us more comrades than we could possibly have added to our forces if the speeches had been allowed.

"[illegible] shooting by Chief of Police Shippy of Chicago of a man who it was announced was [illegible] at best was nothing short of cold-blooded murder, and the affair has been advertised far and wide for the purpose of suppressing free speech and terrify[illegible]

Police the Real Disturbers.

I have never known of a disturbance at an anarchist meeting except when the police were there and it is they who make all the trouble and raise the disturbances. The police of every city know well that there is no danger in an anarchist meeting but [illegible] want to impress the people with [illegible] the alleged fact that anarchists are dangerous.

"Anarchists are dangerous to the social conditions, but [illegible] dangerous to [illegible] governmental violence [illegible] is the very essence of violence.

SCHOOL STUDIES TOO HARD, SAYS DOCTOR

Dr. George T. Tuttle, in his lecture on mental hygiene, delivered last evening at the Harvard Medical School, condemned the tendency of increasing the studies of [illegible] children. Dr. Tuttle said that many of the [illegible] that appeared in later life were caused by the nervous strain of [illegible] school requirements. He advocated the extension of the nurse system in the public schools.

No Profit Piano Sale!

We will say of the lot of Pianos put on sale this week only this—It is a fine collection of new and second-hand Pianos of the best-known makers, there is not a poor piano in the lot—When we tell you that many piano dealers buy their own makes from us when they can and resell them at so-called bargains in their stores at an advanced price you can imagine what a splendid bargain you will get if you come up here early in the week—Every piano tuned by our own expert and put into the finest condition before shipping to you. Free delivery anywhere in unmarked wagons.

$5 Down—$1 a Week The gilded piano stores, with their costly appointments, their high-salaried sales agents, their sellers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer to go. Take the trouble to look around a little, go up where the rents are not so high and buy your piano right.

MONEY TO LOAN.

Set solid, 13½c. per line; displayed, 20c. per line.

Half Per Cent a Month

is all the interest we charge—absolutely the lowest rate charged on Furniture or Piano Loans by any money-lender anywhere. If you must borrow money, your American common sense will bring you here. When you get money from us $10 costs 5c. a month; $25 costs 12½c. a month; $50 costs 25c. a month. A $50 accommodation, repaid $1 a week, will cost you $1.50 for the year, absolutely nothing more for anything, if you keep your agreement. If you don't keep it, the cost will be more—but even then, far, far less, than if you borrow money from the high price money-lenders, and it cannot, under any circumstances, cost you any more than if you borrow elsewhere at legal rates. We loan on Furniture or Pianos. We charge only half per cent a month interest. All others charge two to forty times as much interest or discount. We charge nothing for "expense." All others charge $2, $3, $5 or $10 for "expense." Four private offices, insuring privacy. Our customers make all payments at a bank—saving embarrassment of going to a Loan Office weekly. We serve more customers and serve worthy borrowers far better, than any other money-lender in Massachusetts. May we serve you? Hours: 8.30 A. M. to 6.30 P. M. Wed. and Sat. till Nine P. M. BANKERS LOAN COMPANY, 15 Court Sq., Boston. 44 Front St., Worcester.

Do You Want Money

IN 5 MINUTES after identification? I loan corporation employes any amount from $10.00 up. This office has been making salary loans for 21 years, the oldest in Boston. Do not attempt to start an account with me unless you are in a financial position to meet your note when due.

THE MAN BEHIND THE WHEEL

—FROM—

THE BOY BEHIND THE PLOW
THE CLERK BEHIND THE COUNTER
THE MECHANIC BEHIND THE BENCH

From Almost Starvation Wages to a Large Weekly Income.

Are you going to spend another year in the same old rut? Or will you let us show you how you can better yourself? The demand for experienced men in all branches of the automobile business exceeds the supply. Salaries from $25 to $50 a week. Our students receive mechanical lectures, shop and repair work and road driving lessons on large touring cars. Our graduates are in demand for positions in all parts of the world. We give you a complete course thorough, every detail for $25. Classes day and evenings. We start with the general rudiments and teach every part. You are capable to operate any automobile in the world when you graduate from our school, and ready to take a position.

We are the only school incorporated under the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and are the originators and leaders in this business.

We have placed a great many men in good paying positions. We are the only school in New England that teaches on 4 and 6-cylinder cars—all makes. Our new 1908 6-cylinder touring car is the talk of automobilists all over New England; call and see it. Our references, any bank or newspaper in Boston or any reliable automobile agent or garage, and hundreds of graduates in good positions.

If you are thinking of making a change or are dissatisfied with your present position, begin at once; write us today, enclosing 2-cent stamp, and we will send you our beautiful 1908 catalog free. One instructor does nothing but attend to our employment dept. Use of this is free to our students or car owners looking for competent men. Write us today. Don't put this off. Give it your immediate attention. Now is the best time to begin.

J. F. Lane, Manager Boston Auto School.

Dear Sir—I want to thank you for the position you got for me driving the large Packard touring car. I appreciate your kindness, and also the kindness of the instructors of the Boston Auto School, of which I am a graduate, and if it ever comes my way to be able to speak a good word for you and the School, you can rest assured that I shall be glad to do so.

Again thanking you for the interest taken in me, and also the assistance you gave me in securing a good position, I remain,

Yours truly,
GEORGE L. COOK,
86 Pembroke St., Boston, Mass.

P. S.—Refer anybody that wants to know about the Boston Auto School to me.—G. L. C.

Boston Auto School, Boston:
Mr. Barry, Treas.

Dear Sir—The position you got for me is permanent, and as I have now had my job three years, I thank you kindly for the interest you have taken in me. I am more than pleased with the "Rainier" car that I am driving. Last Summer I drove the car over 14,000 miles, and I do all my own repair work. The doctor is more than pleased with the way I handle his car. Use this letter as you wish and refer any one you wish to me. Yours truly,

ERNEST SWEED,
210 Pleasant St., Boston, Mass.

Boston Auto School:

My Dear Mr. Barry—Now that I have completed the course in your school and satisfactorily passed my examination before the Massachusetts Highway Commissioners, and received my license, I want to thank you and the instructors of the Boston Auto School, Professors Burke, Howard and Babbitt, for the interest taken in me while I was a student there. I was only able to spare time to attend the evening sessions, and in five weeks your course fitted me to drive and repair automobiles in good shape and take out a license. As you already know, I have a good position here in Boston, which I secured as soon as I graduated from your school.

Yours very truly,
LOUIS D. FRIESZ,
No. 37 Gates St., South Boston, Mass.

HOLIHAN BROTHERS
NEW ENGLAND'S BIGGEST MAIL ORDER HOUSE
STRICTLY 10 DAYS

Best Imported Brandy

Last week we announced for the first time that we had received an importation of the famous J. DEVERNEY & CO. BRANDY, Cognac, France. Bottled by H. Dyke Gautier & Fils. The demand showed us to expect an enthusiastic call for this splendid, fine medicinal liquor. We cannot recommend this brandy too highly. It's the best there is.

$1.25 Per Bottle

Banquet Rye

Banquet Rye is an old-fashioned Rye Whiskey, "as smooth as a smelt." THE PRICE INDICATES THAT THE CHARACTER IS VERY HIGH. A certain proportion of our trade insists on having it in preference to everything else. It has come to be known as the "gentleman's Whiskey" of New England.

Boston American's Course of Lessons FOR SALESPEOPLE

We Print Here the Weekly Review and Questions

Lessons Appear Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays

Review of Important Points in Last Week's Lessons

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

Lesson Ten. Every customer is a lesson—study them as such and you will find yourself progressing in salesmanship.

A customer who is difficult to sell is training you can use to advantage the next time.

Lesson Eleven. Watch the methods of the successful salespeople about you.

Instead of being jealous of clerks who seem to have the knack of selling more goods than you it is wiser to emulate them.

Meet the customer's ideas and try to suggest merchandise with a view of finding out just what they want.

Lesson Twelve. Be posted on the merchandise you are selling. Do not be afraid to ask questions regarding it of those above you.

The interest displayed in asking questions about goods you are selling will be appreciated by your manager or proprietor.

Do not be a negative clerk. The kind who never knows when asked even simple questions never makes progress and his or her salesbook suffers in consequence.

QUESTIONS TO ASK YOURSELF

Have I been caught lately in not knowing about some perfectly natural question regarding my stock?

Do I consider difficult customers as a nuisance or am I getting good ideas for future use from them?

Am I letting jealousy of more successful clerks blind me from watching their methods and following their good points?

Have I taken as much pains as I might to find out just what my customers want?

When a question is asked about something in my stock that I do not know, have I found out about it from someone who does know?

Am I showing my employer or manager that I am interested in my work?

Interview With

MR. WILLIAM J. JARDINE.

Vice-President Gilchrist Co.

Mr. Wm. J. Jardine, vice-president of the Gilchrist Co., in a talk with a representative of the BOSTON AMERICAN, gave the following most important message to his clerks and clerks in all other stores.

Mr. Jardine rose from behind the counter to his present position among the representative merchants of this city, and can see things from the clerk's point of view as well as the proprietor's; giving his words double weight:

"If the clerks would only realize that the house does the advertising outside," Mr. Jardine said, "but the clerks must do the advertising inside, much better results would be accomplished.

"By this I mean that the house spends large sums of money in putting before the public the advertisements of the store. The house brings the prospective customer to the doors of the store or to a certain counter. After that the clerk must do some advertising.

PROMOTION MAY HINGE ON THIS.

"The clerks should, in the first place, know what is advertised in their own sections. They should be familiar with what has been advertised on their own floor and on other floors, so that if a customer inquires they can be intelligently advised about advertised goods.

"Nothing impresses a customer more favorably than an alert knowledge of what the house is advertising on that day. It gives them faith in the advertisements and it helps the clerks, because he or she is getting the reputation of being bright enough to keep in touch with the store's ads.

"In most stores the advertisements are bulletined in prominent places. These are for clerks as well as customers. In addition to this, clippings of the ads. are usually sent to the various departments, and should be noted carefully. If a clerk watches this important detail and shows interest in the real life of the store, promotion will be rapid.

DO NOT SHOW INDIFFERENCE.

"Right here in closing," said Mr. Jardine, "I would like to say a word regarding the attitude of clerks toward customers, whether they come in in response to an ad. or not. No clerk who expected to keep his position would actually refuse to show goods asked for by a customer. But it is not necessary for a clerk to refuse. He or she can do just as badly by the manner in which they act when showing them. Customers often will not buy from a clerk who presents goods in an indifferent, don't-care-a-rap manner. Clerks who act this way are NOT on the road to promotion, because sooner or later such treatment of customers will be noticed by those above them."

Three Points of Salesmanship

By Mr. S. A. MacDonnell

I am pleased to see the American taking up the subject of salesmanship, one of the most important factors to the successful management of a progressive retail business. I wish to speak of three of what I consider the most important qualifications for the success of a salesman or saleswoman, namely promptness, attentiveness and truthfulness.

Promptness—I know of nothing more annoying to an employer than to see clerks coming in late in the morning. It starts the day wrong. We have to "put our house in order" for the day, and we depend on our clerks to each attend to their respective duties, and when a few fail to report on time it makes more work for the others, and in some cases the work is left undone. I wish salespeople could realize that when they agree to go to work for a concern that they should at least get to their place of business in good season. It is part of their agreement, and they should be willing to keep their part of the compact. In my twenty years' experience I find the clerk who makes an effort to "get to work" on time usually succeeds; in other words, "where there's a will there's a way."

Attentiveness—Take the saleswomen when she does get to her counter. Notice how many who actually "hate to begin." Some there are who don't seem to care whehther "school keeps" or not. They simply want to talk, particularly when they want to relate the happenings of the night before. They forget that a place of business is not a reception room or a society meeting. How much better it would be if the clerks went about their business at once, attend to the fixing of their stock, clean house and prepare for the customer who will come later.

I venture the opinion there isn't an employer of labor who wouldn't be perfectly willing to have their clerks "talk it over," provided their morning's work was finished. "Be up and doing" first, then the duties of the day come easy.

Truthfulness—Speaking about our own business in particular, the one thing above all others that disturbs us the most is the matter of misrepresentations of one nature or another. Why should a saleswoman say a waist is "all pure linen" when as a matter of fact the greater part is cotton? Why shall a clerk say an article is "marked down" when it is not?

The day of untruthfulness in selling goods has gone to a greater extent than business people get credit for. If an article is all wool say so. If it isn't say so. By doing this you gain for your employer the confidence of your customers, which is one of the greatest assets a business house can desire.

As an educational feature that is intensely practical, and which gains the commendation of every thinking salesperson and every progressive merchant, this course of lessons stands unique.

It is the first time a newspaper has ever given its attention to the aiding of the salespeople in a better understanding of their work and presenting ideas that mean advancement.

THOSE SEEKING POSITIONS.

The stores are now putting on their larger sales forces for the Spring season. Students of the American's Course for Salespeople who are looking for employment should watch the classified advertisements of this paper, under the head situations wanted, and when applying mention the fact that they are following the American's lessons.

PREVIOUS LESSONS CAN BE HAD.

Back numbers of the Sunday American, containing previous reviews, can still be had at our offices, either 80 Summer street or 264 Washington street.

CUT OUT THE "LESSONS"

Every Sunday we print a review and self-examination of the lessons which appear during the week. A good plan is to clip the lessons and reviews out and paste them in a scrapbook. You will then have a manual on salesmanship that you could not buy for a good many dollars. It may be worth hundreds to you in increased salary.

News of the Stores

At R. H. WHITE CO.'S the head of the ecclesiastical bureau, Miss Fannie M. Kelly, has been confined to her room in the Gray Nun Convent for several weeks past with a severe illness. The doctors in attendance fear an operation will be necessary.

During Miss Kelly's absence from the ecclesiastical bureau Miss Lucy Harrington is looking after her interests.

In the misses' department, second floor, of the White store, near the marble stairway, have just been finished two large rooms, for the first fitting of garments, whence the customers will be shown to the new fitting department on the fourth floor, recently completed.

The friends of Mr. John Porter, floor superintendent at R. H. White Co.'s, are glad to see him back at his duties after an illness which at one time promised serious results.

Mr. Alexander McMurty, floor superintendent at White's, has also returned to work after a two months' absence on account of illness.

Mr. Ichabod L. Bonnell has returned to the oriental rug department at White's after an absence of several years.

The R. H. White Co. are to hold this entire week a novel exhibit of men's clothing, showing the manufacture from the lamb to the wearer. This is to be held in the clothing department, second floor, South Annex.

The hair goods department at White's has now taken the whole western side of the balcony, the space formerly occupied by C. F. Woodard, druggist.

At the end of the fur season the extensive space occupied by this department in the White store will be used for the showing of exclusive lingerie gowns and evening dresses.

At MacDONNELL'S, under Tremont Temple, preparations have been under way for some time for this week, their twentieth anniversary, and the many friends of this store are extending their best wishes for continued prosperity.

Miss Helen Charak, one of the popular mail order clerks at MacDonnell's, is receiving the congratulations of her many friends upon her engagement, which was recently announced. Last Sunday she received a large number of friends and associates at her home.

Arthur Gragain has been promoted to the position occupied by Charles Shea, who has left MacDonnell's to enter the wholesale business.

Miss Julia Woodsworth has returned to the MacDonnell shirtwaist department after her recent illness.

The black petticoat department at MacDonnell's has been remodelled to better accommodate business.

Miss Nellie Walsh of the MacDonnell neckwear department has returned after a short, but pleasant vacation.

GILCHRIST CO.'S Benefit Association was organized six years ago with a membership of twenty employes and the sum of $5 in its treasury. A recent report shows a membership of about 400 and $1,000 in the treasury.

During the past year the association has paid out an average of $100 a month in relief funds and besides the free services of a doctor, who visits the store. Members who are sick and have no one to care for them are furnished with a nurse.

This association is one of the pioneers in the country, and the officers and members are all very enthusiastic in the work.

Miss Mollie Feather, the young lady in charge of the custom made skirt department at Gilchrist Co., enjoyed a very nice visit last Saturday and Sunday with friends at Brant Rock.

Just after the store closed last Monday evening Mr. H. F. Gooch, the retiring floor manager from the glove section, was called from his department to another section of the store, where in a few well chosen words Mr. A. W. Phinney, the superintendent, in behalf of the many friends of Mr. Gooch, presented him with a pigskin traveling bag. It is needless to say that he was taken by surprise, for it took him several minutes to recover; then he thanked all for their thoughtfulness and said that he felt sorry to leave a store where there was a friendly feeling between all.

There is another wedding that will soon take place and this time it is in Quincy. The parties concerned are Miss Belle Eagan and Mr. Thomas Pendergast. The young lady is in the glove department of the Gilchrist Co., and her popularity is marked by the way congratulations have been coming in. The wedding will take place in the early Summer.

At the SHEPARD NORWELL store all are talking about the minstrel show. George Warren Shepard of Shepard Norwell Company will hold this annual event, known as "Shepard's Black Warblers," Thursday evening, March 26, at Chickering Hall.

Among the employes of the store who will take part are H. A. Cook, buyer of cotton underwear, also misses' and children's departments; Winthrop E. Ferguson, shoe department; Edward A. McAuley, floor manager, and George W. Shepard, who will form the Shepard Norwell Quartet; Dean Wilton, soda fountain; Charles H. Crowther, floor manager, and Julius Glass, wholesale department. Charles Jennings, formerly of the wholesale department, will also take part.

BEAUTY SHOWN IN SPRING MODES

Meyer, Jonasson & Co. Display All Latest Spring Styles This Week

At this season of the year every woman is interested in the fashions that are to be worn and to many it will be welcome news to read that Meyer Jonasson & Co., the well known manufacturers at the corner of Tremont and Boylston street, are announcing the opening of their Spring styles Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

This season's showing is even more elaborate than any previous season. The lingerie waists are the daintiest models made of the sheerest batistes and fine lawns with row and rows of beautiful filet laces and combination of tiny beadings. A great deal of heavy work is also used in thes beautiful little waists, showing the new coronation braid and cross stitching fo heavy thread work, fine French tucking and Madeira work.

The dainty batistes with colored trimmings, in all the delicate pastel shades, make just the most effective waists for evening wear. There are several different styles of beautiful waists, including the all-over filit "Merry Widow" and colored jabot waist, to be seen.

The new dresses are beautiful models in black lace and net, colored messalines, taffetas and soft silks, and also a full line of fine checks and plaids, showing the newest empire effect and long musquetaire sleeves, and trimmed with beautiful laces and nets, dyed to match the gown.

New shades of rose and mulberry and nathier blue are to be seen in this beautiful display, in sfoft crepe de chine and taffetas, suitable for party or street wear.

In the suit department they have a beautiful line of rajah and pongee suits in different colorings and variety of handsome street suits, elaborately trimmed with imported braids and showing the new piece sleeve effect.

They also are displaying loose and tightening coats of rajah pongee and tussah and pretty evening wraps, made in cape effect with hood and tassel trimming, and a full line of long and hip length coats in lace and taffeta.

A great variety of black voile skirts, with and without silk drop, and trimmed with graduated bands of taffeta in flared, gored and pleated model are also shown.

These will be assisted by such well-known entertainers as "Chick" Fox, E. Stanley Nichols, "Joe" Rothe, Henry Nurenberg, "Dan" Haley, Charles Hassett and W. L. Mercer, Jr. The Commonwealth Quartet, which is composed of W. C. Money, Otto E. Lewis, tenors, A. H. Carpenter and W. H. Corliss, bassos, will also render several selections.

Mr. John B. Dolan, superintendent of delivery at Shepard Norwell's, reported a very enjoyable trip to Hingham last Saturday, on returning to his duties Monday morning, having paid a visit to an old schoolmate, Mr. Charles A. Taylor, at his restful farm.

Mr. James V. Duffy of the contract department represented Shepard Norwell Company at the Luncheon Club dinner last Wednesday evening at Hotel Somerset.

At the JAMES A. HOUSTON COMPANY it is said there has been a marked improvement in regard to the punctuality of the employes. Mr. Chase, superintendent, believes he can show a better record for the last month than any of the other large stores and feels that the employes should be congratulated upon their regularity in attendance.

Mr. P. B. Magrane, president of the James A. Houston Company, accompanied by Mrs. Magrane, is enjoying an extended trip through the South.

Mr. W. H. Putnam, advertising manager of the James A. Houston Company, is entertaining his brother, Mr. C. W. Putnam of Springfield, formerly superintendent of the Knox Automobile factory.

Miss Jean Goldsmith has assumed charge of the two-piece dresses and house gown departments at Houston's—a fitting reward in recognition of her faithful service in the past.

Miss Bernice Harris, head of the mail order department of the James A. Houston Company, has resumed her vocal studies. Miss Harris is possessed of a very fine contralto voice, and a very bright future is looked for by critical observers. Her voice is of great brilliancy and wide range.

Dr. John H. Blodgett, throat and nose specialist, has kindly made arrangements to be at the James A. Houston Company store every Tuesday between 12 and 1.

"The Feet and the Shoes We Wear" will be the subject of the talk which Dr. Crandon will deliver next Thursday evening, immediately after the store closes, to the employes of the James A. Houston Company. Dr. Crandon is to be found in the James A. Houston Company store between 12 and 1 every Thursday.

Miss Irma Crandall of the office force of the James A. Houston Company has been confined to her home for a few weeks with measles.

Mr. Horatio Peak, who so successfully produced the Musical Comedy and Minstrel Show of the James A. Houston Company employes, has been presented with a meerschaum pipe by those taking part in the comedy.

Miss A. F. Hickey of the James A. Houston Company has been appointed buyer of the corset department.

Many letters of sympathy have been received by Miss Helen Murphy, buyer of the muslin underwear and petticoats of the Houston store, on the death of her sister.

The employes of the James A. Houston Company wish to express their deepest sympathy for Miss Anna T. Paine, telephone operator, on the death of her brother, one of the employes of the Boston American.

Miss Gladys Richardson of the office force is spending the week end in New York.

At HENRY SIEGEL CO.'S Mr. E. H. Pershing, advertising manager, is enjoying a week's vacation at his old home in Muncie, Ind.

Mr. Joseph Wilson, secretary of Henry Siegel Co., returned yesterday after a three days' trip to see his son at Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H., where he is studying.

Mr. Harry Hollander, buyer of the kitchen furnishing department at Henry Siegel Co.'s, says that he can beat any man at playing pinochle, and challenges any buyer in Boston to play with him at any time.

Mr. Charles Hanley, rug buyer at Henry Siegel Co.'s, also gives out notice that he will challenge any buyer to play a golf match, claiming the championship among the buyers.

A new section has been added to the sporting goods department at Henry Siegel Co.'s for launches, canoes and rowboats. This section is attracting much attention on account of its newness and arrangement.

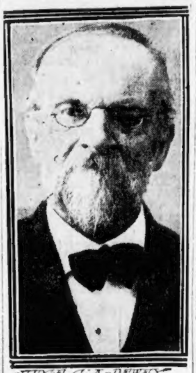
The new vocal and instrumental hits are being played every day in the restaurant at Henry Siegel Co.'s by the Lenna Howe Orchestra, now in its fifth week. These hits are proving very popular, as is shown by interest displayed by the patrons in the beautiful dining room.

The large round "buyers' table" in the Henry Siegel Co.'s fifth floor dining room is becoming more and more the rendezvous for department managers, where surprising stories of wonderful feats of fishing, hunting, bowling, golf and pinochle are freely discussed with more or less modesty.

HAS AN IDEA THAT HE IS ELECTRIFIED

Sharon, Pa., March 21.—Robert Jamison of this city has been adjudged insane by physicians and removed to the Mercer Asylum. Jamison thinks he is electrified. He claims his neighbors charged air waves with electricity and sent them into his house, causing his heart to stop.

JUSTICE FOR NEARLY HALF CENTURY, NOTED BARRISTER FACES DEATH



JUDGE C. A. DEWEY

BAY STATE OLDEST JUDGE NEAR DEATH

Charles A. Dewey, Stricken a Week Ago, Was Appointed by Governor Andrews.

Milford, March 21.—Judge Charles A. Dewey, who for years has enjoyed the distinction of being the oldest judge sitting on the Massachusetts bench, is dying at his home on Chestnut street.

Until a week ago, when he was stricken, Judge Dewey has enjoyed good health. On January 4 last he celebrated his seventy-seventh birthday.

Judge Dewey's father was Judge Charles A. Dewey, and he is a grandson of Judge Charles A. Dewey of the Superior Bench. He is a brother of Judge Francis Dewey of the Worcester County Superior Court.

Judge Dewey was born in Northampton, December 29, 1830. He practiced law in New York, where he was first admitted to the bar, and later in Davenport, Ia.

He returned to Massachusetts in 1860 and, after taking a special course at Harvard Law School, he entered a partnership with his brother in Worcester.

On July 29, 1861, he was appointed trial justice by the famous War Governor John A. Andrews. After serving three years in that capacity he was appointed head of the Third Worcester County District Court.

INNOCENT OF CRIME, SERVES JAIL TERM

Special to the Boston American.

Springfield, March 21.—In jail for an offence he did not commit, is the fate which has befallen Clarence Burdick of this city. Burdick, on March 11, was sentenced to three months in jail for the larceny of $35 from Michael F. Clancy, a porter at Hotel Russell. It was testified at the trial that Burdick drew the money on Clancy's bank book from the Springfield Institution for Savings. Now by the arrest of John Leonard of Holyoke, it has developed that Burdick was wrongly accused. Leonard admits having drawn the money.

ACTIVITY MARKS THE WORK OF M. C. O. F.

Thirty-three new members will be admitted this week by the various courts of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters. A new court of the order will be instituted this afternoon at Amherst. Charles E. Bonning, H. C. R., will officiate, assisted by the high standing committee.

Holy Trinity Court will initiate six candidates this afternoon. To-morrow evening St. Mary Court of Randolph will initiate seven. Tuesday evening ten new members will be received by St. Finbar Court of Cambridge and ten by St. Jarlath of Amesbury.

The Knights of St. Rose have invited all Boston courts to meet at their hall, No. 17 Worcester street, next Sunday afternoon to arrange for a joint memorial service at the Church of the Immaculate Conception on Patriots' Day.

General Francis A. Walker Court of North Brookfield will celebrate its tenth anniversary next Sunday. Members of the several courts in Worcester County will attend. Edward J. Donnelly, C. R., will be the historian for the occasion.

ANNIVERSARY SALE AT MACDONNELL'S

Busy Tremont Street Store Observes Twentieth Birthday by Extraordinary Baragins.

Elaborate preparations have been made for the twentieth anniversary at MacDonnel's Tremont Temple Store. A collection of goods such as has rarely been shown has been gathered for this week, and to show the firm's appreciation for ever increasing patronage, each day this week will be signalized by extraordinary bargains.

When patrons enter this big little store they are charmed by the variety of the gloves and hosiery displayed near the entrance. After walking through the annex, the showing of belts, neckwear and veilings is equally attractive.

In MacDonnell's downstairs store the larger goods are shown, such as shirt waists, underwear and the famous No-nat and eRduce Corsets. Here the electric lighting facilities are so arranged that the effect is so much like the daylight the shopper scarcely notices the difference. Women of all sizes may be fitted, for the great firm's specialty is in extra sizes in all lines of goods. The clerks are courteous and all are interested in making this twentieth anniversary sale a memorable event.

This year MacDonnell's are giving away an attractive souvenir which will be acceptable and useful to any lady, and which will be given when asked for in any department. This special attraction at MacDonnell's is in addition to the special bargains provided.

ARMED BANDS HUNT BURGLARS IN WOODS

Seabrook, N. H., March 21.—Armed posses of police and townspeople at a late hour to-night were scouring the surrounding country for the daring burglars who last night robbed the offices of the Boston & Maine Railroad here, at Greenland, N. H., and at State Line of large sums of money.

After breaking into the depot here the robbers were frightened away by dogs and made for the woods where it is believed they are hiding.

The whole countryside is aroused and every means of escape is closely watched.
